Europe's Aid Assured U. S. In Economic World Parley

Last Barrier Is Removed as Davis Wins All Leaders' Support.

Roosevelt May Call Meeting of Nations

Trade Peace Believed to Be Real Object of Ambassador's Trip.

World Peace Moves.

European co-operation with the United States in solving world economic problems was assured by leading European statesmen.

Premier Mussolini and Reichsfuehrer Hitler invited other nations to join the Italo-German co-operative line-up to insure peace and reduce economic barriers.

Background of the recent conversations between Mussolini and leading German Nazis is outlined by Barnet Nover on Page 9.

Secretary of State Hull issued regulations under the new neutrality act designed further to insure United States isolation from the Spanish conflict. Four Congressmen joined in demanding the United States treat Germany and Italy as belligerents in the war in Spain.

Last Barrier Removed.

Last barrier to a plan for world economic co-operation, with President Roosevelt possibly leading the way in calling a conference of the powers, was removed last night with pledges from Europe's leading statesmen that they were unqualifiedly behind the proposal.

The plan, under which nations will negotiate bi-laterally or multilaterally for reduction in trade barriers and currency alignment with the ultimate goal of a complete "economic disarmament," is believed to have been the real purpose of the present trip abroad of Norman Davis, United States ambassador at large.

Doubts Dispelled.

Sent to London with the ostensible purpose of attending the international sugar conference, Davis has discussed the economic program with the statesmen of all nations gathered in the British capital, and one by one has won indorsement of the powers to the economic program designed to accomplish what the 1933 London Economic Conference failed to do.

Last doubts as to the validity of these assurances, Davis feels, have been dispelled by agreement of the 22 participating countries to sign today the international sugar conference agreement to stabilize that industry's production and marketing.

The sugar conference, which Davis described as "probably the most successful international deliberation I ever saw," is expected to become the model for future economic negotiations.

It proved, the ambassador said, that a co-operative conference can be successful.

Any forthcoming world economic treaty would be based upon the willingness of nations to make mutual concessions. That nations can make such concessions, Davis feels, is demonstrated by the sugar conference at which 22 antagonistic delegates finally made basic and individual concessions, culminating in formal agreement on production limitation.

British "Nailed Down."

Armed with this encouraging development, and with the pledges of European nations to co-operate, Davis is expected to leave at once for home to report to President Roosevelt upon the successful outcome of his mission.

The next move in the intensive negotiations for economic peace—which world leaders hope will be completed in time to halt the arms race of the nations by removing economic jealousies which lead to war—is expected to be an Anglo-American trade agreement.

Since before President Roosevelt and Walter Runciman, president of the British Board of Trade, conversed at the White House, trade talks between London and Washington have been progressing.

One of Davis' outstanding successes in his current mission has been the nailing down of British assurances that nation is willing to co-operate upon a basis of mutual concessions.

The ambassador yesterday indicated that he has found not only Britain, but every nation with whom 500 Are Presented to King George and Queen Elizabeth in Ballroom of Historic Buckingham Palace, in London.

By the Associated Press.

London, May 5.—Five hundred women, including 14 Americans, were presented to King George VI and Queen Elizabeth tonight in the first court of their reign.

Amid scenes of regal splendor and wearing scintillating gowns and jewels, the American women curtsied first before King George and then Queen Elizabeth.

The presentations were made by Mrs. Robert W. Bingham, wife of the United States ambassador.

Queen Elizabeth wore a gown of gold brocade with a scroll design, embroidered diamante, a gold cloth train with embroidered jewel-colored crystals and glittering jewels. The King was in the full-dress scarlet and gold uniform of a field marshal.

The American women made a pageant of white silver as they curtsied to the King and Queen in the white and gold ballroom of Buckingham Palace.

The Americans presented were Miss Eleanore Bowdoin, of Aiken,

Honeymoon In Austria for Duke, Wally

Washington, Baltimore, Canada May Be Part of Later Itinerary.

Edward to Resume Task of Britain's Good Will Envoy in Year.

By the Associated Press.

Monts, France, May 5.—The Duke of Windsor has won the consent of his bride-to-be to his plans for a honeymoon in Austria, with a vast, gray thirteenth century castle as headquarters.

The duke's plans for such a wedding tour, to be filled with golfing, mountain-climbing and yachting on the blue Adriatic, were made known in Austria a week ago, before his hasty departure for France, but it was not known until tonight how this would suit Wallis Warfield Simpson.

While he was still at St. Wolfgang the duke permitted his suite to announce he had rented Wasserleonburg Castle, set among the Alpine lakes of southern Austria, from his friend, Count Paul Muenster. He had taken it for the summer months and let it be known he intended to occupy it after his wedding.

No Formal Announcement.

That the future duchess had concurred in this program was disclosed by a member of the Castle de Cande household, although there was no formal announcement. The official spokesman for the couple, Herman L. Rogers, made no mention of the honeymoon in his talks with newspapermen, in accordance with the wishes of the former King of England that no announcements of plans connected with the wedding be made until after the coronation in London May 12.

Although deferring to the duke's wishes concerning the near future, Mrs. Simpson, it was disclosed, was holding out for her own preference for the United States or Canada as their permanent home.

[The Duke of Windsor will resume his world travels as the British Empire's "good will ambassador" after his marriage to Mrs. Simpson, it was said today at the Chateau de Cande, the United Press reported. After a sojourn at the "honeymoon cottage," the couple probably will visit the United States. Mrs. Simpson was described as anxious to take Edward back to the United States to be introduced among the social set of Washington and Baltimore.]

Yields to Duke's Wishes.

Meanwhile she yielded to the duke's enthusiasm for Austria's mountains and lakes, which caught his fancy during his recent exile. At Wasserleonburg there is swimming and golf and an ideal headquarters for yachting trips on the Adriatic or for climbing some of Austria's highest peaks.

The couple whiled away an idyllic afternoon at golf today, leaving the world to its guesses concerning their marriage plans.

Guarded by French and British police, the couple strolled around the Chateau de Cande's 18-hole golf course in their first full day together after a five-month separation following Edward's abdication.

Announcement of their wedding plans apparently was held in abeyance until Edward's brother, George VI, is crowned in Westminster Abbey May 12.

The Duke's opponent in the golf game was Herman L. Rogers, another chateau guest.

Mrs. Simpson walked beside the former British monarch, talking to him between shots, sometimes carrying his terrier, Snooky.

Wears Pale Blue Dres.

Wearing a pale blue summer dress and a darker blue sweater, Mrs. Simpson engaged her fiance in vivacious conversation, and Edward could be seen gesticulating frequently to drive home a point.

Ahead of the pair walked Rogers and the chatelaine of the chateau, Mrs. Charles E. Bedaux, with Detective Inspectors Storier and Atfield, two members of the French Surete Nationale, and two caddies.

One hole behind, Mrs. Rogers and Bedaux followed around the course. After nine holes everyone stopped for toast and tea before continuing.

There were reports, though unconfirmed, that the Duke and Mrs. Simpson were in mild disagreement over their future home. Some said the Duke wished to live in Austria, while the American-born woman was said to favor the land of her birth, or at least Canada.

It was learned in official quarters the surete had been instructed to provide protection for the Duke of Kent, Edward's youngest brother, on a trip into France May 18.

It seemed probable the ceremony making Mrs. Simpson the Duchess of Windsor would take place near that date.

House, WPA Balk at Plea For Economy

$2,500,000 Bill Passed; Hopkins Assails Cut in Relief Funds.

New Percentage Plan Is Offered; Heat Increases Adjournment Talk.

By Robert C. Albright.

The Gordian knot of deficit spending held firm yesterday against congressional efforts to slash it, as the House balked at a $2,500,000 savings and the WPA fought a $500,000,000 cut in relief.

New weapons were brought forth in the Senate, where Senator Kenneth McKellar, Tennessee Democrat, proposed a 10 per cent "discretionary" cut by the Budget Bureau. In the House, Representative Clifton A. Woodrum, Virginia Democrat, perfected a plan for departmental "savings accounts."

Before the House Appropriations Committee, Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress Administrator, said the proposed half-billion reduction in relief estimates would cut relief rolls by 50 per cent. He said $1,500,000,000 for relief is an "irreducible minimum."

Economy Plea Flouted.

Disregarding an economy appeal by Representative John J. Cochran, of Missouri, chairman of the House Expenditures Committee, the House passed a $2,500,000 authorization for a Federal farm-forest program by a vote of 171 to 153. A motion by Cochran to strike out the enacting clause was defeated, 173 to 159.

Vinson said the proposal has been made, but will not be considered in committee until next week. He said only $80,000,000 in authorizations, rather than $180,000,000, is involved, and said actual appropriations for the Navy will not be affected.

Hopkins told the House Appropriations Committee $1,500,000,000 is needed to keep a monthly average of 1,720,000 on relief rolls in the next fiscal year. Coupled with funds still on hand, this would give him a total of $1,800,000,000, from which allotments would be made to other emergency activities.

Should $500,000,000 be cut from the estimates, Hopkins said WPA could care for only about half as many people. It was estimated about 2,081,593 are now on relief rolls. Committee Republicans charged this figure is 200,000 in excess of what Hopkins "promised" it would be last January.

Challenges Hopkins.

One member of the committee said Hopkins declared the relief cost in England is about 11 per cent of the national income, compared with 6 per cent here. Representative John Taber (Republican), of New York, countered that if local and Federal expenditures were coupled here "we are already well into the 11 per cent figure." Taber hit at "professional reliefers." He said emergency activities cost this Government "an unnecessary $3,881,000,000" in 1937.

Today Acting Budget Director Daniel Bell and W. W. Alexander, Resettlement administrator, will appear before the committee. Resettlement is seeking $75,000,000 to $100,000,000 in additional funds for next year.

In the face of Hopkins' testimony the full $1,500,000,000 is needed, there is strong sentiment in the House Appropriations subcommittee for the proposed cut. Representative Woodrum, chairman of the sub-committee, said he still stood for the slash, but would not attempt a forecast of committee action. He did say he believed the House would stand by whatever the committee agreed to.

Asks View on Ship Canal.

Other developments:

In a letter to the Budget Director, Representative Alfred F. Beiter (Democrat), of New York, demanded the bureau's views on the proposed $197,000,000 appropriation for the Florida ship canal. Beiter said he thought it was "decently buried" last year, but it is now before the Rivers and Harbors Committee.

The committee was said to be considering an omnibus $31,000,000 rivers and harbors bill report, minus funds for the Florida ship canal.

Representative Charles D. Millard (Republican), of New York, ranking minority member of the Naval Affairs Committee, predicted abandonment of a $180,000,000 Navy construction program in the interest of economy. Millard said a delay will be recommended in construction of auxiliary ships, and reconditioning of two aircraft carriers. But Chairman Carl Vinson

200 Held in D. C. Jail Without Trial Cause Record Overcrowding

Commissioners Appoint Huff D. C. Prisons Superintendent

U. S. Parole Board Aide Given $5,600 Post; Succeeds Barnard.

Following deliberations which extended over a month and a half, the District Commissioners yesterday apointed Ray L. Huff general superintendent of D. C. penal institutions. He succeeds Capt. M. M. Barnard, retired.

Others mentioned for the position, which carries with it an annual salary of $5,600, had been Col. W. L. Peak, superintendant of Lorton Reformatory; Thomas M Rives, superintendant of District Jails, and Harold E. Donnell, superintendant of Maryland Penal Institutions

Huff, at present executive for the Federal Parole Board, was born February 8, 1895, and in 1916 received a Master of Arts degree from the University of Pittsburgh. He later did graduate work in the social sciences at the University of Alabama, Harvard University and George Washington University.

Both Peak and Rives were strong candidates for the post. Both had been indorsed by citizens associations and other civic groups. District officials, it was said yesterday, consider Huff an "ideal" compromise choice.

Donnell was almost given the post two years ago when the Board of Public Welfare recommended his appointment. The District Commissioners, however, did not appoint him after protests had been made by civic groups and leaders against the naming of anyone from outside the District.

Some Kept Nearly Year Since Arrest, Prison Books Reveal.

Officials Unable To Decrease Cases

Population at All-Time Peak During Last Eight Months.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Without indictment or trial, more than 200 prisoners are being held at the District Jail awaiting prosecution.

In several instances, nearly a year has elapsed since the prisoners were arrested, and in other cases, many months have gone by while the accused await action either by the grand jury or District courts.

These facts were revealed by jail records yesterday after the Washington Criminal Justice Association, in its recent report, stressed the importance of speedy prosecution in relation to efficient administration of justice.

Official jail records showed a total of 256 pending cases—106 awaiting grand jury action and 150 awaiting disposition by the courts. This was compared to the total jail population of 673.

Record Jail Population.

Supt. Thomas M. Rives reported that for eight successive months the daily average jail population has been the highest in the institution's history.

Overcrowded conditions were attributed principally to the large number of pending cases.

Jail authorities, it was pointed out, have no power to control the large volume of prisoners sent to the institution who remain over long periods awaiting delayed prosecution.

Jail records disclosed two prisoners have been held without trial since June, 1936.

Two others, eligible for release on bond, but unable to obtain sufficient funds, have been awaiting court action since August, 1936, records show.

Another, it was revealed, appealed for a rehearing last June, but no action has been taken.

Although facing individual charges, two of the men held without trial for nearly a year also are witnesses in another case. That case, it was learned, has been continued repeatedly in court and prosecution of the accused prisoners has been delayed until after they serve as witnesses.

Should the District Court adjourn for its usual summer recess without disposing of the many pending cases, it was pointed out, the waiting prisoners will be forced to serve additional time and the already overburdened jail problem will be increased.

Although they have not been convicted of any offense, the accused must languish behind the bars until their cases are reached on the court docket—perhaps not until the October term.

Brown to Confer.

In its first annual report, made public Tuesday, the Washington Criminal Justice Association disclosed the average length of time between arrests and court action is from seven to eight weeks. In numerous cases, the association found delays as long as eight months or more.

Speaking before the criminal justice group, James M. Hepbron, director of the Baltimore Criminal Justice Associatoin and consultant to the local organization, cited the necessity of prompt prosecution if the city is to have efficient justice.

Meanwhile, District officials—judicial, police and civic—have called for the association's report in an effort to map plans for concerted remedial action.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, said yesterday he would confer with commanding officers of his department after they have studied the report. He ordered copies of the association's document distributed to all precinct commanders and District inspectors.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, commenting on the justice report yesterday, expressed doubt that a true picture of Washington's crime situation had been presented.

Although admitting he had not read the official report, Hazen said: "Certainly a finding that but one-tenth of reported serious crimes have resulted in convictions does not show us in a favorable light. I doubt if that statement alone gives a true picture of the effectiveness of our law enforcement machinery."

"I am asking Maj. Brown to analyze the association's report, as well as his own records, and to

Supreme Court Begins Study Of Security Act

Last New Deal Decision Expected in Month; Interest Lags.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Ending the hearing of arguments on pending cases until next October, the Supreme Court yesterday took under consideration questions challenging constitutionality of the New Deal social security program, which affects 26,000,000 workers and 2,500,000 employers.

With the old-age pension and unemployment taxes levied by this legislation sharply assailed as unconstitutional imposts on industrial pay rolls, the social security act is the last New Deal measure to be subjected to the judgment of the Supreme Court. A decision is expected within a month. Incidentally, in view of the President's plan for reorganization of the Supreme Court, this may be also the last New Deal law to come before the tribunal as it now is constituted.

None of the colorful tenseness which marked presentation of arguments regarding validity of other major New Deal measures before the Supreme Court was noticeable yesterday. Indeed the section of the marble chamb reserved for members of the bar—crowded on other occasions—after the luncheon recess yesterday was partly vacant, due apparently to a lack of interest.

Questions Milder.

Nor did the justices subject counsel in the case to so many and such searching questions as on previous occasions when New Deal enactments were under fire. Most of the questions from the bench were devoted to seeking clarification of provisions of the act, although Justice Harlan F. Stone at the outset brought up the question of jurisdiction.

The Government, in an effort to obtain a speedy verdict on merits of the legislation, had waived technical objections to jurisdiction. Justice Stone's questions created the possibility the court might confine its ruling solely to procedural points—although lawyers did not believe this was probable.

The social security act was de-

Heat Cabinet Provides 'Cure' For Arthritis

42 of 43 Patients Gain From Treatment for Venereal Type.

A heating cabinet which cures complicated gonorrhea by subjecting the patient to fever up to 107 degrees—more than 8 degrees above normal—was described here yesterday at the annual scientific assembly of the District Medical Society.

In the first report on accomplishments of the cabinet since it was installed at Gallinger Hospital a year and a half ago, Dr. Henry B. Gwynn said it "cured" 42 out of 43 persons suffering from gonorrheal arthritis who received the treatment.

Other diseases treated with favorable results were syphilis, in both the early and late stages, chorea, intractable asthma, non-specific arthritis, peripheral vascular disease, toxic neuritis, arthriritis and all forms of gonococcal infection.

Patients "Like New."

Of the 43 arthritics, 27 were white and 16 colored. All but nine were males, and their ages ranged from 12 to 47 years. One of the patients had been suffering from gonorrhea "off and on" for 20 years, another continuously for eight years. The shortest period was three weeks and the average was 14 months.

Duration of the arthritis ranged from one week to five years, 24 of the 43 having been afflicted two months or less. Seven were bedfast when they began treatment and nine others were in "fair" condition.

All but two had positive smears for active gonorrhea before beginning treatment. Afterward, 42 of the 43 were negative.

"At the conclusion of treatment," Dr. Gwynn said, "all of the patients with the exception of one were ambulatory, nearly all had gained weight, pulse slowed, blood risen and all looked like new poeple."

The group received an average of four treatments each, certain individuals getting only one and others as many as 14. Only 10 took the heat course "eventually." One became exhausted in his second trip to the box, another developed tetany, another jaundice, and so on.

"Artificial fever therapy with cautious use is a safe form of

Catalan State Quells Revolt Of Anarchists

By the Associated Press.

Perpignan, France, May 5.—The government of autonomous Catalonia put down a bloody internal rebellion of Barcelona Anarchists today that cost an estimated 100 lives and threatened the Catalan coalition allied with the Madrid-Valencia regime.

Occasional shots still were heard in parts of the city, although street fighting was ended. In some streets barricades remained.

The Valencia government, highest authority for republican Spain, tonight assumed direct control over the army and police forces of Catalonia.

Anarchist forces still held the towns of Puigcerda and Belver, near the French border.

Latest reports indicated the Anarchist uprising represented a split even within Anarchist ranks, just as the Barcelona battle was a civil conflict within Spain's civil war. More modern Anarchists did not take part. Three Anarchist leaders

U. S. to Protect Harlan-Bound Mine Witnesses

By Sidney Olson.

The men and women of "bloody Harlan" headed for home last night, with the United States Government standing ready to protect its witnesses from being "taken for a ride" in possible revenge.

Chairman Robert M. La Follette, jr. (Progressive), of Wisconsin, of the Senate Civil Liberties Committee, ordered all subpenas to remain in full force, and laid down a rule that all witnesses under subpena write the committee once a week, giving their latest postoffice address.

By this device, any reprisal in Kentucky's Harlan County against the witnesses will become a Federal offense.

Even this protection, however, seemed scant last night to at least a dozen witnesses who have testified against the company deputies, the mine operators and the law officers of Harlan.

One said: "They'd plant me in a hillside before sun-up if I went back. I want some peace and quiet, Dirksen Proposes 7-Cent Street Car, Bus Fare for D. C.

A 7-cent street car and bus fare by congressional edict was proposed yesterday for the District by Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois.

Dirksen introduced a bill to amend the public utility act by fixing the fare at not above 7 cents cash with the same universal transfer privileges that existed in January.

This is the second bill relative to the Capital Transit Co. that the ranking minority member of the House District Committee has introduced this week. The first one seeks to abolish the one-man street car and bus.

Street car and bus fares are now 10 cents cash, $1.25 a week by pass, or four tokens for 30 cents: The transit company has applied for an increase in the token fare to three tokens for 35 cents.

Senators Override D. C. Board, Favor State Names for Streets

By James D. Secrest.

Congressional delegations from four States yesterday ran roughshod over the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and thereby changed a long-time policy of street naming.

Over the protests of a handful of commission representatives, a subcommittee of the Senate District Committee voted to report favorably a bill changing the designations of the recently named drives in the lower Mall development.

The hearing was called by Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina.

The controversy arose over the failure of the commission to heed the wishes of members from Maine, Missouri, Ohio and Oklahoma and name the four new Mall drives for the respective States.

Charging the commission with trying to forestall Congressional action, the Congressmen complained that the drives had been named Washington, Adams, Jefferson and Madison in honor of the first four Presidents.

Thomas S. Settle, secretary of the commission, tried vainly to explain that the commission believed the designations preferable to State names as the drives are bounded by Constitution and Independence avenues.

"These presidents are already memorialized in a thousand ways," barked Senator White (Republican), of Maine.

Arno B. Cammerer, executive officer of the commission, told the sub-committee that it had long

'Gin Marriage' Ban for Capital Approved; House Group Seeks to Raise Minimum Age

Putting on reformers' glasses, the House District Committee yesterday approved legislation designed to discourage "child marriages," "gin marriages" and "cocktail marriages."

A bill which aimed to raise the minimum ages at which young people may wed with their parents' consent was approved with an amendment which would prevent the issuance of any marriage license until three days after the filing of an application.

The age of consent would be raised from 16 to 18 for males and from 14 to 16 for females.

Members of the committee were divided in the discussion that preceded action on the bill, sponsored by Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois.

Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, suggested the age limit for girls be raised to 18.

"That would make perjurers out of young people," interjected Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma.

"Sixteen-year-old girls are often quite mature. I know a lot of fine mothers who were married at 16 and doing pretty good at it."

Chairman Mary T. Norton proposed a compromise at 17, but Schulte complained:

"Too many marriages of young people wind up in the divorce courts. They're gin weddings."

The three-day intermission between the filing of an application and the issuance of a license was proposed by Representative Jenckes (Democrat), of Indiana, the second woman member of the committee.

"That intermission would do away with many of these gin and cock-

Economy Plea Is Disregarded By House, WPA

$2,500,000 Spending Bill Passed; Hopkins Hits Slash in Relief.

of the committee said nothing had been decided.

Meanwhile, a taste of warm weather started talk of an early adjournment date in both House and Senate. Strong sentiment was developing for adjourning Congress as soon as all appropriation bills are passed and some general stroke made for economy. Administration opposition to the move was anticipated, as it was certain to involve postponement of the court program and other pending legislation.

Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), of New York, took the radio last night to "expose," he said, "the myth that the budget cannot be balanced." He said all that is needed is "proper leadership, courage and determination to do the job."

Representative Woodrum disclosed he has received offers of "co-operation" from nine large Government agencies. When the last appropriation bill has been passed, he will seek to call departmental officials back before his committee for testimony on further cuts. His plan is to bind officials voluntarily to set up "savings accounts" at the outset of the fiscal year. If this is done systematically, percentage cuts, and further action by Congress, will be unnecessary, he said.

Similar to Cannon Plan.

Meanwhile, a new proposal for percentage cuts was made in the Senate by Senator McKellar. McKellar would give the budget director authority to cut any appropriation item up to 10 per cent after a hearing. Further authority would be given the budget director, "with the approval of the President, to eliminate any appropriation in whole or in part" where a hearing shows it "unnecessary." The savings would be turned over to the Treasury, and an accounting made in the next budget message.

Some assurance was given Government employes by provision in his resolution "that the authority herein granted to the President and the Director of the Budget shall not result in the reduction in salary of persons retained in the Government service." Guarantee against cuts in personnel was not given.

The McKellar proposal is similar to the plan of Representative Clarence Cannon for 15 per cent "discretionary" reductions by the President. It has been pointed out that the President already has this authority. But the McKellar resolution goes further and provides for elimination of items, "in whole or in part." The legality of such a provision may be challenged, as it may be construed as a veto authority over individual items.

House passage of the $2,500,000 farm-forestry bill, in the face of economy appeals, came after four votes on the Cochran motion to kill the bill.

Cochran's Plea.

The bill authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to co-operate with land grant colleges and State forestry agencies for reforestation and to produce and distribute shrub planting stock.

In a futile appeal for defeat of the bill, Representative Cochran said Budget Bureau approval was given in advance of the President's economy drive, and "we are not going to balance the budget unless we stop passing bills of this character."

"I would like to know one Federal aid bill that was passed, that was ever repealed," Cochran said.

Economy Survey to Begin.

Experts on personal questions will undertake immediately a survey among all Government workers in an economy-efficiency inquiry authorized by Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, chairman of the special Senate Reorganization Committee and members of the Committee on Government Organization.

The study is financed by the appropriation of $15,000 made last week for studies in connection with the reorganization work. A similar survey has never before been made.

Sutherland Opinion in Soviet Claims Case May Give U. S. Power to Fix Wages and Hours Through International Agreements.

By Franklyn Waltman

THE Supreme Court's decision last Monday in a case growing out of efforts of the Federal Government to collect from the former private banking house of August Belmont $25,438 assigned to it by the Soviet government contained a significance generally overlooked.

WALTMAN

The opinion affirmed the right of the United States Government to recover this money, which had been assigned to it in settlement of American-Russian claims under terms of the Roosevelt-Litvinoff greement negotiated when this Government recognized the Soviet regime in November, 1933. Thus it paved the way for the Treasury to recover some $8,000,000 which the Soviets had on deposit in this country in settlement of claims.

The decision, written by Justice George Sutherland, however, contained pronouncements which in clarification of the power of the Chief Executive in the field of foreign relations went far beyond the importance of the Soviet transaction. In effect, the court held that "in respect of all international negotiations and compacts, and in respect of our foreign relations generally, State lines disappear" and that "within the field of its powers, whatever the United States rightfully undertakes, it necessarily has warrant to consummate."

These pronouncements of the high tribunal are of far more than academic interest. They may have a direct application permitting the Federal Government to undertake to regulate minimum wages, maximum hours and working conditions as a result of our association with the International Labor Organization and our participation in the drafting of conventions requiring on an international basis such standards in industry.

On April 5, the day after the World Textile Conference convened here under auspices of the International Labor Organization, the possibility that the New Deal might achieve through its treaty-making powers the consummation of its objectives in the field of labor and industry denied to it otherwise by the commerce clause and the State Rights amendment to the Constitution was pointed out in this place.

The court's decision in Missouri versus Holland, upholding as valid legislation enacted to give effect to the migratory bird treaty with Canada, after similar legislation enacted before the treaty was negotiated was struck down as encroaching on State domain, was cited as the basis for this possibility.

These observations had the effect of stirring up discussion of the points projected in a letter to the conductor of this column. Representative George H. Tinkham, a member of the House Foreign Affairs Committeee and an ardent opponent of the League of Nations and the I. L. O., undertook to combat the suggestion that the New Deal might overcome Constitutional objections to its proposals dealing with working conditions in this manner.

"There is a Supreme Court decision in relation to migratory birds which would seem to indicate that in certain cases a treaty negotiated by the United States and assented to by two-thirds of the Senate might supersede the limitations imposed upon the Congress by the Constitution in relation to rights reserved to the States," Mr. Tinkham wrote.

"Had the Senate approved a treaty providing for United States membership in the International Labor Organization, and treaties or so-called 'draft conventions' (which is the term used by the International Labor Organization) were submitted to the Senate and approved by a two-thirds vote, it might well be that the decisions of the Supreme Court in relation to rights reserved to the States, would be superseded.

"The fact is that the United States did not become a member of the International Labor Organiazzion by treaty, but by a joint resolution. Certainly, treaty action could not stem from such procedure.

"Since the United States became a member of the International Labor Organization, the organization has submitted five 'draft conventions' to the United States. Very properly, these 'draft conventions' were referred by the Department of State to both the Senate and the House of Representatives, and not to the Senate alone as in the case of treaties. Action in relation to these 'draft conventions' would have to take the form of joint resolutions or bills, and such joint resolutions or bills would be unconstitutional, as I think you will agree, inasmuch as the 'draft conventions' deal with hours of labor, etc., concerning which matters the right to legislate is reserved to the States, as has been repeatedly held by the Supreme Court."

Mr. Tinkham went on to contend that American membership in the I. L. O., at a cost of $350,000 annually, "would seem to be an expensive piece of folly or a fraud upon the American people" since this Government, as he had argued, was impotent to give force to any agreements negotiated through that agency.

Boiled down, his contention was that the rule set up by the Supreme Court in the migratory bird decision, that legislation enacted to give effect to a treaty superseded the constitutional limitation protecting the rights of the States, except in the matter of a subject specifically prohibited by the Constitution, would not apply to executive agreements or compacts not ratified by the Senate.

Before citing the specific words of the Supreme Court last Monday, it might be pointed out that last Friday Dr. Charles Cheney Hyde, professor of international law and diplomacy at Columbia University, speaking before the American Society of International Law, raised, in the abstract, a point similar to that projected by Representative Tinkham.

Dr. Hyde contended that "in acting in behalf of the Nation the President and the Senate find themselves subject to slight restraint, provided they do not attempt to agree to achieve what the Constitution obviously forbids, and subject to the further provision that the matter sought to be regulated by treaty has a definite association with the international relations of the United States."

He further asserted that "doubtless the President, uniting with Congress through legislative enactment, expressed in a joint resolution or otherwise, is enabled to go far in the field of agreement-making without violating the Constitution, and may probably go farther than the Executive has ever heretofore seen fit to proceed."

Dr. Hyde appeared, however, to entertain some doubts as to how far the Federal Government might go through the medium of executive agreements which did not receive the assent of two-thirds of the Senate. He pointed out that "it may be suggested that the authority conferred by the Constitution upon Congress to participate in the making of international agreements gains no special elasticity in scope from the fact that what is done relates to international relations, if or when the objective is one which is contemptuous of restrictions that are otherwise applicable."

Thus, he said, "the bare association with international affairs and international interests which might and probably would suffice to sustain the constitutionality of a treaty, might be quite inadequate to sustain an agreement based upon a joint resolution or other act of Congress which essayed to interfere with matters deemed by the Supreme Court to be of purely local concern to the several States of the Union."

Now for the subsequent pronouncements of the Supreme Court. The issue in the case before the court was whether a claim, based on an agreement made by the President and a foreign nation, without the ratification of the Senate, which is said to be contrary to the public policy of the State of New York is valid. The court held that "no State policy can prevail against the international compact here involved."

"Plainly," asserted Justice Sutherland for a majority of the court, "the external powers of the United States are to be exercised without regard to State laws or policies. The supremacy of a treaty in this respect has been recognized from the beginning. Mr. Madison, in the Virginia convention, said if a treaty does not supersede existing State laws, as far as they contravene its operation, the treaty would be ineffective. To counteract it by the supremacy of State laws would bring on the Union the just charge of national perfidy and involve us in war.

"And while this rule in respect of treaties is established by the express language of clause 2, Article VI, of the Constitution, the same rule would result in the case of all international compacts and agreements from the very fact that complete power over international affairs is in the national Government and is not and cannot be subject to any curtailment or interference on the part of the several States.

"In respect of all international negotiations and compacts, and in respect of our foreign relations generally, State lines disappear. As to such purposes the State of New York does not exist. Within the field of its powers, whatever the United States rightfully undertakes, it necessarily has warrant to consummate. And when judicial authority is invoked in aid of such consummation, State consitutions, State laws and State policies are irrelevant to the inquiry and decision. It is inconceivable that any of them can be interposed as an obstacle to the effective operation of a Federal constitutional power."

The pertinent phrase in that pronoucement is that the rule in respect of treaties, as confirmed there, "would result in the case of all international compacts and agreements"—in other words, the court in those words gave to "all international compacts and agreements" the same force it previously had given to treaties. Although Justices Stone, Brandeis and Cardozo, concurring in the conclusion of the Soviet claim case, dissented from the reasoning pursued, they did not specifically challenge this pronouncement.

Court Change Arguments Hit By O'Mahoney

Senator Joins in Attack on Plan, Calling Its Backers 'Naive.'

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, a member of the Judiciary Committee who was noncommittal on the President's court reorganization bill until hearings had been concluded, charged last night in his first speech against the plan that "every argument which has been advanced to sustain the bill has dissolved on the very tongues of its advocates."

"All that remains," he said, "and it is not an argument but a naive expression of hope—is the hope that by 'the infusion of new blood' a tendency would be developed in the Supreme Court toward a more liberal interpretation of the Constitution."

O'Mahoney's attack, deemed significant of a steady trend against the bill even by Senators very close to the Administration, came despite his avowal that "I have always been and still am an earnest advocate of the President's policies."

His address came after the Senate Judiciary Committee had spent another day in listening to leaders of both sides jockey for strategical position. The proposed substitute bill of Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, a compromise seeking a permanent increase of two justices in the Supreme Court, to make a membership of 11, was discussed at length.

O'Mahoney, a close friend of Postmaster General James A. Farley and intimately associated with nearly all legislative phases of the New Deal, nevertheless insisted:

"That there has been in the past an altogether unwarranted, undeniable and even vicious tendency on the part of the court to invade the legislative field, I would be the last to deny.

"That we should attempt to correct this tendency by ourselves invading the judicial field I most respectfully but emphatically deny."

Outlining the history of the court's expansions in the past, but denying such were "valid precedents for any Democratic Administration," O'Mahoney went on:

"Woodrow Wilson, in language that burns, once declared that the people would curse the Administration that would expand the court in order to affect its judgments."

TWA Plane Crash Is Blamed on Ice In Bureau Report

The Transcontinental & Western Air plane crash near Pittsburgh, Pa., on March 25, in which 13 persons were killed, was caused by "a heavy accumulation of ice on the airplane wing tips and ailerons," a Bureau of Air Commerce Accident Board reported yesterday.

The report, made in unusually short time, substantiated the company's explanation which appeared the day following the crash. Neither the accident board nor TWA placed any blame on pilots or despatchers, specifically exonerating F. L. Bohnet, the pilot, and H. E. Warwick, the co-pilot, both of whom were killed.

The board deduced that "the pilot was confronted with two conditions, one requiring an increase of speed for safety, the other requiring a decrease of speed to keep control forces within his own physical ability."

Since the accident planes are being equipped with a new type of aileron, which will prevent heavy ice formations.

Nazis Gain in Danzig.

Free City of Danzig, May 5 (AP).—The Danzig parliament today renewed for another four years the enabling act, giving extraordinary powers to the government, by a 47 to 20 vote—which revealed that Nazis now command a two-thirds majority.

Catholics Win Mexican Fight To Have Priests

Highest Court Rules Need of Population Must Be Considered.

By the Associated Press.

Mexico City, May 5.—Mexican Catholics won a major victory today in their fight for relaxation of anti-religious laws.

The supreme court invalidated a Chihuahua state law permitting only one priest to officiate in the entire state.

The decision established the important precedent that state governments must take into consideration the spiritual needs of the Catholic population in regulating either the number of officiating priests or the conditions of worship.

The court granted a permanent injunction to three Chihuahua priests, Fathers Salvador Urgana, Manuel Dioses and Jesus Ramos, against the state law passed May 15, 1936.

(The church's victory came soon after the reopening by Catholics of long-closed churches in Vera Cruz, Orizaba and other centers of anti-religious activity. The churches came into use again without official interference.)

The court's decision said:

"The decree (state law) was inspired by the necessity of repressing activities carried out by ministers of the Catholic faith; repression, which even though it was founded on political and social necessities, has no relation to the necessities referred to in * * * the constitution which provides only that legislatures of states have the faculty to determine, according to local needs, the maximum number of ministers of faiths; for such needs must be understood as related to the percentage of the Catholic population in the state."

Any unlawful activity of priests, the court added, should be repressed through laws directly governing those activities.

Canada Rail Crash Is Fatal to Several

Halifax, Nova Scotia, May 5 (Canadian Press).—A number of persons were reported killed tonight as the Halifax-bound Ocean Limited was wrecked near Springhill Junction, Cumberland County.

Meager advices said the dead included Engineer Harry Bauer, of Moncton, New Brunswick, an unidentified express messenger and several tramps.

Canadian National Railway officials declared the express plowed into a string of coal cars which coasted from a branch line onto the main track. Piled up cars caught fire immediately, they said. Passengers were thrown about but it was believed none was killed.

Nick Lucas Croons After Winning Suit

Pittsburgh, May 5 (AP).—Nick Lucas, radio's singing troubadour," crooned for a group of women admirers today a few minutes after a Federal judge dismissed a $100,000 damage suit brought against him by two Canonsburg, Pa., song writers.

Lucas wept as Judge Nelson McVicar dismissed the suit which charged the singer had violated a contract regarding publication of the ballad "When Your Road Leads My Way." He smiled and sang "Tip-Toe Through the Tulips" for a group of women, including jurors, who besieged him as he left the court room.

Cullinan's Love Letters Read To Court in Wife's Balm Suit

By the United Press.

Detroit, May 5.—Laura Strittmatter's "sweet little bruised chin" was Charles H. Cullinan's most ardent memory of the woman he wooed and married while living with his wife in Washington, D. C.

Eleven of his letters to Miss Strittmatter were read into the record today in Mrs. Hallie Cullinan's $100,000 alienation of affections suit against the 37-year-old brunette stenographer.

"I wish I could have you in my arms tonight and your chin would be bruised again," he wrote in a long letter on April 10, 1935. "I'll never forget that night—you were so beautiful and sweet."

Judge John V. Brennan sat uncomfortably for a while high on his bench, then retreated behind the covers of a law book. Blushes spread over the faces of dowagers in the courtroom, and titters broke out in waves.

Mrs. Cullinan and "the other woman" sat directly opposite at the counsel table, but neither looked up. Frank J. Cushing, one of Miss Strittmatter's attorneys, read the letters.

On April 22, after it had been agreed that he would marry Miss Strittmatter in June, Cullinan wrote ecstatically:

"How will it seem to stay in bed in the morning? Just to open your eyes and kiss Cully good-by and then go back to your sweet dreams.

"How I would love to squeeze you in my arms and bruise your sweet little chin. You'd better get it ready."

By this time, Cullinan indicated in his letters, he was convinced that Miss Strittmatter loved him "more than anything else in the world" But that was only after he had expended many pages protesting his own "heavenly love."

"I love you," one letter read, "as the hot desert loves the sun; I love you as the hot land loves the rain; I love you as the flowers love the sunshine; I love you as a hungry person loves food—so much that I would give every drop of blood in my body for you, my sacred sweet violet."

Cullinan, an employe of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, in whose Detroit offices he first met Miss Strittmatter, used several pages in one letter explaining his "marital situation."

He was married, he said, in 1914 and in 1923 his wife died giving birth to a baby girl. He remarried in 1926 and said he was divorced three years later in North Carolina.

"I gave her a $10,000 home and $10,000 in cash," he said of his divorced wife, "and let her have a new start in life."

In 1930 he went broke, he recalled, and left the "prosperous corporation," of which he had been board chairman.

"About ten months ago the woman walked in with bag and baggage," he complained, "and announced she was going to stay."

To convince Miss Strittmatter that he was not a drunkard, Cullinan said he had spent five years in a seminary, served four years as pastor of a Washington church and 11 years as dean of a Bible institute.

"And now," he warned, "you had better get a suit of armor because you are going to be hugged and loved and kissed something terrible."

Tomorrow Miss Strittmatter will complete her direct testimony, and it was expected that final arguments would follow.

Washington Youth Arrested in Riot At Boston Tech

Cambrdge, Mass., May 5 (AP).—Five Massachusetts Institute of Technology students were arrigned in district court today on charges arising from a riot last night in which police used tear gas for the second time this week to break up student demonstrations.

Roy Prince, 20, of Washington, pleaded guilty to assault and battery upon Police Sergeant Charles Hallahan, attempting to rescue a prisoner, disturbing the peace and malicious destruction of personal property. Samuel Sensiper, 18, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; Andrew P. Rebori, 20, of Chicago, and Richard Lamphier, 19, of West Rutland, Vt., pleaded innocent to similar charges. Their cases were continued for hearing May 12. Bail for each was fixed at $10.

Dean Harold E. Lobdell, of M. I. T., ordered an investigation of the rioting. Previous cases, he said, had been dealt with severely, in some instances resulting in expulsion.

Senate Will Get Bill to Rename Streets of Mall

Committee Overrides District Board, Favors Honor to Four States.

been the policy to name only avenues for the States.

Both he and Settle came equipped with maps of Washington thoroughfares and the District surveyor, Edward Dent, prepared to rename four other avenues for the States which are the only ones now unhonored in such fashion.

Representative White observed that it would be annoying to the residents of the avenues whose names might be changed.

Senator Hale (Republican), of Maine, opened the hearing by recalling that two streets in the area that is now the Mall were named for Maine and Missouri in 1826 in memory of the Missouri compromise. Ohio also had a street named for it in that section.

Brewster subsequently observed, however, that the original designations were on "very ignominious streets" and that the developments "weren't any tribute to the character of the States."

Senators Thomas, who handles the District appropriations, and Lea and a large group of Representatives headed by Nichols and Disney urged adoption of the bill. Disney is the author of the bill passed early this year by the House.

Nichols said that Oklahoma's only memorial in Washington now is a statue to the Indian chief, Sequoia.

When Cammerer suggested that a street had been named for Oklahoma "somewhere in Anacostia," Nichols barked:

"Yes, but that's under water now. It was washed away by the last flood."

Disney was very emphatic in stating that the right to name all Washington streets should lie directly in the hands of Congress rather than a municipal or Federal agency.

"Congress, of course, has the authority to override our designations," said Settle, "just as it has power to abolish our functions. But it set up the commission to do a job, and we are trying to do it without fear or favor."

Senator King, who is both chairman of the District Committee and a member of the commission, was not present at yesterday's hearing.

Other members of the sub-committee, which voted unanimously for the bill, are Senators Hitchcock (Democrat), of South Dakota, and Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire.

Dr. G. R. Minot Honored.

Atlantic City, N. J., May 5 (AP).—Dr. Gerard R. Minot, of Harvard University, was elected president of the American Association of Physicians today.

Heat Cabinet Provides 'Cure' For Gonorrhea therapy," Dr. Gwynn told the assembly, refraining from making any outright "cure" claims. "We believe that artificial fever therapy is the procedure of choice in the treatment of gonorrheal arthritis."

Practical by Ancients.

He pointed out that while heat therapy was practiced by the ancient Chinese, Romans and Greeks, its modern use dates only from 1884. The apparatus now in use at Gallinger Hospital is an air-conditioned Kettering Hypertherm, lent to the institution by Charles F. Kettering, of the General Motors Corporation.

The cabinet is divided into two compartments, one containing the mechanical devices and the other an air mattress on which the patient's body rests. Only his head remains on the outside.

Dr. Gwynn emphasized the importance of keeping the patient under constant surveillance, since nervous and physical reactions are not uncommon, though they are rarely serious.

When the person enters the chamber its temperature is 130 degrees, with a humidity of 75 per cent. The patient's temperature rises to 106 or 107 degrees in an hour or so. He perspires freely and may have periods of mild excitement.

Government "Threat."

The "gravest threat" of State medicine is the Federal Government's tendency to increase its hospital services, the delegates were told by Dr. Arthur C. Christie, a former president of the District Medical Society.

Pointing out that on June 30, 1936, the Veterans' Administration controlled over 64,000 hospital beds in 43 States and the District and citing the numerous bills pending in Congress to build more hospitals, Dr. Christie said:

"Here is state medicine in full power. Several millions of men and women in our population have now become eligible for full medical and surgical treatment at public expense. As a political plum this would seem to be a good substitute in Congress for the appropriation formerly made for 'rivers and harbors.'

"It is an excellent illustration of what happens when any aspect of medical care comes under complete Government control. Political log-rolling and tremendous expense to the taxpayer is inevitable."

He said that in 1935-36 the non-service connected disabilities constituted 90 per cent of all admissions to veterans hospitals.

The Washington radiologist also assailed the feasibility of health insurance, charging its application would be limited and that its evils would far offset its gains.

Count Tried to Steal a Kiss, Duce's Former Mistress Says

By the United Press.

Paris, May 5.—Exotic Madeleine de Fontanges, confronting Count Charles Pineton de Chambrun today for the first time since she shot him in a lover's rage, testified he tried to steal a kiss from her while she was Premier Mussolini's mistress.

His wife, the former Princess Murat, stared in amazement as the sultry-eyed beauty looked the count squarely in the eye and said:

"Oh, but we were very friendly. You even tried to kiss me behind some ruins of the old Roman countryside."

A moment before, Chambrun denied to the examining magistrate he ever was "particularly friendly" with Mme. Fontanges when she visited him in Rome—where he was the French ambassador—and implored him to obtain for her a private interview with Mussolini.

The count, a direct descendant of Lafayette, admitted Mme. Fontanges—also known as Magda la Ferriere—confessed to him in Rome she had spent "unforgettable hours" with Il Duce in a "love nest" at Venice Palace. But he denied ever having violated her confidence.

The black-haired woman of 31, erstwhile actress and journalist, testified she was Mussolini's mistress from April to August last year, but that Italy's "Iron Man" jilted her because the count warned him it was dangerous to carry on a clandestine affair with her.

"I received Mme. Fontanges for the first time in April, 1936, when she sought a newspaper interview with Il Duce," he related.

"On April 17 I saw Mussolini, and, although I cannot confirm it, I believe I spoke to him regarding Mme. Fontages. Anyhow, she was received by him three days later."

U. S. Arms Ban On Reich, Italy Urged to Hull

4 Members of Congress, in Letter, Protest Activity Against Spain.

By William V. Nessly.

While Secretary of State Hull late yesterday was issuing regulations requiring registration of persons or organizations soliciting contributions for humanitarian purposes in Spain, four Northwestern members of Congress addressed a letter to the Secretary asking application of embargo provisions in the neutrality act to Italy and Germany.

Holding Germany and Italy are "waging war against the legitimate and friendly Spanish government," the letter asked that this government "recognize what is known to the world."

The letter was sent by Representatives Jerry J. O'Connell (Democrat), of Montana; John M. Coffee (Democrat), of Washington, and Henry G. Teigan and John T. Bernard, both Farmer-Labor, of Minnesota.

Roper Warns Industry.

Simultaneously, Secretary of Commerce Roper warned industry in this country against undue plant expansions to meet the "abnormal" demand for supplies caused by huge world armament expenditures.

"Under the present world outlook," he said at a press conference, "many billions will be spent throughout the world during the next 12 months for plant expansion and armament product requirements.

"This will tend to create abnormal demand conditions that cannot last and naturally will be followed by recessions if advance precautionary methods are not used."

Registration Required.

Secretary Hull's regulations provide that persons or organizations desiring to collect funds to be used for medical aid in Spain or for food or clothing "to relieve human suffering in that country," shall register and state the means to be used in gathering funds, the purposes for which contributions are to be used and names of the persons or organizations to which the funds ultimately will be sent. The regulations also call for monthly reports on the amount of contributions received and their disposition.

Secretary Roper urged that precautionary steps against over-expansion of industry include constant research to keep businessmen informed of conditions.

"I am speaking," he said, "of studies not only in connection with neutrality laws to protect us against war, but also of the conditions that we need to safeguard against regardless of actual war activities. I do not contemplate any general European war in the near future, but I can see the dangers that can result to our people in a period of extravagant expansions for a war that will never come or for armaments that will prevent the war." * * *

Business Now Sound.

"Our American business in my opinion now is sound and there need be no important recession if due and informed caution is exercised from now on. No emergency can come to him who prepared for the emergency."

The letter from the four representatives referred to "the crime of Guernica, destruction of the Basque holy city" by "low-flying Nazi and Italian planes."

"The evidence convicting the Italian and German governments of unprecedented barbarism is overwhelming," it continued, then after calling for an official stand that those countries are participating in the war, added:

"Moreover, we believe the State Department and the President of the United States should declare that Italy and Germany come within the embargo provisions now being enforced so unfairly against the Spanish government."

The letter declared the destruction of Guernica had "focused the world's attention upon the heroic Spanish people who are defending their homes and democratic institutions against Franco, Mussolini and Hitler."

"The world knows," it stated, "that Italy and Germany are waging a merciless, undeclared war against a people whose main offense, in Fascist eyes, is loyalty to democratic institutions."

Secretary Hull already has indicated, in response to questions of newspapermen, that the Government will not take any such action as the letter calls for. The State Department is said to feel there is nothing in the way of proof that would justify this country listing the German and Italian nations as beligerents in the Spanish civil war.

Poor Luck Forces President to Extend Fishing Trip a Day

Galveston, Tex., May 5 (AP).—President Roosevelt returned to his favorite fishing grounds off Port Aransas late today after announcing he will extend his vacation a day because of his poor fishing luck.

No sooner had he left Port Isabel, near the mouth of the Rio Grande, where he fished unsuccessfully yesterday due to the rough sea, than tarpon, mackerel and trout began bIting, according to word from that port.

The U. S. S. Potomac bearing the Presidential party and the destroyers Moffett and Decatur left Port Isabel around 6:30 a. m., and arrived 160 miles northward off Port Aransas shortly before 4 p. m. (6 p. m., Eastern Daylight Time).

The only dispatch received from the Potomac today said the President would prolong his vacation another day. He will land here next Tuesday at 9 a. m., instead of Monday morning, and lead a small automobile procession through the city before boarding his special train for Washington.

He will carry out his original schedule of visiting Texas A. and M. College and staying overnight at the Fort Worth home of his son, Elliott. He will arrive in Washington May 14.

Torso Found in Lake Recalls 'Head Hunter'

Cleveland, May 5 (AP).—Another reminder of Cleveland's mad head hunter—the lower half of a woman's torso—floated to the surface of Lake Erie today, but it failed to break the secret of the city's eight beheadings.

Howard Yochem, 38, trying out a swan boat for this summer's Great Lakes Exposition, found the half torso about a mile from shore. The piece of human flesh matched perfectly with the preserved upper half of a woman's torso found in February on the lake shore nearly 10 miles away.

Marx Suit Settled.

Los Angeles, May 5 (AP).—Attorneys announced in Federal court today the $26,000 damage suit of Garrett and Carroll Graham, writing brothers, against Groucho and Chico Marx, film comedians, had been settled out of court. Terms were not disclosed. The Grahams had charged an episode in one of their skits had been used in a broadcast without their permission.

100 Girls Flee Blast.

Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., May 5 (AP).—A hundred girls rushed out onto the lawn at Masters School here early today clad in their pajamas after an explosion of a transformer blew out windows in the basement of a dormitory. No one was injured.

Catalan State Quells Revolt Of Anarchists

who were members of the former Catalonian government called on their fellows to stop fighting, but without avail.

A new provisional government was in charge of Catalonia tonight, and its composition showed the Anarchists had lost strength in the autonomous state.

Gen. Pozas in Charge.

Valencia dispatches said Gen. Sebastian Pozas, who commanded government forces on the Guadalajara front, had been placed in charge of public order in Catalonia.

The government appealed to contending elements for peace lest the insurgents take advantage of internal disorders to attack on the Aragon front, east of Catalonia.

Hospitals were jammed with wounded, and a radio appeal asked all doctors to care for the victims.

Two British warships, the cruiser Despatch and the destroyer Hostile, were speeding toward Barcelona as a "precautionary measure." Britain has commercial interests there.

The outbreak was the culmination of long-standing bitterness between the Anarchists and Catalan Socialists.

Italians Still Trapped.

Bilbao, Spain, May 5 (AP).—Desperate but vain attempts of the insurgents to free 2,000 Italian troops trapped in the Bermeo sector northeast of Bilbao today occupied the spotlight in the battle for the capital of the Basque state.

All day insurgent planes roared over the Basque lines encircling the Italians, rained bombs and dived to spray the Basques with machine-gun bullets. But the Basque Gudaris—militiamen—stolidly stood their ground.

At night they tightened their trap, leaving the Italians—alleged to the Black Shirts—with their backs to the sea and their food supplies rapidly dwindling.

The Italians, part of an insurgent column which had been driving rapidly westward along the Bay of Biscay coast, were isolated Sunday near Bermeo, 16 miles northeast of Bilbao.

Evacuation Goes On.

Preparations were nearing completion for the first considerable evacuation of refugees from besieged Bilbao. The Spanish liner Habana was ready to sail tomorrow morning accompanied by a Basque freighter, the two vessels to carry about 5,000 women and children.

The French steamer Margot was expected from Bordeaux tonight to carry 500 more to France. Other Spanish steamers moved into Bilbao to take out about 2,300 refugees in the face of Basque declarations an "Italian destroyer" was waiting outside with seven insurgent warships to prevent the evacuation.

British and French vessels cruised outside the three-mile limit ready to protect the refugee ships.

Rebel Ships Driven Off.

In the siege within a siege near Bermeo, Basque coast defense guns drove off two insurgent trawlers which attempted to approach the shore to help the Italians. The improvised warships scurried out to sea under a screaming shower of 6-inch shells which threw up geysers of water close to them.

Eight German-type bombers and three fast pursuit planes took part in the insurgent efforts to free the surrounded Italians, aiming their bomb cargoes first at the militia lines and then the coast batteries. They failed to hit the latter.

Except on the Bermeo sector the war for Bilbao settled down to digging in and bringing up reinforcements for the next drive.

Madrid Safe After 6 Months.

Madrid, May 5 (AP).—The first six months of siege against Madrid ended tonight with little change in government and insurgent positions.

Efforts by insurgents to storm the Capital for the moment have been abandoned in favor of an apparent plan to cut communications and starve the city to surrender.

With Spanish Insurgents on the Aragon Front, May 5 (AP).—Insurgents tonight disclosed a surprise offensive in eastern central Spain had blasted their government foe from the entire Sierra Palomera region north of Teruel.

A swift series of attacks in the last five days swept back the government forces more than 20 miles in a northeasterly direction from a point near the vital highway running north from Teruel to Calamocha.

Gen. Emilio Mola, commander of the northern insurgent army, ordered the offensive from his headquarters on the Bilbao front.

Dispatches from the insurgent front disclosed the government's troops were driven out of the entire area they had gained in five months.

(The provincial capital of Teruel marks the southern tip of an insurgent wedge driven into the government territory toward Valencia, 72 miles away on the coast and temporary seat of the Spanish government. A considerable portion of the government forces in this sector consisted of Catalan troops.)

Legion Asked to Back Drive Against Crime

Indianapolis, May 5 (AP).—A soft-spoken New Jersey Common Pleas Court judge, marshaling a Nation-wide onslaught on crime, asked the American Legion today to mass its 883,000 members behind the drive.

Judge Richard Hartshorne, of Newark, N. J., is chairman of the Interstate Commission on Crime—which is a committee of the Council of State Governments—and chairman of the legion's committee on law and order.

Duce, Hitler Bid Nations Join Alliance for Economic Stability

Communique Issued by Dictators Urges 'Vaster Collaboration' With Powers; See Benefits in World Parley.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, May 5.—Premier Mussolini and Reichsfuehrer Hitler joined today in an open invitation to other nations to join their co-operative line-up.

But, to meet the possibility the invitation will be disregarded, Italy prepared to strengthen her defenses.

An official communique issued after a three-day conference between Il Duce and Hitler's foreign minister, Baron Konstantin von Neurath, urged "vaster collaboration also with other powers," to assure Europe "more secure economic and political stability."

(Though the Rome conference strengthened Italo-German bonds, Germans high in Nazi councils hailed Von Neurath as the Wilhelmstrasse's best "neinsager" (no-sayer) for not committing Germany to an outright alliance with Italy.)

Political observers noted the communique twice mentioned economic matters, and it was reported the conferees talked of a possible world economic conference for which Premier Paul van Zeeland of Belgium is laying the groundwork.

See Benefits in Parley.

The two statesmen were said to agree that such a conference would be beneficial, if proper preparations were made, and that they might renounce their campaigns for economic self-sufficiency under certain circumstances.

While Mussolini and Von Neurath appealed for collaboration, the authoritative writer, Virginio Gayda, in the Giornale d'Italia, warned Great Britain and France continuances of what he called a press campaign against Italy and Germany would lead to a "new conflict of spirit and interest in Europe."

The newspaper declared Germany and Italy had a right to provide for defense, which includes "solidarity of their relations and development of their concordant diplomatic action in Europe."

Italy's 1937-38 budget, adopted yesterday, provided for making the Italian navy "an ocean-going affair." Defense appropriations totaled 5,500,000,000 lire ($289,300,000), an increase of 727,000,000 lire ($38,240,000) over the preceding budget.

Hitler, Duce May Meet.

Von Neurath's meeting with Mussolini topped off an extraordinary series of visits exchanged between Italy and Germany's highest officials. Some believed it a prelude to a face-to-face meeting between Il Duce and the Reichsfuehrer.

In recent months Mussolini has been visited by Col. Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, second highest Nazi; President Hjalmar Schacht of the Reichsbank, Minister of Propaganda Joseph Paul Goebbels, and other Nazi leaders.

To Germany have gone Dino Alfieri, minister of press; Undersecretary for Air Giuseppe Valle; Crown Prince Umberto, for the Olympic Games, and Queen Elena, to visit her daughter, Mafalda.

The series of visits, in addition to arranging closer Italo-German cooperation, has been aimed apparently to show the rest of Europe, and particularly France and Britain, that the two nations are in intimate accord.

Beautician Ends Her Life With Gas

Mrs. Violet Schaff, 38, divorced beauty shop proprietor, was found dead yesterday in her apartment, 1321 Kenyon street northwest, by friends who sought her after attempts to reach her by telephone had failed.

Four gas jets were found open on the kitchen stove by members of the fire rescue squad who forced their way into the flat after being summoned by Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Melcher, 1412 Chapin street northwest.

Mrs. Schaff was on the floor where she apparently had fallen from a stool.

Mrs. Melcher told Detective Sergt. William Liverman that Mrs. Schaff had been in ill health for several months. She operated a beauty parlor in the 1400 block of Columbia road northwest.

Roosevelt Supporter Leading Coast Election

Santa Barbara, Calif., May 5 (AP).—Alfred J. Elliott, who campaigned as a Roosevelt supporter and said he had the confidence of the Townsend pension plan organization, held a comfortable margin over two other candidates today for the post of Representative from the Tenth California District to succeed the late Henry Stubbs, Democrat.

With all but 20 small precincts counted, Elliott had 22,071 votes, compared with 17,494 for Harry Hopkins, Republican. The third man in the field, Al Sessions, a Democrat and Bakersfield labor paper editor, had 5,642 votes. A plurality elects. The balloting was nonpartisan.

he discussed the economic plan, ready to talk peace and to follow talk with action to dissolve trade barriers, such as foreign exchange restrictions and import quotas, exclusive economic devices strangling proper distribution of raw materials and manufactured goods.

Premier Paul van Zeeland, of Belgium, at French and British urging, now is conferring with the heads of European states or their envoys and is expected to give his views to President Roosevelt in June—so that the President can check them against Davis' findings and chart a course for the United States.

The President then, if Van Zeeland's report corroborates the view of Davis that the powers are ready to act for economic peace, likely would take the lead in calling a world conference.

Germany and Italy, in conferences between Premier Mussolini and Foreign Minister Von Neurath, are believed agreed to work together with other world powers for economic adjustment and observers are convinced that German need of raw materials and foreign exchange will be among the first major problems to be tackled.

In addition to the German difficulties, Davis has cited war debts, American-Japanese-British settlement of Pacific problems, Scandinavian participation in European economics and a multitude of bilateral schemes as questions confronting statesmen and economists before the risk of war is dispelled.

American Boards Urged.

Buenos Aires, May 5 (AP).—Dr. Carlos Saavedra Lamas, Argentina's foreign minister, today urged fourteen American nationals through their ambassadors and ministers here to establish the Pan-American commercial boards for which provision was made in the convention adopted in 1935 by the Pan-American Commercial Conference here.

The foreign minister announced Argentina had established its board under a decree signed today.

To the 14 diplomats whom he had asked to meet with him Dr. Saavedra Lamas said Argentina by this action was given practical effect to a measure to draw the nations of the Americas together commercially.

The 14 countries represented were the United States, Brazil, Chile, Peru, Mexico, Venezuela, Cuba, Panama, Paraguay, Dominican Republic, Columbia, Nicaragua, Bolivia and Ecuador.

Blind Radio Repairer Bludgeoned to Death

New York, May 5 (AP).—Joseph Alonzo, 39, blind radio repairman, was found bludgeoned to death in his modernistically furnished living quarters at the rear of his East Side shop today.

A preliminary examination by police indicated he had not been robbed.

Hindenburg's Arrival Delayed by Headwinds

New York, May 5 (AP).—F. W. von Meister, an official of the Zeppelin Corporation, announced tonight the airship Hindenburg, en route from Frankfort to Lakehurst, N. J., on her first journey of the year, will dock at Lakehurst at 6 p. m. Thursday. She had been scheduled to dock at 6 a. m. A wireless message from the ship said headwinds over Newfoundland were delaying her further.

Doctors Report New's Condition Unchanged

Baltimore, May 5 (AP).—Johns Hopkins Hospital physicians reported the condition of former Postmaster General Harry S. New unchanged tonight. New has been critically ill for several days.

Earlier today hospital attaches said New was "still alive, but his condition has not improved."

New, a former United States Senator from Indiana, served as Postmaster General in the Harding and Coolidge Administrations.

National Bank Robbed Of $7,000 in Michigan

Plymouth, Mich., May 5 (AP).—Two men who entered the First National Bank through a ventilator during the night forced the cashier to open the vault when he arrived today and escaped with approximately $7,000. They left four bank employes and a patron bound in the basement.

Pomp Attends Postoffice Rites At Arlington

Farley and Other Notables Present at Dedication Ceremonies.

On a per capita basis, England's coronation next week would not surpass Arlington's postoffice dedication yesterday in enthusiasm and pageantry.

Parades, band music, flags, floats, four casualties, a speech by Postmaster General Farley, a Masonic corner-stone ritual, and the choral singing of "Carry Me Back to Ole Virginny," consummated almost 100 years of hope for a central Arlington postoffice.

The Postmaster General said President Roosevelt's public works program will be recorded in history as an important step in ending the depression. He cited the $200,000 postoffice, the basement floor of which is completed, as an example of worth-while work under that program.

Foun persons were victims of heat and the crush at the dedication of the postoffice, which will serve 40,000 citizens. Miss Margaret Plugher, 17, sprained an ankle when she fainted in the crowd of 5,000. She was given first aid and sent to her home at 404 South Park street, Arlington.

Winner of the "best float" prize in the parade was a glittering glass-walled bathroom, in which an attractive young lady in a white bathing suit disported. The entry was that of the Master Plumbers Association.

Washington-Lee High School won the band contest, with the same school's girl cadet corps taking first honors as the "best appearing unit." The Junior Drum Corps of the Arlington Post of the American Legion took first in the drum corps competition.

He used an engraved trowel employed by George Washington at the cornerstone laying of the Capitol, a relic in the possession of the Alexandria lodge.

A gold-headed gavel also used by George Washington, and made by his order for capitol cornerstone laying, and later used at the Washington Monument, was made available by Potomac Lodge, No. 5, F. A. A. M., of the Grand Lodge of the District.

Rep. Rogers Fears Aluminum Co. Leak In 'Official Family'

By the Associated Press.

The House heard Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (Republican), Massachusetts, ask yesterday for an investigation to "find out if there were leaks" in the "official family" in connection with the filing of a Government suit for dissolution of the Aluminum Co. of America.

Her resolution would direct the Securities Commission to determine the reasons for changes in the price of the company's common stock just before and after the suit was filed April 24.

Work Is Hurried On River Bulkhead

Charleston, Mo., May 5 (AP).—A third dredge was rushed into action tonight to scoop tons of dirt against a wooden bulkhead being raised by 1,500 Missouri farmers, sharecroppers and CCC members to check the Ohio-burdened Mississippi River.

Strengthened on the river side by the earth reinforcement and on its inner side by thousands of sandbags, the 4,000-foot-long bulkhead curved about a crevasse in the levee of the Birds Point-New Madrid floodway.

With the crest of the river expected early next week, C. L. Blanton, jr., WPA supervisor, said: "I am positive that we will be victorious.

Fuehrer Attends As Nazis Launch New Holiday Ship

Hamburg, Germany, May 5 (AP).—Reichsfuehrer Hitler attended the christening today of the steamer Wilhelm Gustloff, something new in Germany's merchant marine.

Supreme Court Begins Study Of Security Act

Last New Deal Decision Expected in Month; Interest Lags.

fended on behalf of the Government by Assistant Attorney General Robert H. Jackson and Charles E. Wyzanski, jr., the 30-year-old special assistant to the Attorney General. Arguments against the validity of the act were presented by Edward F. McLennen, a law partner many years ago of Justice Louis D. Brandeis.

Represents Stockholder.

The white-haired McLennen represented George P. Davis, a stockholder in the Edison Electric Illuminating Co., of Boston, who last November brought suit to enjoin that company from paying the old-age pension tax assessed by the social security act. The lower court upheld the act, but the First Circuit Court of Appeals in a 2-to-1 decision last month declared both the old-age pension and the unemployment insurance levies unconstitutional. After the suit was filed the Government intervened and in a record-breaking procedure for speed undertook to have the Supreme Court reverse the appellate court ruling.

Jackson contended before the Supreme Court the so-called old-age pension taxes levied against pay rolls were "true taxes, their purpose being simply to raise revenue." He pointed out that the taxes were levied under a title of the social security act and distinct from the title under which appropriation was made for the payment of old-age pensions.

He contended "no compliance with any scheme of Federal regulation" was involved in the levy of the taxes, which, he pointed out, were paid unrestricted into the Treasury as internal revenue collections, available for the general support of the Government. Nor were any rights of the States curtailed, he said. Standing alone, he asserted, the levy of these taxes could not be assailed successfully.

In order to make out an argument against the tax, Jackson said, it was necessary to assail it in conjunction with the provisions of the title establishing old-age pensions. In appropriating for old-age pensions, Jackson argued, Congress was acting fully within its authority to provide for the general welfare of the Nation. Thus, he held, appropriations for that purpose constituted a political question, not open for judicial review, but if reviewed, was not open to objection.

Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes asked whether the scheme for paying old-age benefits could be abolished by Congress without affecting the taxing provisions. Jackson replied that could be done. On the other hand, he said, the taxing provisions, since funds for the latter could be paid out of the Treasury and could be raised by borrowing, or the levying of income taxes.

Contending Congress had acted within its authority in establishing an old-age pension system, Jackson conceded "there was a 150-year-old tradition against making old age the subject of the Federal Government's care." But he held concern for old age, once lodged solely in the township, had become a matter for action by the county, then by the State and now by the Nation.

Evils of Old Age.

He cited at some length the findings of research experts that industry refused to hire workers when they reached certain ages. He declared the time is no longer with us when we can say that only indolence leads to the poorhouse." He pointed out that the depression wiped out the lifetime savings of many old persons and asserted "it was brought home to us that self-denial did not assure a comfortable old age."

The jurisdictional question raised by Justice Stone grew out of the fact Davis undertook to enjoin the company of which he was a stockholder from paying the tax before resorting to such a proceeding in equity. Justice Stone pointed out that in previous cases the Government had taken the stand that a taxpayer should pay the levy and then sue to recover.

Begun in November.

Jackson explained that the Davis action was commenced last November and that the first payment of the so-called old-age pension tax was not due until March 1 last. Since it was apparent that at some time this tax would be subjected to a constitutional test, the Government had bent every effort toward an early determination of the questions involved.

He said uncertainty regarding the validity of the tax raised serious budgetary and financial problems for the Government, and for that reason the Government waived any technical objections whatever arising out of the stockholder's suit. In this connection he pointed out that revenue from the tax was estimated at $235,000,000 for the current fiscal year and $621,800,000 for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

McLennen ridiculed Jackson's assertions the law levying the tax was a revenue measure. He pointed out that the measure containing these provisions was not labeled "the revenue act of 1935" but was termed "an act to provide for the general welfare by establishing a system of Federal old-age pensions." He reminded the court the act was passed by "a Congress dependent on the suffrage of the country" and thus anxious to demonstrate what it was doing.

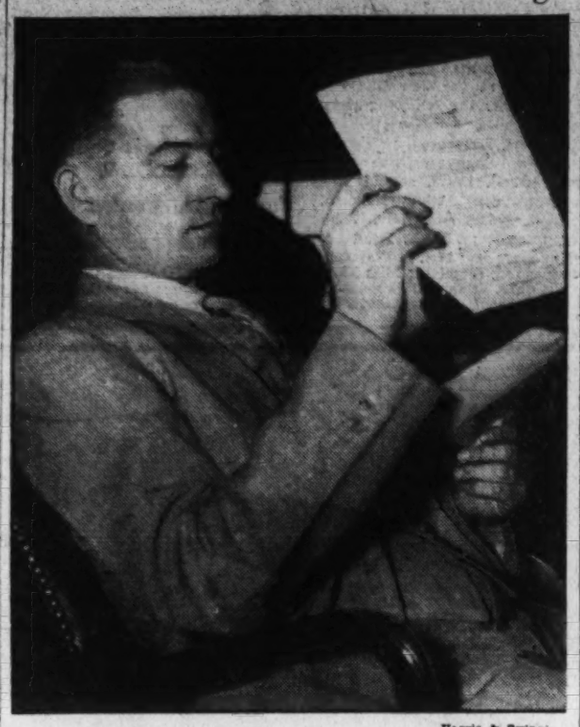
Don't Take Bicarbonate

"If excess stomach acidity is causing distress after eating don't take Bicarbonate of Soda. You may aggravate the very trouble you want to correct. Scientists have discovered that Bicarbonate goes too far—it not only neutralizes the EXCESS acid but also destroys the NECESSARY, NORMAL ACID BALANCE of the stomach. Your digestive system is knocked out—no wonder you always feel distressed after eating.

To get safe relief from EXCESS stomach acidity ask at Peoples, or any druggist, for Cal-Trate Tablets—they contain NO bicarbonate of soda and are not a laxative. They merely neutralize the SURPLUS acid, then pass out of the system. Then you feel great.

Start with Cal-Trate today—you'll be amazed at the QUICK relief they give from acid indigestion, gas, bloating, biliousness and other stomach troubles caused by excess stomach acid. Adv.

'Evasive' Witness at Senate Hearing



Harris & Ewing.

Appearing at Civil Liberties Committee hearing, Merle Middleton, former deputy and cousin of the Harlan County sheriff, was termed "chief of the gang" by another mine guard who testified.

Mine Witnesses, Harlan-Bound, Guarded by Subpenas of U. S.

now, and they don't have none in Harlan."

Some said they were going to live in Virginia, some in West Virginia, one in Ohio, and some in Kentucky counties adjoining Harlan.

And one witness added: "I'm goin' back to Harlan, all right, I guess, but first tonight I'm goin' to go get drunk on some of these fancy bottled liquors and fall on my face."

Senator La Follette closed the hearings after an afternoon session had left a fog of evasive answers from Sheriff Theodore R. Middleton and his second cousin, former Deputy Sheriff Merle Middleton.

After the big, blond, crop-haired sheriff had vainly ransacked his memory, without result, on several matters about which other witnesses had been specific, La Follette brought up the question on the sheriff's army record.

Middleton recalled he had been in the regular army from 1913 to 1919, but could not remember why he had been turned down by the War Department when he applied for a commission in 1920.

La Follette, to "refresh his recollection," introduced a report from the War Department of Middleton's army record, showing he had been refused the commission because of "lack of veracity." The report, noting Middleton was "very poor material," added that his "contradictory statements" and his testimony at a trial of another soldier "thoroughly discredits applicant's reliability as a witness. Lacks veracity."

Middleton Grilled.

Most of the afternoon was devoted to a relentless grilling of Merle Middleton, the lean-faced, tight-lipped former deputy who has been identified by numerous witnesses as a participant in shootings, assaults and even one murder.

Middleton's memory was so dim on nearly every matter called to his attention, even about events of last Sunday, as he sat impassively stroking his middle-parted, glistening patent-leather hair, that La Follette finally dismissed him with an angry blast, shouting:

"For the benefit of those who may read the record in the future and who cannot see the attitude and demeanor of this witness, I want to say that your memory has been so blank and your testimony so evasive, that it is my opinion your testimony is not worth a moment's serious consideration."

His face still set grimly, only his hot eyes betraying his smoldering anger at this public expression of contempt, Middleton walked back to his seat, where he lit a cigarette swiftly, his nostrils flaring as he clenched his fists tightly in his pockets.

Merle Middleton told the committee he had never been convicted of any criminal offense in Harlan County, but admitted he had been indicted. His criminal record showed indictments for murder in two cases, twice for banding and confederating, once for malicious striking and wounding and once for assault and battery, all in the space of a few months' service as a Harlan deputy.

With the testimony of numerous other witnesses before him on all the instances in which Merle Middleton had been named as one of the deputies, La Follette went carefully over the entire list, trying in vain to "refresh your recollection, Mr. Middleton." But Merle, named by Bill C. "Thug" Johnson as the "chief thug" of the county, remained absolutely blank on every occurrence, except occasionally when he would suddenly remember an irrelevant detail.

"Terrorism" Found.

In the three weeks of hearings on violations of civil liberties in Harlan County, the Senate sub-committee of Chairman La Follette and Senator Elbert D. Thomas (Democrat), Utah, has laid bare through the testimony of scores of witnesses—testimony that the sheriff, the deputies and the operators have refrained carefully from impeaching or impugning—a long-standing condition of "lawlessness, violence and terrorism," they have stated.

Highlights have been:

The arrest of Ted Creech, mine superintendent, for perjury before the committee.

The surprise expressed by several operators at hearing for the first time of the Wagner labor relations act, guaranteeing collective bargaining rights.

The testimony of union organizers as to how they were shot at, dynamited, beaten and driven from the county by Sheriff Middleton's deputies.

The revelation of the sheriff's wide financial interests, closely related with those of the coal operators, and of his $100,000 worth of investments in two years on a monthly salary of $150.

The District Committee also scheduled another discussion of the dormant District race track bill for Wednesday.

Bills seeking to regulate beauty shops in the District and relieve Congress of the duty of passing upon healing arts license applications were reported favorably.

Three sub-committees were named to hold hearings on other local bills, including the Wood measure to change the administrative setup of the Welfare Department.

Representative Wood (Democrat), of Missouri, author of the three-man welfare board plan, was designated chairman of the sub-committee which will decide whether the bill should be reported. His associates are Representatives Hull (Progressive), of Wisconsin, and Brewster (Republican), of Maine.

Nations Unite To Save Tombs From Vandals

Congress of Archeologists Condemns Practices of Curio Seekers.

The great nations of the world, while still loath to join hands for international peace, have banded together to preserve the tombs of ancient peoples against vandalism and souvenir hunting.

Dr. Frank H. H. Roberts, jr., of the Smithsonian Institution, reported yesterday on the International Congress of Archeologists held recently in Cairo, Egypt, to consider the problem.

Dr. Roberts and Dr. G. A. Reisner, of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, were the American delegates to the meeting, sponsored by the committee for intellectual co-operation of the League of Nations.

Irresponsible tactics of the idly curious were strongly condemned and sentiment was expressed for standardization of laws throughout the world to curb "pot hunters," Dr. Roberts reported.

The delegates stressed the fact that the exact position in which archeological objects are found is usually more important in drawing conclusions than the objects themselves. Hence, a curio seeker can wreak havoc by jumbling up a site, even if he removes nothing.

Criticism also was voiced against the practice of removing key objects of ancient cultures to distant countries for exhibition purposes. The congress felt that their significance and importance is diminished in an alien environment.

Prevailing sentiment, said Dr. Roberts, was that the fruits of scholarly excavations should remain in the countries where they are found, although all countries should be reasonable in their restrictions on competent scientists of other lands wishing to carry on investigations.

The Cairo meeting felt, however, that intense rivalry between countries and institutions to get the most striking exhibits—even by resorting to smuggling — is injurious all around.

Spanish Aid Committee Is Termed 'Rebel' Body

The Spanish Embassy yesterday disclosed that the "American Committee for Spanish Relief" is a misnomer for "Spanish Fascist Relief" and that it is "absolutely identified with the causes represented by the rebels in Spain."

"It is the duty of the Spanish Embassy," a statement asserted, "to call the attention of the public in general to the fact that loyal Spain, the Spain now fighting on the side of her government, not only is not represented in this committee, but declines as well all possible help, whatever its nature might be, proffered by organizations such as the 'American Committee for Spanish Relief,' which its record suggests is operated under the guidance and inspiration, and for the benefit of rebel Spanish elements. * * *"

Here's the DRUM-MAJOR of the motor car parade

IF you know a leader when you meet one, you'll see the moment you try this sparkling Buick why it's called the out-in-front car of the year.

You'll go for the way it goes for you—serene, steady, gallant as the figurehead on a buoyant ship—you're in for a thrill every time you put it into action.

You handle a wheel that turns as easy as the pages of a book. You press the treadle—and sink inches deep back in the soft cushions with the swoop of its take-off.

You click off miles by the score, the hundred—and no matter how far you range or what gait you travel, you can't get a whine out of that softly whispering engine!

The answer is you've got a car that was born to go places the way you want to go — smoother, safer, steadier than any car you've known.

Power in this flashing Buick is the power of eight straight valve-in-head cylinders. Its gait is the level gait of a car built close to earth with enough bulk to hold it there.

Its maneuverability is the quick mobility of a charger.

Yet the crowning touch of its creators was none of these but the figures they succeeded in writing on its price tag. The hard-to-realize fact is that this great straight eight can be bought for less than some of today's sixes!

There's just one way to get the true picture of Buick's standout value, and that's to drive it yourself. See your authorized Buick dealer soon and get your order in, and you'll enjoy a summer like you've dreamed of!

14 U. S. Women Are Presented At British Court

Curtsy to King and Queen, With 486 Others, at Old Buckingham Palace.

S. C.; Miss Vesta Putman Culbertson, of Chicago; Mrs. George Temple Bowdoin, of New York City; Mrs. F. Vernon Foster, of West Orange, N. J.; Miss Lydia Fuller, of Boston; Mrs. Dozier L. Gardner, of St. Louis; Miss Julia Henry, of Philadelphia; Miss Catherine M. Maher, of Lincoln, Nebr.; Mrs. John Perrin, of Boston; Miss Anne Schenck, of New York City; Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, wife of the United States Attorney General; Mrs. Byron Hilliard and Mrs. George W. Norton, jr., of Louisville, Ky., and Mrs. Grenville Emmet, wife of the United States Minister to the Netherlands.

Mrs. Bingham wore a crown of maize and yellow silver brocade with jeweled belt and maize chiffon train of applique with brocade. Her jewels included diamond tiara, a necklace and a bracelet.

The ambassador wore the traditional black velvet knee breeches and coat. Their daughter, Henrietta, was in blue satin with matching train, and pearls.

Miss Bowdoin wore a Molyneux gown of white tulle with a silver lame train and carried a large bouquet of white camelias.

Miss Culbertson chose a Molyneux gown of ice-white tulle designed with a shirred skirt and a silver lame train lined with tulle. She carried a white ostrich feather fan and wore a single strand of pearls.

The gown of Mrs. Bowdoin was of silver lame brocaded in Chinese pattern and finished with a sparkling jeweled hat. It accompanied a train of silver lame with an embroidered diamante. She carried a white ostrich fan and wore diamond bracelets and a pearl necklace.

Mrs. Foster, a niece of Norman H. Davis, United States Ambassador-at-Large, was attired in a white chiffon empire gown. She carried a white ostrich fan.

Miss Fuller, a daughter of former Gov. Alvan T. Fuller, of Massachusetts, wore a bouffant gown of shell pink tulle, embroidered diamante and roses. It was made over a flesh satin slip and accompanied a pink tulle train similarly embroidered. She carried a pink ostrich fan.

A picturesque gown of ivory tulle embroidered with sequins flowers was worn by Mrs. Gardner. It had a court train of tulle likewise embroidered with shining sequins. She wore a pearl necklace with a diamond aquamarine pendant.

Miss Henry was attired in a dress of white taffeta applique with silver roses, with a finished train of silver lame. She wore a pearl necklace and carried a white ostrich fan.

Miss Maher selected a Vionnet dress of white crepe cut along Greek lines accented with braided silver lame girdle. Its white train lined with silver lame was held at the shoulders with diamond clips. She carried a bouquet of white carnations.

A gown of oyster white brocade finished with pale green satin and a train lined with silver lame was worn by Mrs. Perrin. Her fan and shoes were of pale green.

Miss Schenck chose a white slipper satin gown and train and carried a bouquet of mixed white flowers.

Mrs. Cummings wore a gown of red chiffon embroidered with silver bamboo branches. Her train was of similar material edged with similar embroidery and lined with silver lame. Her fan was of a shading deep rose to red.

Mrs. Hilliard, daughter-in-law of Mrs. Bingham, wore a dress of gold lace over a flesh-colored pleated chiffon, with a gold lace train. Her jewels were diamonds.

Mrs. Norton, niece of Mrs. Bingham, wore a gown of white marquisette applique with white taffeta flowers, and diamonds and pearls.

Baldwin Asks Labor Peace.

London, May 5 (AP).—Prime Minister Baldwin pleaded in the name of the King and Queen for industrial peace today as grumbling street car operators and striking busmen threatened to discommode the coronation festivities.

Making what he called his "last appeal in the House," Baldwin sought to effect quick setlement of the transportation dispute and block an impending national coal strike before Parliament adjourns tomorrow until May 24.

Murray Assails Labor Attitude Of Steel Group

Lewis Aide Says Independents Against Signing Union Contract.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, May 5.—Phillip Murray charged tonight that independent steel operators have entered what he called an "unholy alliance" against signing a labor contract with the steel workers organizing committee.

The mild-mannered chief lieutenant of John L. Lewis in the drive to organize the Nation's 550,000 steel workers said the union would insist on a signed agreement "even if we are forced to the court of last resort, a strike."

He asserted that the independent operators would face a crisis in their coal mines "within 48 hours" and said his union would not be responsible for keeping its members at work in steel mills where the management refuses to sign a contract.

Murray's remarks were made after he read the reply this afternoon of the Republic Steel Corporation to a demand that it set a date for a conference to reach an agreement.

"In view of Wagner act see no necessity for signed contract," telegraphed J. A. Voss, director of industrial relations for the company. "The policy of this company has been and now is that it is willing to meet anyone to bargain with him for whomsoever he represents . . . advise if Tuesday, May 11, in my office, Cleveland, satisfactory for meeting."

Murray said the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company had declined last week to sign an agreement similar to those signed by subsidiaries of U. S. Steel last March. He said a "somewhat similar" position had been encountered in negotiation between him and H. E. Lewis, chairman of the Jones and Laughlin Steel Corporation, Bethlehem, largest independent, also has declined a signed contract.

Union Spurns Strike Solution Of Producers

'Not Interested,' Says Head of F. M. P. C.; Picket Lines Increase.

By the Associated Press.

Hollywood, May 5.—A plan to end the Hollywood movie studio strike was accepted by producers but rejected by the Federated Motion Picture Crafts, strike sponsor, late today.

The peace plan came from the Los Angeles Central Labor Council, American Federation of Labor group with which the F. M. P. C. is affiliated. Producers conferred on the plan with a Central Labor Council committee this afternoon.

Pat Casey, labor conciliator for the producers, then issued a statement saying the producers had accepted terms of the proposal "without qualification."

Before the producers' assent to the plan was announced, he declared the strike would not end until the producers "come in 100 per cent with our demands."

Ranks of the several hundred pickets outside the studios increased today, but the situation generally was quiet and no attempt to prevent stars, extras or nonstriking craftsmen from entering was reported.

A mass meeting of federated union members was informed last night union longshoremen at Los Angeles and the Los Angeles C. I. O. headquarters had promised picketing aid.

Motorist Is Injured.

Louis R. Hale, 27, of 1240 Twenty-ninth street northwest, suffered a possible skull fracture and cuts and bruises late last night when his automobile ran from the road and crashed into a pole on the highway near Boyd, Md. He was taken to Montgomery County General Hospital, where physicians said his condition was serious.

P.-T.A. Speaker Pays Tribute to D. C. 'Pioneer'

Mrs. A. A. Birney Among Group Honored at 41st Convention.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

A Staff Correspondent.

Richmond, Va., May 5.—Among the "pioneers" honored at tonight's session of the forty-first annual convention of the National Parent-Teacher Association was Mrs. Arthur A. Birney, of Washington, who arranged the first meeting of the convention in 1887, founded the District P.-T. A. Congress in 1905 and served as its president until 1914.

Mrs. Birney and a number of other women who have been active in work of the organization for 40 years were seated on the stage at the Richmond Mosque tonight when Miss Ruth De Young, director of the Women's Congress and woman's editor of the Chicago Tribune, praised their accomplishments in her address on "pioneering in a community."

Urging 2,000 parents and teachers to "look to these wise women for inspiration, but do not lose sight of responsibilities of the present," Miss De Young said, "We learn from the past, but we must put on our own show. In a time when a throne has changed hands for love of a woman and democracies are menaced by dictators, our duties are more pressing than those of women have ever been."

"Nail Polish" Too Important.

Decrying the fact "many women today are more concerned with the color of their nail polish than with the character of their public servants," the speaker challenged her audience to prove to the world the worth of women's organizations by outlining "a practical, definite plan of action and pushing it through to the finish."

She mentioned the fight against venereal diseases and the cancer-control movement as two worthy causes which women might well support. She criticized the tendency of women's organizations to pass "dozens of resolutions on every conceivable subject" and then forget them, and she deplored the practice of avoiding discussion of controversial issues.

At the morning session delegates heard Dr. Homer P. Rainey, director of the American Youth Commission, stress the need for a new type of education in his discussion of "Youth in the Modern Sommunity."

"The modern high school curriculum is ill-adapted to needs of at least 60 per cent of our boys and girls," he asserted. "Research into the much-disoussed youth problem has shown there is little relationship between what a youth learns in school and what he needs to know to get a job, or to make the most of his life."

Need Little Training.

Ninety per cent of the jobs available today require less than six months' training, he continued, adding, "we must re-think our whole concept of education."

A demonstration was given this morning before the convention by 50 children from the Henrico County Public Schools under the direction of Miss Frieda Koontz, secretary of the Richmond P.-T. A.

Ballots cast in the National P.-T. A. election yesterday were counted late today. New officers for the association will be presented to the convention tomorrow morning, as follows:

Mrs. J. K. Pettengill, of Detroit, president; Mrs. John E. Hayes, of Twin Falls, Idaho, first vice president; Dr. Thomas W. Gosling, of Washington, second vice president; Mrs. Warren L. Mabrey, of Cape Girardeau, Mo., secretary; Dr. William T. Sanger, of Richmond, treasurer. Eight regional vice presidents also were elected. Mrs. James Sheehan, of Danville, Ky., is the new vice president for the region including the District of Columbia.

Luncheons, Tours Held.

Luncheons, teas and sightseeing parties for State delegates were on the calendar of social events for today. Fifty-seven delegates, representing 150,000 members of the District of Columbia P.-T. A., met at the John Marshall Hotel at noon for an informal luncheon. Among these were seven Washington officers—Mrs. W. B. Fry, president; Mrs. H. N. Stull, Mrs. W. B. Calvert, Mrs. C. D. Lowe and Mrs. P. C. Mullady, treasurer, and Mrs. B. W. Ellett, vice presidents; Mrs. C. C. Eldred, historian.

Among others at the District luncheon were Mrs. Riley E. Elgen, Mrs. O. G. Hankins, Mrs. E. J. Dowling, Mrs. George Barse, Mrs. Andrew Stewart, Mrs. L. B Castell, Mrs. E. R. Seal, Mrs. Sargent Elliott, Mrs. Charles Deck, Mrs. John L. Mitchell, Mrs. L. J. Raebach, Mrs. Charles Sterner, Mrs. C. H. Kendall, Mrs. Joe Bell, Mrs. B. W. Costenbader, Mrs. Louise Frazier, Mrs. C. C. Buchanan, Mrs. Keith Small, Mrs. Frank Dunn, Mrs. Fred Nelson, Mrs. Harry Hughes, Mrs. J. P. Payne, Mrs. R. A. Lyon, Mrs. W. O. Mitchell, Mrs. Paul Neuhaus, Mrs. Nathan Giles, Mrs. Pearl B. Clark, Mrs. B. M. Manly, Mrs. Walter C. Jones, Mrs. John R. Kays, Mrs. Harry Bell, Mrs. Ralph Staulily, Mrs. T. M. Keely, Mrs. Jack Goldberg, Mrs. F. B. Mullen, Mrs. L. B. Boydstun, Mrs. F. K. Minsky Brothers Have Only Frowns For Strip Artists

New York, May 5 (AP).—Herbert and Morton Minsky formally announced today they are no longer that way about the strip-tease, but were happy to say they would henceforth use their talents by giving former burlesque customers a superb and continuous show featuring colored entertainers.

They will present this new entertainment in their Oriental Theater, one of the 14 burlesque houses closed by Paul Moss, license commissioner, after strenuous representations from religious and civic leaders. They already have applied for a license, and plan to present the first show May 14.

Truman Named Director Of Capital Sanitarium

Dr. Archibald H. Truman last night was named director of the Washington Sanitarium, Takoma Park, by a meeting of the board of directors of the Seventh Day Adventist institution.

He twice before has held this post, and at present is engaged in private practice in California. He will succeed Dr. D. H. Kress, who has been acting superintendent. Dr. Truman is expected to take over his new duties in September.

TAKE WEIGHT OFF TIRED FEET
Lose Fat The Easy Way—Without Starvation Diets, or Back-Breaking, Bending and Rolling Exercises.

If your feet and ankles feel tired and ache all over—because you are carrying too much fat—do something about it. Try the treatment that has helped millions to reduce excess weight.

There's a reason why so many people find dieting slow and often times futile in reducing. The reason, doctors say, is often because a little gland is not working right.

All the blood in your body goes through this tiny gland sixteen times every day. If it doesn't pour into the blood stream about one and one-half drops of vital fluid every 24 hours, many people take on ugly fat. This fluid helps Nature to "burn up" excess food and fatty tissue in much the same way as a good "draft" sets in a furnace.

Now, physicians combat this condition by feeding this gland the substance it lacks—and millions of pounds of excess fat has been wiped out in this way.

Marmola Prescription Tablets are based on the same method used by doctors. So don't waste your time or money striving to reduce with starvation diets or back-breaking exercises. Start the Marmola treatment today that millions have used successfully to get rid of excess fat. The formula is in every box so you know just what you are taking. Don't wait—get a box of Marmola today from your druggist. —Adv.

Ripe For Organization.

In the closing sessions of its inquiry into the reign of terror in Harlan County the Senate Civil Liberties Committee did an admirable job, the more so because of scrupulous impartiality in the conduct of the investigation.

At the outset of the inquiry, while instance after instance of official lawlessness and brutality was revealed by witnesses, there was no fixing of primary responsibility for these outrageous conditions. It could only be inferred that certain coal operators in the blood-drenched district had hired thugs to employ strong-arm tactics against union organizers and members.

These gaps in the testimony have now been partially filled. This week several witnesses have given evidence directly pointing to the commission of murder by law officers and others engaged in smashing the union movement. And one operator has now admitted he "might have" paid a "gang of gun-thugs" to break up union meetings and terrorize union miners.

This individual does not seem to be typical of the mine operators in Harlan County and he certainly is not typical of mine operators in the Nation at large. But his testimony, reluctant, halting and evasive though it was, adds a shade of crimson to the already lurid picture which a score of witnesses have painted of the intolerably feudal conditions in the Kentucky coal fields.

To many of the law officers, and the more reckless of the operators, the Wagner labor relations act appears to be just one more law to be flouted. It is the law nonetheless. And, guaranteed in their constitutional right to organize for purposes of collective bargaining, the miners have now every reason to redouble their efforts.

With admirable pluck organizers have hitherto enlisted members in the face of ruthless and often murderous opposition. Clearly the downtrodden miners of Harlan are ripe for organization since they are willing to unionize even at the risk of their lives. Now is the psychological moment for a concerted drive by the United Mine Workers to carry their task through to a successful conclusion.

If that effort is conducted along orderly lines, with scrupulous avoidance of the methods employed by enemies of the union, it will have the overwhelming support of the American people. Moreover, there is reason to think that such a drive will be welcomed by many Kentucky operators who feel their profession disgraced by the Fascist tactics exhibited by certain of their number.

An Unbalanced Tax System.

From the very beginning of the current search for new sources of revenue in the District it has been generally understood that the tax on real estate would not be increased. The Jacobs committee found our tax structure to be very poorly balanced. Too much of the burden is piled upon the home owner. The Commissioners took a similar attitude. Most Congressmen who have studied the problem are also inclined to agree that the new revenue needed should be obtained from other sources.

It is very discouraging, therefore, to note the present inclination to fall back upon a higher real estate levy to make up any deficit that would remain after a new tax program has been adopted. A boost in the tax on home owners would be equivalent to an admission of failure to work out a scientific revenue system. An ideal plan would involve a cut rather than an increase in the realty tax.

The problem of raising $6,000,000 to $8,000,000 in local revenue is admittedly difficult. It has been seriously complicated by the threat of a reduction in the Federal contribution to the District budget. Naturally the Commissioners do not wish to suggest new taxes that would make it convenient for the Senate to slash the $5,000,000 sum which the House has approved as the Government's share of the Capital City's expenses next year. But it would be still more unfortunate to make up any deficiency in the Federal allowance by higher real estate levies.

Taxes on home owners have been disproportionately increased in past years for the simple reason that they can be easily levied. Should Congress follow the course of least resistance a still heavier burden would be piled upon over-taxed property owners. It is reasonable to expect the Commissioners to stand firm against any such expedient.

The Gold Dilemma.

As Senator Vandenberg reminds us, the Government's gold and silver policy is "all part of the budgetary picture."

Attention is being focused upon the awkward financing problem created by the gold sterilization program. The Treasury's efforts to offset the potential inflationary effect of new gold acquisitions, by borrowing to buy gold instead of issuing gold certificates in payment, is adding steadily to the outstanding public debt. The so-called inactive gold fund now amounts to approximately $550,000,000 and most of it has been accumulated since the beginning of 1937. The prospect of having to continue borrowing for an indefinite period of time to sterilize future gold acquisitions is unquestionably perturbing.

It is exceptionally awkward, indeed, to carry out this sterilization policy at a time when the Treasury is forced to borrow to cover an unexpectedly large current deficit. The fact that the gold held in the "inactive" fund may be regarded as an asset offsetting the debt contracted in acquiring it is not really reassuring. Paradoxical as it sounds, our new gold holdings are aggravating the fiscal difficulties confronting the Treasury.

The reason is that gold is no longer performing its customary monetary functions. The policy followed by our Treasury and certain central banks of buying gold in unlimited quantities at high prices has caused output to advance by leaps and bounds. In 1936, for example, the world production of gold amounted to 35,000,000 ounces—about 75 per cent above the total output of 1929. Our own monetary gold stocks have reached the colossal figure of $11,781,000,000. And we are burying our useless stores underground while constantly augmenting them by new purchases at artificially high prices in terms of the dollar.

A situation of this sort creates a serious dilemma for the Treasury. Shall it continue to borrow and impound gold, or shall it resort to some alternative method of dealing with the problem presented by an unwanted gold inflow? To abandon the sterilization policy would add to the excess reserves of member banks and thus increase the potential danger of inflation. Lowering the price of gold or restriction of imports would create other serious problems. The recent deflationary disturbances resulting from the mere rumor of an intention to lower the gold-buying price illustrate the nature of the difficulty.

As a matter of fact, the Administration is in the position of the man who holds the proverbial bear by the tail. Even its most vehement critics hesitate to give positive advice as to what ought to be done. Senator Vandenberg, for instance, after scoring our present monetary policies admits that he has nothing to suggest in the way of a remedy. After asserting that we cannot go on with a "purchase program of sterilization" at the present rate and "ever hope to come within gunshot of a real budgetary balance," he concludes that it is "almost as dangerous to stop as to continue it."

We can, and should, abandon the present silver-purchasing policy. But the problem created by gold is much more complicated. In the background, moreover, there lurks a vague fear that if we acquire too much of the world's gold, and store it away for too long a period of time, gold may ultimately lose a good deal of its prestige as a monetary metal. It is most important, therefore, to exert every effort to assist an early restoration of a world-wide gold standard.

The problem is one that we cannot solve unaided or in any quick and easy fashion. In its annual report, just released, the Bank for International Settlements discusses some of the serious questions raised by superabundant gold production. Among other expedients to cope with the situation lowering the price of gold is suggested as a possible corrective. However, the B. I. S. stresses the difficulties and dangers of such action and refrains from making any recommendation.

Any program, indeed, designed to curb the world output of gold and bring about a more rational distribution of monetary gold stocks would require a high degree of international co-operation. It will be difficult to secure at best. It will never be secured without positive effort to make the program possible.

Mr. Huff's Appointment.

Selection of Ray L. Huff as general superintendent of the District's penal institutions indicates an admirable desire on the part of the Commissioners and the Board of Public Welfare to place the treatment of prisoners on a scientific footing. Mr. Huff is a career man in the field of penal correction. His background suggests that he will apply the most enlightened policies of prison management to the local institutions.

It is reported that Mr. Huff did not seek this appointment. Rather the Board of Public Welfare sought his services. That is a most favorable indication that he is qualified for the position. One other fact in his favor is that he has served six years in the United States Bureau of Prisons, being under the capable direction of Sanford Bates during most of that period. Prison administration became a career service under Mr. Bates and that policy is being carried on by his successor, James V. Bennett.

Mr. Huff has a good educational background. He has also served as a vocational counselor, and before his association with the Bureau of Prisons he was director of restoration for the Pennsylvania Department of Welfare. In that position he served as a liaison between prisoners and the Governor. Under the Bureau of Prisons his job has been administration of the Federal parole system.

The Board of Public Welfare has taken a long time to find a successor to Capt. Barnard. But the delay appears to have been caused by an earnest search for the most competent executive available in the field of prison management. If Mr. Huff measures up to the high recommendations he has been given, the community will not regret the slowness of the board in making its decision.

Trouble Within Trouble.

Of all the sections of Spain that remained loyal to the Popular Front after the military uprising of last July, Catalonia has been the least subjected to the direct impact of the civil war.

For the loyalists this has been of no small advantage. Catalonia is the leading industrial region in Spain and a highly productive agricultural area as well. The continued operation of its farms and factories, freed from any direct threat of destruction, has helped make it possible for the Valencia government to provision and supply its armies. Catalonia is also giving shelter to several hundred thousand refugees.

Yet relations between Valencia and Barcelona have been somewhat strained of late. There is a feeling in the temporary Spanish capital that the Catalans have not been doing all they can to help win the war. This feeling may be unjustified, but it exists and bears within itself the seeds of future trouble, should the government eventually win out.

Within Catalonia itself diminishing fears of an early attack by the rebels have also tended to increase potentially serious frictions and antagonisms within the Popular Front. This was brought out last month when a prolonged political crisis occurred as the result of demands made by the Anarcho-Syndicalists that their program of radical social action be put into effect at once. This program called for the immediate socialization of the land, for workers' control of finance and banking and similar sweeping measures. The April crisis was solved through the intervention of President Companys and his assumption of the Catalan premiership. Although the Anarcho-Syndicalists were given two places in the new cabinet, their revolutionary influence has since been steadily curbed. On the other hand the influence and power of Companys has grown.

Sooner or later, it is clear, there will have to be a showdown between the Anarcho-Syndicalists in Catalonia and the more moderate parties. Whether that showdown has now taken place is not clear. But undoubtedly the reports of an abortive civil war within a civil war are founded in fact.

The elements making up the Popular Front in Catalonia, as elsewhere in loyalist Spain, by no means see eye to eye on all questions. If the pressure of Fascist rebellion is removed these conflicting elements will find it very difficult to get along together. Present unity is to a large extent based on nothing more substantial than a common hatred of the Fascist movement.

Either Illogical Or Anxious.

The confusing lack of consistency behind so many Administration policies is well illustrated by current remarks of Leo T. Crowley, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. In a speech prepared for the annual convention of the South Carolina Bankers Association he advises bankers not to pay large dividends out of profits, but to reserve a sizable proportion of earnings against possible future depreciation of their investments.

If this advice is sound in principle for the banks it is certainly equally sound for business, now subjected to strong governmental pressure to distribute a larger proportion of surplus earnings than many conservative managements deem desirable. If banks are well-advised to prepare for a rainy day, and of course they are, it is impossible to see why the same principle is unsound for industry, as the present tax on undistributed profits implies.

Of course there is one consideration which might make it logical for Mr. Crowley to urge bankers to hoard profits, while industrialists are forced to disgorge them. That would be the case if the head of the F. D. I. C. anticipates serious injury to Government credit, as a result of continuous deficit financing. If he is asking bankers to anticipate further declines in the value of the Government bonds they have been forced to buy his plea is not necessarily illogical. But that is scarcely a comforting explanation from the viewpoint of the Administration.

A cub reporter confided to us today that he knows a rewrite man who could put "Gone With the Wind" on a post card.

It is reported that there is a shortage of scrap metal in this country, but it isn't as if fool car drivers aren't doing their darndest.

"In the makeup of the universe, space is an important factor," declares a physicist. Undoubtedly. We'd all be in a pretty fix with nowhere to put anything.

It's well and good for this country to care for its mentally incompetent, but it shouldn't fall into the habit of doing so by electing and appointing them to office.

Circulation Of Propaganda.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I note that Agnes Virginia Winters, in her letter to you published in The Post of April 20, views with alarm the freedom of the press to "print, publish and circulate propaganda to suit the purposes of certain powerful groups." She views with alarm the freedom of the press to "misrepresent, twist and color issues of importance to the great masses of people."

She apparently believes the press should be "regulated and licensed" to prevent this misuse of its freedom. On my part, I view with alarm the freedom of the Administration to "print, publish and circulate propaganda to suit the purposes of certain powerful groups"—within the Administration. I also view with alarm the freedom of the Administration to do this with the taxpayers' money.

Furthermore, I view with alarm the freedom of the President of the United States to "misrepresent, twist and color" the issue of packing the Supreme Court—certainly an issue of importance to the "great masses of people."

Does Miss Winters believe the Administration should be "allowed continually to misrepresent?" Does Miss Winters approve of the President trying to deceive the people as to his real reason for wanting to appoint six more justices to the Supreme Court bench?

Viewed in the light of the President's Supreme Court proposal, his "misrepresentations were so wild and unrestrained" in the Democratic platform to which he subscribed and in subsequent campaign speeches before election that we are compelled to believe that the President deliberately deceived millions of American voters.

I should view with the greatest alarm any attempt on the part of the Administration to so interpret the Supreme Court's ruling on the Wagner act as to permit the President to dictate and secure editorial policies favorable to himself—as he wishes to dictate and secure Supreme Court decisions favorable to himself. Filipino On Quezon.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a recent issue of The Post I read a letter by Santiago Valdez, a Filipino chauffeur, in which he criticized the mission of President Quezon in the United States as being wasteful and devoid of any good results.

It is true that Mr. Quezon and his staff is spending a great sum of money. On the surface the work that he is doing may not seem apparent, but we should not jump to the conclusion that he is not doing anything just because we see in the papers once in a while that he is visiting this country and that country. The fact that he goes from one place to another does not necessarily mean that he is not doing what his mission calls for and probably more.

In the first place, he came to this country to lay a foundation for a future trade conference. In the second place, he is here to report to the President of the United States, as required by our Philippine Commonwealth constitution.

To lay a foundation for any undertaking, be it economic conference, industrial building, or even a chicken house, we must understand that it is not done overnight, nor is it an easy task, as some of our own people seem to imagine. It is well that we be very careful in our criticism of our own representatives in this country, for how can we expect the American people to have confidence in us if we do not inspire confidence in our own representatives and people by having faith and confidence in our leaders who represent us here?

Negroes And The Court.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The reactionary members of the Supreme Court have shielded themselves behind the doctrine of States' rights from the "Dred Scott" to the "Angelo Herndon" decisions. On the plea of local sovereignty the Negro is denied his rights under the Fourteenth and Fifteenth amendments.

If the Negro race, as such, has any interest in the prevailing Supreme Court controversy it is precisely on this account. Those favoring enlargement of Federal authority take the more liberal view on human rights, while the States' rights advocates usually tend in the other direction.

Those who voted for the Gavagan antilynching bill, to a man, believe that the extension of Federal authority is necessary to cope with this national evil; while every vote against it came from the advocates of States' rights. In view of these things, it is hard to convince the unsophisticated mind of the Negro that the ardent disciples of States' rights are likely to accord him evenhanded justice, either in the making, the interpretation, or the enforcement of the law.

The Corcoran Exhibit.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Biennial Exhibition of Contemporary Paintings at the Corcoran Galleries is of such range and power as to convince the interested observer that the patiently hoped-for signs of progress are indeed making their appearance. Painters are not playing with pigments in the superficial and buck-passing manner so much in evidence during the doldrums or the decade following the World War. May we continue in good conscience and honest endeavor that the noble boundaries of our earlier proud estate may be rediscovered and repossessed.

One important element is still lacking. This is that the prize pictures are not satisfactory and sufficiently representative to the lay public. It has been finally and wisely decreed that this long-suffering body of individuals are to sit in judgment when art is on trial. It is always both wise and well to take the whims, the predilections and the prayers of the laymen into full consideration. It may be simply stated that it is up to the artist, and in particular to those who make the awards, to see well to it that the final appeal is made to this perennial examiner who, now and again, is alert and informed.

In general, no blame attaches to the society of contemporary artists for those recurrent miscarriages. Beyond peradventure of doubt it is their combined wish that that which most nearly approaches universal worth shall be honored as being worthy to be set apart as representative of their lives and of their devotions. Those who are, for one reason or another, appointed to pass on the pictures, selecting one or more as prize exhibits, are not playing fairly with the public.

It appears that jurymen are quite willing to be known and recognized as the foster parents of the so-called cult of modern art. This school sprang up out of the dust and ashes of maladjustment, full-armored and arrogant and went lunging hither and yon until, finding themselves in No Man's Land, a wild scramble was set up to recontact sources of power. Then it was that what little they had was taken away from them. Well, their batteries are about run out, and the poor prescience of the progenitors of the cult or spirit of modernism in art were better trained on a worthier objective.

The tenacity with which life clings to the emaciated body of modernism in art is nothing short of remarkable. Who is keeping it alive, and why? Is it another case of repeated transfusions of subterranean motives? We have been and are ready and willing, if you please, to read its obituary. The thing was pathological at birth. Why nurse and nurture a child of no promise far beyond the period required by a liberally established school of utility in which period its worth or lack of worth was to be determined?

Gentlemen, why neglect so great a salvation? The fathers are not pleased. If we of today are not the children of their bosoms, then are we fatherless. And the muse of history is that the fatherless seek with might and main for substitutions.

Gentlemen of the juries, an alert and informed laity demands better treatment at your hands.

Approves Pegler.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: All honor to them to whom honor is due!

Westbrook Pegler shows clearly, with plain, honest facts to back him, that not all is gold that glitters. And we honor and respect him for it. We congratulate him for the fearless manner in which he exposes some of our higher lights who are rotten internally and glamorous externally.

Some people think that Pegler is too brutally frank. Well, this writer has heard the opinion of a number of very fine men who praise him highly. To quote one, "It's refreshing to find a writer who strikes boldly at the truth when there is so much hypocrisy. His article on burlesque will find an echo in the heart of every decent man."

The Proper Defense of Indigents.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The rapidly growing Nation-wide movement to establish by law public defenders to represent accused poor persons, so that no one need be denied justice because of poverty, has just received a tremendous impetus, through the recent introduction of bills by Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, and Representative Byron N. Scott, of California, to establish public defenders in every Federal District Court.

It is also significant of the changing attitude of bar groups on this question that the National Lawyers Guild, at its first national convention in Washington, D. C., on February 21, 1937, unanimously adopted my resolution of a special committee thereon.

The inherent justice, efficiency and economy of the public defender plan, whereby a pauper defendant, possibly innocent, may be as amply protected by law as the vicious or gangster defendant, probably guilty, is no longer a debatable question, since public defenders in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Oakland, Chicago, Hartford, New Haven, Bridgeport and elsewhere have amply justified their existence from every angle. The reluctance of the organized bar and many legal aid groups, to conform to a spirit of true progress in the administration of the criminal law, in the proper defense of indigents, still persists, in spite of the modern trend toward State defense for the poor.

It is the duty of the State to insure equal justice and to prove that our theory of "equality before the law" means precisely that. This duty cannot properly be assumed by, or delegated to, legal aid groups, voluntary defenders, or the organized bar. None of such agencies have the necessary money, prestige or power to do the job efficiently. All of them thus far have wholly failed to remedy the glaring defects of our vicious "assigned counsel" system, which supplies to a pauper defendant (in the average felony case) an uncompensated lawyer, whom he neither knows, trusts nor wants. Accused poor persons, presumably innocent until proven guilty, are entitled to the best legal service to protect their fundamental rights, not the worst. Adequate legal defense is vital to the life or liberty of the accused. It concerns not only the individual defendant, or the lawyer who is imposed on him by the court, but society as a whole—and the Government itself.

These public defender bills are a step toward the solution of the problem of the poor in the criminal courts. They should be whole-heartedly supported by the general public. MAYER C. GOLDMAN.

Memorabilia.

"CAN you stand another dinner party, Helen?"

The woman sitting at the piano, idly running her fingers over the keys, nodded her well-groomed, bobbed head. "I'd love it—where to this time?"

Dr. and Mrs. Chase Martin, a grand couple. He's new here, from Maine, I believe. He is doing some outstanding work at the institute. Mrs. Martin is a dear—you'll like them, I am sure. Shall I accept?"

"By all means—but what did you say the name is?"

"Chase Martin."

The woman at the piano stopped playing abruptly. "Chase Martin!" she whispered his name. After all these years, it was unbelievable! She continued to play and a melody she hadn't thought of in years came dreamily back to her.

He met them at the door and Helen was introduced. She held his hand longer than was necessary, hoping that he would recognize her and the fervid romance of the past be recalled to them. He but smiled graciously and remarked how delighted he was to meet her. Later when he passed her a cocktail he asked casually, "Are you enjoying your visit here, Mrs. Jackson?"

"Indeed I am!" Helen smiled. "All of Jack's and Dorothy's friends have been so sweet to me I couldn't help but be very happy, and now on my last evening here I have the pleasure of meeting you and Mrs. Martin. I am sorry it had to be the last evening." She smiled up at him, hoping that by this time he had recognized her, but still he seemed totally unconscious of ever having seen her before. Helen hoped that sometime during the evening they would have a chance to be alone, then she would have fun teasing him. Undoubtedly the reason he had not remembered her was that she was so much more beautiful now than in the days when he used to know her. Then she was just a slip of a girl with no claim to looks and her family so poor they couldn't even dress her properly.

Dinner was over. The bridge tables were being set up. Mrs. Martin's hand lingered on Helen's shoulder as she asked, "And how about you, Mrs. Jackson—will it be bridge or conversation?" Before Helen could answer, Dr. Martin, catching her eye, suggested:

"Maybe Mrs. Jackson would like to see the shop where I restore the antiques. It's up three flights of stairs, if you don't mind the climb."

The opportunity to be alone with him had come at last and she hurriedly accepted his invitation.

Mrs. Martin's voice called after them as they mounted the circular stairs, "Don't be a martyr to the cause, Mrs. Jackson. When you have had enough just leave, or Dr. Martin will keep you there all evening."

Helen called back lightly, "Oh, I shall, Mrs. Martin."

"Are you really interested in old pieces, or are you just being obliging?"

Helen wasn't interested in the antiques, but with her smiles and bright eyes she assured Dr. Martin that she would love nothing better than seeing his shop.

The attic room was heavy with the smell of old wood. Clocks ticked everywhere, their faces contradicting each other.

"It's a fascinating thing, this restoring old furniture," and Dr. Martin ran his hand over a recently finished chest of drawers.

"It must be," remarked Helen, as her eyes fell upon a picture hanging on the wall. She walked slowly over to it.

"Who's this?" she asked, quietly.

"Oh that—that's a picture of me when I was 19, taken with my first sweetheart."

Helen leaned closer and recognized herself. She asked calmly, "What was her name, Dr. Martin?"

"Helen was her first name; for the moment I can't recall her last name." He joined her and they stood before the picture.

"Would you remember her if you saw her now, Doctor?"

"Well, that picture was taken 25 years ago. Women do such strange things to themselves these days it's hard to say. She nearly ruined my young life. I was honestly in love with her and she sort of led me to think that when I finished school we would marry. It seemed, though, that I was just a summer romance to her, someone to kill time with. She was already engaged to a wealthy man. One day this fair Helen up and leaves me. Later on I read about her brilliant marriage. The hurt she handed me lasted for years. But now I'll not bore you any longer with my youthful tragedy."

The last guest had departed. Dr. Martin took his wife in his arms and whispered in her ear. "I love you so very much, dear. Just suppose I had made the mistake of marrying someone else. Someone, say, like Mrs. Jackson—and I might have if she hadn't run off with the other man."

Jane Martin looked questioningly at her husband. "What do you mean—if she hadn't run off with the other man?"

"Oh, Janie, dear, I don't know what I'm talking about. I'm so darn sleepy. Come on, darling, before you have to carry me upstairs." He stifled a yawn, and preceded her up the stairs, untying his tie. "Oh, by the way, dear, what was Mrs. Jackson's name before she was married?" RUTH STIEFF.

The Duke's Prospects.

HIS RECENT MAJESTY the Duke of Windsor seems to be definitely off the pay roll of the British government, but his nuisance value is such that he may reasonably expect to live the rest of his days in the style to which he is accustomed.

The British put a fancy price on the duke's nuisance value, for it now seems to them unthinkable that a former British King and Emperor should open a saloon in New York in competition with Jack Dempsey and Mickey Walker, or write intimate recollections in competition with Cornelius Vanderbilt, jr., the noted straight-from-the-shoulder journalist who got tired of the sham and tinsel of it all and said farewell to Fifth avenue.

But what is his nuisance power actually, and what would happen to the empire if he should start a pub in the States, or do a book, or sell testimonials.

Miss Isbel MacDonald, the daughter of Old Ramsay, started a pub a couple of years ago, serving schooners with the very hands that once passed the Scotch across the table at No. 10 Downing street.

THERE WAS a quick flutter of publicity about Miss MacDonald's tavern in Britain and other countries; then Mussolini moved into Abyssinia, and the world forgot all about Isbel's place.

She may be there still, toting up the pints and quarts, the bubble-and-squeak and the vegetable marrow, but they are having another coronation soon, and the nation seems safe.

Not that Miss MacDonald meant to be a nuisance, to be sure, for pubbing seemed to her a decent and agreeable business, and she explained that the only difference was that she now was being paid for the drinks, whereas in Downing street, when she put out to an endless routine of hollow legs from foreign lands, the drinks were on the roof, as they say.

She and her pop were compelled by the rules of hospitality and English tradition to eat the checks, and they came to a mighty total in her time.

A BOOK?

Well, now, who hasn't done a book, and how long does a book last? And what could the Duke of Windsor write about others without writing as bad or worse about himself, and what harm could that do anyone but him?

A magazine series?

The same, and, moreover, there is nobody so dead and lonely as a one-shock celebrity who writes in the mood of nuisance.

His story told and his checks spent, he is all through, and people have a certain opinion of him and give him a certain kind of look.

Testimonials?

Why, testimonials have been the business of the British royal family for generations. Everywhere in London, everywhere in the world that British merchandise is sold, the royal testimonials are cited on the chutney bottles, the whisky, rum and gin bottles, the cheese crocks and the woolen union suits, for the British long ago realized that there was a powerful come-on in the inscription "By Royal Warrant, Purveyors to H. M. the King," or "H. M. the Queen."

The late King George was mildly peevish at the vulgarity of the Dowager Marie of Roumania in selling a cosmetic testimonial, but he forget that he had been giving them for years himself. Not for cash did he give his testimonials, but it came to the same thing, for they boosted sales at home and abroad, and that meant trade and prosperity, and it was part of his job to promote trade and prosperity. Testimonials would be no novelty.

WE HAVE HAD some professional nuisances in this country who set out to blackmail their families, and probably a few got away with it. But those who carried out their threats only made spectacles of themselves.

Well, then, moving pictures?

But, bless you, as Mr. Dickens would have said, who on earth has been seen more in the movies than the Duke of Windsor, unless it might be Mickey Mouse? Who would tear the front off a theater to see the duke in the movies with those double chins under his eyes and an expression that makes Mr. Merjou look like a child prodigy?

Saloons? Books? Articles? Tin cups? Movies?

Well, for six months or a year, maybe, but what about the years after the money is gone and the nuisance is exploded? What about the long haul?

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Reunion in Tours.

Edward (as they embrace)—My dear!

Wally—Darling!

Edward—I thought this moment would never come.

Wally—I was beginning to have misgivings, too.

Edward—How does it seem to be free?

Wally—You ought to know, Eddie.

* * * *

Edward—It's been great. I haven't had a care in the world . . . except that divorce court. No parades! No military reviews! No slum inspections!

Wally—But are you sure you won't miss them?

Edward—Miss them my eye! Why, I saw a photo of George the other day. It's begun to tell on him already.

* * * *

Wally—You've lost weight, haven't you?

Edward—Of course. How can anybody undergo the strain of getting through a telephone call from Austria to France every night and not lose weight. You're thinner, too.

Wally—Yes, I must have dropped ten pounds eluding newspaper correspondents. Have they been after you all the time, too?

Edward—I even found one under the bed the other night.

Wally—Only one? There were four under mine!

* * * *

Wally—Have you been lonely, Eddie?

Edward—I couldn't have been more miserable had I been back in Buckingham opening messages from Stanley Baldwin.

Wally—Suppose you were just out of Buckingham listening to criticism by the Archbishop of Canterbury.

Edward—I stand corrected. Now, darling, we must be married at once.

Wally—Are you sure you still want me after all our love has cost you? Are you sure you have no regrets?

Edward—None!

Wally—But if it hadn't been for me you might still be King of England.

Edward—That's why I'm grateful to you.

* * * *

Wally—You say such sweet things.

Edward—And I can say them now without precipitating a national crisis. Boy, how good it seems to be through with crises!

Wally—A little while ago your life was just one crisis after another; you didn't even get a chance to taper off.

Edward—Somehow I have been able to give them up without any effort. I don't even miss them any more.

* * * *

Wally—They tell me you have been climbing mountains. Did you enjoy it?

Edward—No, but the newspaper correspondents expected it of me. But enough, darling. We must be married at once. And where do you wish to go on your honeymoon?

Wally—I'm not particular, Edward, except on one point.

Edward—What is that, my beloved?

Wally—Wherever we go, promise you won't take me to any movies of the coronation.

Edward—I was just going to make the same request of you.

Wally—Duke!

Edward—Duchess!

Statesmanship.

Oh, the things you can plan
(And isn't it funny?)
For the great good of man
On another guy's money!

Defense Of The Individual

Ogden Mills Extols Advantages Of Free Society Here.

Government Controls Must Be Limited, Speaker Argues.

Following are extracts from a third address delivered last night by Ogden L. Mills before the new School for Social Research in New York City:

OGDEN L. MILLS.

A GOVERNMENT cannot be content with merely negative duties. Whenever the welfare of society demands its intervention it will intervene; whenever it is necessary to maintain equality of opportunity; or to protect the weak from the strong; or to preserve free competition; or to meet those responsibilities toward the less fortunate which modern society has decided to assume.

Legitimate intervention, far from curtailing freedom, actually enlarges its boundaries. Wise labor legislation, for instance, does not deprive the worker of his liberty, in a true sense. It projects rights and opportunities that might otherwise be denied him.

In asserting the duty of government to intervene whenever the common welfare demands it, I would place three broad restrictions on the scope of intervention.

Governmental activities should never assume such dimensions as to entail an unbearable burden of taxation. It is quite possible so to load down the productive organism that it can no longer function. It is quite possible, under the guise of taxing income, actually to divert to unproductive use the flow of capital essential to productive purposes. It is quite possible so to curtail reward as to destroy initiative, ambition and enterprise. We are in danger of doing all of these right now.

Secondly, the activities of government must never be such as to destroy the flexibility and adaptiveness of the economic system. This is what the N. R. A. did.

Third, they must never be such as to encourage dependence and to destroy individual self-reliance, responsibility and character. Such a tendency is definitely visible in some of our present-day policies.

Our Federal and State governments have ever asserted their right to intervene when intervention was necessary.

Changed Conditions May Bring Government Revisions.

CHANGED CONDITIONS and new problems may impose new duties on government and different methods in the performance of old ones. But so long as the character of our people remains unchanged, the essential character of their government must, too, remain unchanged. Let us continue to be ourselves. Let us not become servile imitators of those with whose traditions and outlook we have nothing in common.

The same is true of our economic system. There is no other system consistent with democratic institutions.

Its main characteristics are:

1. A dynamic quality derived from the energies of countless individuals operating in a free field, and actuated by normal aspirations and ambitions.

2. The competitive process which, by exerting unremitting pressure, compels growth, change and progress.

3. The practice of saving, which assures the constant flow of capital into productive enterprise to replenish other capital that is constantly dissipated through the march of progress.

4. The price mechanism, described in our last lecture. It directs labor and capital into the right channels, thus aiding in bringing demand and supply into balance.

These four forces—the creative impulse of the individual, the pressure of competition, the free flow of capital, and the price mechanism—all serve the primary purpose of increasing efficiency in production and distribution. If, as one of the Marxist liberal writers said, the profit-making motive demands lower wages, inferior general conditions in industry, a dimunition of the charges imposed upon capital by taxation and a consequent contraction of the social services, I, for one, would reject any such form of capitalism as fatally defective.

Such has not been our experience with our American system.

This does not mean that there are not many million families in the United States whose incomes are far below what they should be.

The only way to increase the national income is to produce more goods and services.

It should be obvious—although it does not seem to be—that the more goods there are to divide, the greater is the general well being; the fewer the goods to divide, the poorer the people.

Free Society Exists Only On Will Of Members.

THIS FREE SOCIETY of ours does not look for cohesion and purpose to the coercive power of government. It exists—and can continue to exist—only by virtue of a common agreement that a certain social pattern is desirable. Its vitality depends upon the existence of indispensable qualities, and upon the willingness of its members to conform to the necessary conditions.

First among the qualities is self-reliance, and ability voluntarily to unite with others in a spirit of mutual helpfulness and of self-help.

America has been created not by its government, but by its people, acting for the most part within the boundaries of their cities, counties and States. This immense country of ours could never have been built and developed on any basis—that basis being a sense of community responsibility in a voluntary cooperative effort—without any cement of government coercion.

Secondly, I cannot conceive of a free society in which men do not have a profound feeling of responsibility to their neighbors.

In the third place, we have recognized that there is a natural order in the conduct of human affairs. That natural order demands that nothing should be transferred to the larger unit which can adequately be performed by the smaller. It begins with the family and the responsibility to care for his own placed upon his head. It extends to the village, with its set of duties, the municipality, the county, the State, and, last of all, the national government. Being distant, it is not permitted to direct and govern the life of the individual.

This diversity of authority is what we know as the principle of home rule. It is based on the knowledge that the closer the government to the people, the better the government, because power divorced from the source of authority soon becomes irresponsible. Home rule is the cornerstone of free institutions, which the founders of this Nation well recognized.

Dictatorships Reduce Peoples To Mediocrity.

NEXT WE COME to leadership. Dictatorships look to one man; aristocracies to the few. Each reduces the people to a level of mediocrity. Men of intellect and character, with qualities of leadership, are not wanted. They become inconvenient, and must be suppressed, even at the cost of progress and enlightenment.

In a democracy there is contsant need for leaders in all fields of activity. These are drawn from the ranks of the people. They rise through merit, and their ranks are constantly replenished from the same source. They are the men and women to whom we must look for progress in the arts and sciences, in professions, in industry, in trade and in the life of the community.

The men who established our government never contemplated a leaderless society. When they turned their backs on kings and the hereditary aristocracy, they looked to the people to develop their own leaders. When they decentralized the power of government they expected those leaders to be found in the several communities. When they limited the power of government and relied on the self-reliance and co-operative spirit of the citizens they anticipated that leadership would be confined to the sphere of politics.

Their expectations have been realized. We have had leadership. During the greater part of our national life Washington counted but little in the life of the average family. In the day to day task of building a nation local leadership was what counted most. Nor, in the main, has it been political leadership. In an economically minded nation energetic and ambitious men have leaned more to business and the professions than to politics. In every community there are to be found these so-called leading citizens.

Fifth, antisocial acts and unfair practices through which men seek to profit illegitimately at the expense of their fellows must be stamped out, not only by statutory penalties, but by an aroused public conscience. Business men, for instance, must police themselves. Public opinion and social ostracism are powerful weapons to compel decent behavior.

SIXTH, a free society should be a proprietary society, in the sense of a wide diffusion of property ownership. A great majority of men and women must have a direct stake in the existing order, and a corresponding interest in its preservation.

I do not mean that we should endeavor to return to the days of handicraft and of the individual artisan, as has been suggested by a number of writers. We cannot afford to sacrifice all of the immense benefits of mass production. But we must do all in our power to encourage home ownership, farm ownership and the growth of small business enterprises.

We must use to the full the weapon of competition to break up large uneconomic units and undue concentration of economic power. Even today, after a period of industrial concentration, according to the Twentieth Century Fund, more than 81 per cent of our entire economic activity is carried on by partnerships and individuals, and by small and medium-sized corporations.

We must make the main effort, however, through the income side. When men and women have more than enough to provide necessities and the first comforts, they begin to save. They may buy their home, or a farm, or go into business for themselves, or acquire a savings account, or purchase securities of life insurance. They become proprietors.

The problem is so to raise the income of the lower income groups that those who have the desire and will to save may do so.

The first essentials are increased production, increased productive efficiency, and the passing on of the benefits in such a way as to raise real wages by lowering prices. There are other influences that can help toward this attainment. Protection against sweatshops—stabiliaztion of employment—lower taxes, and such relief from the support of dependents as will be afforded by social legislation, will all contribute.

The objective is clear. It will not be attained in a day. Our job is to see that we move steadily toward it.

Competitive System Depends On Integrity.

FINALLY, the complete integrity of the competitive process is vital. Government must suppress monopoly, combinations in restraint of trade, price fixing, agreements to suppress competition, and all other monopolistic practices.

This is fundamental in our whole philosophy.

1. Because competition and the price mechanism are the life blood of the economic system.

2. To keep open the door of opportunity.

3. To promote the productive efficiency which assures progress.

4. To pass on the benefits of increased efficiency to consumers as the surest approach to the diffusion of prosperity and increased productivity.

5. To prevent unhealthy and uneconomic concentration of wealth and power.

If in recent years we had kept our grip on these realities we would not be in the critical position we find ourselves today.

Under such a social organization, to expect the Federal Government to solve the problems of the individual is ridiculous. There can be no responsibility without corresponding authority. To solve the problems of the individual the central government has to control his actions, thus transforming a free society into a collectivist one.

If we do not go quite so far as direct responsibility for the welfare of the individual, but look for a system of what Col. Leonard Ayres calls "managed economics," that is, "one in which the government controls the volumes of output of the principal products, and the conditions of hours and wages of the workers," this likewise calls for revolutionary changes in our institutions, leading at a slower pace to the same inevitable end.

Planning of this character is progressive and tends to include an ever-widening field of activities. The government restricts the planting of cotton; the farmer turns to peanuts. The government restricts peanut growing; the farmer increases his potato crop. Until finally it becomes a crime to grow more potatoes than the government allows. The whole economic organism is so intimately connected that control at one point inevitably entails successive controls at almost all points.

Planning Leads Only To More And More Planning.

NEW RIGIDITIES appear, the economic system loses its flexibility; the more the government plans, the more impossible it becomes for individuals to calculate the effects of official acts and to make their own plans. Selfishly interested groups use political pressure to achieve their ends regardless of general economic consequences. And the more the economic machine bogs down, the more deeply the government becomes involved. Having undertaken the responsibility for economic conditions and for the solution of economic problems, it cannot let go—even if it were willing to relinquish its new powers, which is unlikely.

This, too, is the road to collectivism and dictatorship.

I submit that what we want can be attained—and more surely attained without the destruction of fundamental values.

One may well ask, then, what do we want?

1. Peace, for war means destruction and chaos.

2. Opportunity for each, no matter what his condition, to achieve and to progress in accordance with his inclinations and abilities.

3. A standard of living sufficiently high to establish general well-being, with an always widening opportunity for leisure, recreation and spiritual development.

4. Increasing security and protection.

5. Adequate care and protection for those unable to provide for, or to protect themselves.

6. A more stable existence, free alike from the peaks of illusory prosperity and the very real valleys of temporary depression.

The attainment of these ideals is entirely consistent with the continued existence of our free society. Having come along the road this far, who is it who says we can go no further?

That Berlin-Rome Axis Again.

THE REPORTS from Rome concerning the Neurath-Mussolini conversations, now drawing to a close, are conflicting, to say the least. Some observers on the spot insist that there is a widening rift in the lute of Italo-German amity which the two statesmen have not succeeded in mending. Yet other, equally well-informed, correspondents predict more intensive Italo-German collaboration in the political, military, industrial and cultural fields as a result of the Rome meeting.

It would seem, at first glance, impossible to reconcile these reports. Equally conflicting are the reports that the Berlin and Rome governments are more firmly united than ever in their determination to insure a Spanish rebel victory, and, as others say, that Germany and Italy no longer see eye to eye on the Spanish problem.

Yet, paradoxically, something can be said for each of these seemingly irreconcilable theses. For German-Italian relations involve both centrifugal and centripetal factors. While, at the present juncture of affairs in Europe they are unquestionably being drawn together, their respective aims are by no means parallel. Thus while one set of circumstances keep them friends, another set of circumstances tends to make them enemies. That is why it is by no means impossible for Berlin and Rome to be united and divided at one and the same time.

* * * *

IT IS A TRUISM of diplomacy that it is not friendship for each other but fear of outsiders which draws nations together into a combination. To cite but one typical instance, Great Britain and Russia buried the hatchet in 1907, after many decades of bitter rivalry in the Near East and Asia, not because they had begun to love each other any more but because they had begun to love Germany less.

As a matter of fact, Russia and Great Britain were far from happy partners in the seven years before the war, when both nations were members of the Triple Entente. The continuing Anglo-Russian struggle in Persia, during that period, is proof of that. Yet London's suspicions of St. Petersburg and St. Petersburg's irritation with London were much less important in British and Russian eyes than their common antagonism to Germany.

By the same token Nazi Germany and Fascist Italy find it necessary to co-operate at the present time despite a fundamental conflict in their long range policies concerning Europe. Their dislike and fear of each other are overshadowed, at the moment, however, by their dislike and fear of other powers that actually or potentially stand in the way of German and Italian ambitions.

Yet in each case the possibility of making an alternative arrangement with another power or powers exists.

* * * *

ITALY CAN, after all, revive the Stresa front and in so doing discard the Berlin-Rome axis in favor of co-operation with Great Britain, France and their allies in the maintenance of the status quo. Germany, on the other hand, can accept the Anglo-French offer of financial and economic assistance and agree, as the Paris and London governments have urged her to do, to revive the Locarno pact while entering an east European regional agreement.

To be sure, in taking such steps, the Fascist powers would have to abandon certain aims they have long harbored. And it is clear that they are not yet ready to perform such an act of abnegation. Yet the path to such action is nonetheless open to each of the partners of the German-Italian combination. This they realize, both for themselves and so far as their quondam collaborator is concerned.

That is why, no doubt, there is always a presumption of artificiality in the enthusiasm manifested during every exchange of visits between Italian and German statesmen. That is why, too, so many trips to Berlin and Rome have been found advisable. It is not necessary to uproot a growing plant every month or so to make certain that it is growing.

* * * *

THE QUESTION naturally arises: Against whom and for what are Italy and Germany co-operating? Neither, as it happens, is in any danger of attack by any third power. Their neighbors, without exception, are only too eager to live on terms of peace with them; they are even prepared to make concessions to Germany and Italy to bring about a general appeasement which would be advantageous to all concerned.

But these same neighbors are opposed to any expansion by the Third Reich and Italy that would imperil their own security. And some of the neighboring lands are also opposed to any further expansion by the Third Reich or Italy either in continental Europe or elsewhere.

That opposition, hitherto, has been weak and divided. The peace-loving democracies of Europe, whether working through the League, as at the time of Italy's Ethiopian venture, or outside the League, as during the Spanish crisis, have offered no really effective resistance to would-be aggressors.

Yet, potentially, they are in a position to offer such resistance and their capacity to do so grows daily.

* * * *

THIS FACT is clearly recognized in Berlin and Rome. Day by day the advantage grows less which they have enjoyed in their dealings with the democracies of western Europe and which has enabled Italy, on the one hand, to conquer Ethiopia and Germany, on the other hand, to smash all but the territorial clauses of the Versailles Treaty. But insofar as they still enjoy an advantage vis-a-vis the democratic powers the argument for their continued collaboration remains. The Berlin-Rome axis still has a considerable "nuisance value" from the viewpoint of Germany and Italy.

The time may not be distant when, as the British rearmament program approaches its peak, this "nuisance value" may disappear. Should that happen, Italian or German collaboration with the western democracies will be possible only on terms fixed by the latter states. The alternative for the Berlin and Rome governments, therefore, will be either complete isolation or the continuation of the Berlin-Rome axis. Yet in such a situation, Italy, as the less strong of the two Fascist powers, will be placed in an extremely difficult position.

Before that moment of isolation arrives, however, there is likely to be a drastic change in the diplomatic picture. The outwardly impressive Berlin-Rome axis is from the long-range point of view a highly fragile affair.

Another Thriller

By William Lyon Phelps.

The Chink In The Armour.

Mrs. Marie Belloc-Lowndes, whose brother, Hilare Belloc, is also a famous writer, is a veteran novelist who has written many novels as different in subject matter as could well be imagined. She is a literary expert, always has something interesting to say and knows how to say it.

Some years ago she published a murder mystery story called "The Chink in the Armour," which scored an immediate success, but which has not been reprinted. Three contemporary American writers, as different as three writers could possibly be, Alexander Woolcott, Ernest Hemingway and Edmund Lester Pearson, united in a public petition to Longmans, Green & Co., asking that the book be republished in America, and, fortunately for all concerned, this novel has recently made its appearance in a new print dress.

Now the original and interesting thing about this murder story is that it has none of the machinery of melodrama; it opens in a delightful French environment, the two leading characters adjourn to a charming and beautiful summer resort a few miles from Paris, where everything is apparently gay and lovely.

But if other readers feel as I do, they will have, even from the first chapter, a feeling of growing, concentrated, oppressive horror that closes on their minds like a slowly gathering miasma. It is impossible to describe adequately the skill with which the author does this; but I felt, as I read chapter after chapter, a steady increase of fear—as though something frightful were about to happen. Therefore I urge people who are looking for sensation to read this book, but I also urge them never under any circumstances to finish it at night. I am very glad that a half hour before midnight, when I was within 30 pages of the end, I stopped abruptly and spoke aloud and said, "I shall finish this book by daylight."

O'Mahoney's Speech

President's Court Plan Would Permit New Appointees to Remain Till 79, Fails to Assure Liberality, Senator Holds.

Excerpts from speech by Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, defining his reasons for opposing the President's court bill:

The judiciary bill, which has now been before Congress for three months, has been represented to the people of the country as the keystone of the arch of President Roosevelt's program of social and economic reform.

The bill contains language which specifically exempts from its immediate operation judges, no matter how old, who have not served ten years on the bench. Under this revision, it would be possible, if the bill should pass, for the President to appoint to the Supreme Court a man 69 years of age; indeed, a man 69 years and 11 months of age, who, if he had never served as a Federal judge, would be entitled to sit upon the bench until he had reached the age of 79 years or 79 years and 11 months, without being subject to having a mentor placed beside him.

More than that, since the bill fixes the number of judges permanently at 15, in the event six new appointments are made, then, in such case, there would be no possible way thereafter of infusing young blood into the court without a new law and a new expansion of the court. Within a comparatively short time, we should have a court of 15 old men instead of 9 old men, and nothing to do about it except by further enlargement to create a sort of House of Lords to fill the magnificent marble palace on Capitol Hill.

But the age of the justices is not the complaint of the proponents of the bill. Indeed, several of the witnesses who appeared before the Judiciary Committee on behalf of the proposal emphatically declared their opposition to any provision that would compel the retirement of judges at any given age. No one denies that Justice Brandeis now is, and that Justice Holmes, until his voluntary resignation, was an able, vigorous, just and liberal justice at a much more advanced age than that which is fixed in the bill as the age of senility. No, it is not age, but the point of view, the "economic predilections," to use the current phrase, of some of the justices that is the cause of complaint. But one of these justices, whose views are condemned and whose name is most frequently on the tongues of the advocates of the measure, is the youngest man on the bench and will not be touched by the legislation. But it will affect the venerable, the distinguished, the brilliant Brandeis, whose progressive views for a generation have been a beacon light to all who call themselves liberals.

So the bill fails on the score of age and it fails on the score of economic philosophy.

There is not a line or a syllable in this bill dealing with the issuance of injunctions by the courts. There is not a single provision in it that affects the power of the inferior courts to tie the hands of the Government in dealing with problems of public welfare. There is not a word in it that prevents the inferior courts from holding laws of Congress unconstitutional. Not a single argument made by the proponents of this bill to organized labor and to the liberal forces of the country on these grounds has the remotest bearing on the measure we are asked to support.

When asked to point out how progressive decisions by the Supreme Court would be guaranteed, the advocates of the bill acknowledge, indeed, they insist, that the President could have no contract in advance with any new justices that they would render particular decisions in particular cases, or vote to sustain acts of Congress which have not yet been written. It is acknowledged that the six new justices, since they would not constitute a majority of a court of 15, would have to depend upon the support of at least two of the present justices to uphold any act. And, it must be acknowledged that since all nine of the present justices concurred in holding the NRA unconstitutional, there would be no certainty that any members of the present court would vote with the new members in any particular case.

Thus every argument which has been advanced to sustain the bill has dissolved on the very tongues of its advocates. Only one count remains—and this is not an argument but a naive expression of hope—the hope that by "the infusion of new blood," a tendency would be developed in the Supreme Court toward a more liberal interpretation of the Constitution. When it was called to their attention that the decisions of the justices could not be predicted and that, in the past, the views and even decisions of the justices have very frequently disappointed the confidence of their Presidential sponsors, then one after another of the witnesses for the bill weakly fell back on the statement: "We must take a chance." Surely that is a very poor foundation on which to build the structure of economic justice!

The only other occasion in which there was even the slightest suspicion that the court was enlarged for a political purpose was during the administration of President Grant when two justices were added to the Supreme Court. A decision in which the Government was vitally interested was reversed, but Grant thought the expansion of the court for the purpose of influencing a decision so politically immoral an act that he always denied that he had such a purpose. But even if he had done so, I would not regard an act of his Administration as a valid precedent for any Democratic Administration. The Democratic precedents are all for the maintenance of the dignity, the honor and independence of the judiciary. Woodrow Wilson, in language that burns, once declared that the people would curse the Administration that would expand the court in order to affect its judgements.

Let us not mislead ourselves by an impatience to secure economic and social reform. Let us not injure ourselves, our objectives and our Government by our desire to repudiate those judges who, we choose to believe, have been responsible for delaying progress. If we who call ourselves liberal can by statute increase this court in order to induce or force it to interpret close constitutional questions the way we want them decided, then manifestly any succeeding Administration can do likewise and the Supreme Court will be hopelessly engulfed by the political whirlpool.

We made a sad mistake when we imagine that there can be no New Deal legislation without this court bill. What measure is proposed so strange and radical that it cannot be enacted under the Constitution as it stands? It is true, as the Attorney General, his Assistant and all the other witnesses who appeared on behalf of the judiciary bill have said, that the Constitution needs no amendment to give Congress substantive power to do the things that ought to be done. It is true that the constitutional interpretation of Chief Justice Marshall, who defined the Constitution as a broad instrument of adequate national power, would be sufficient for this hour if reasserted by the Congress in careful laws and by the courts in judgments based on early precedents. The Supreme Court has already indicated its return to the interpretation that is needed.

Let us remember that the Missouri compromise act was on the statute books for 20 years before it was attacked and invalidated. When the AAA was held unconstitutional by the Supreme Court, Congress immediately passed the soil conservation act to effect the same general purposes—and to date, it has not even been questioned in any court. There is no reason to believe that any policy now contemplated by this Administration will be subject to attack in the courts unless, by pursuing this attack upon the independence of the judiciary, we instill in the people of the United States the fear that our form of government is in danger.

If it is desirable to infuse young blood into the judiciary, the only way to do that is by constitutional amendment compelling the retirement of judges at a given age. If it is desirable to do away with divided decisions by which laws of Congress are found unconstitutional, the only way to do that is by constitutional amendment or, if Senator Norris is correct in his contention, by a statute requiring a concurrence of more than a majority of the members of the court to invalidate a particular law. If it is desirable to keep the court in tune with popular opinion, the only way to do that is by constitutional amendment doing away with life tenure and fixing definite terms.

But we are told that it would be impossible to ratify such a constitutional amendment. My friends, when this bill was sent to the Congress, the legislatures of 42 States were in session and of these 42 legislatures, only four were in States that were completely controlled by the Republican Party. I am persuaded that any amendment designed to accomplish any one or all of the three formal changes with respect to age and tenure of service could have been ratified in less time than it has taken for the Senate Committee on the Judiciary to consider this bill.

Just another word—when I hear the statement made that because 27,000,000 citizens voted last November for the President for whose election I labored and in whose triumph I rejoiced, I am reminded of a declaration of principle to be found in the eloquent constitution of Wyoming, a declaration which breathes the very soul of America.

"Arbitrary power," says the constitution of Wyoming, "exists nowhere in a republic, not even in the largest majority."

The majority is represented in the President and in the Congress. The rights of the majority are adequately protected by those who are elected to make the law and by him who is elected to enforce the law. But the right of the individual to be protected against the arbitrary use of power can be guaranteed only by the courts and if the independence of the courts is not maintained, all guarantees of freedom and justice vanish. This is not in any sense a partisan question, it is the most fundamental question of basic Americanism which has been presented to the Congress in a generation.

It would be the most tragic mistake in the history of the liberal movement in this country if this bill should pass. It accomplishes nothing except to divide the forces of economic and social justice.

This country does not need new judges on the Supreme Court. It needs jobs for the unemployed. It needs opportunities for the rising generation. It needs to open the door of the future to youth It needs economic stability.

The problem is pressing for solution now, not at some uncertain date in the future when the Supreme Court may hand down a constitutional decision in some case brought by litigants, who may not yet be born, to interpret some law that has not yet been passed.

The natural wealth of the United States is great enough to support every inhabitant in peace and plenty—yet millions are in distress. There is no man so blind now to deny that this is a National problem.

The court bill does not solve it and holds out no prospect of solving it. Instead of indulging in futile debate over abstract questions of judicial power and the desirability of authorizing the President to appoint judges whose action cannot be foretold and who will have no power to legislate, let Congress exercise the power which no one now denies that it has. Let us meet the situation with which we are now confronted by substantive law in the manner that the logic of modern economic conditions renders necessary.

Great though the achievements of the President have been; wise and necessary though his social program is; loyal as I have been and am to him personally and to the political movement he represents, I cannot believe that the judiciary bill should pass. Patience will pay us dividends. Let us enact the program the people want. The courts cannot hold it back. But we who call ourselves liberal, we can defeat it by insisting on a measure which violates the deepest convictions of constitutional propriety of thousands of a great President's friends.

WARNER BROS. Dedicate Tonight Newest Addi

GALA FESTIVITIES USHER IN AMUSEMENT CENTER ON WISCONSIN AVENUE

Calvert Theater Opens Here Tonight; Special Program Planned.

Warner Bros. will make their latest contribution to the entertainment history of Washington tonight.

Tonight at 8:30 their beautiful new picture playhouse, the Calvert Theater, will be dedicated at 2324 Wisconsin avenue northwest.

The doors of the new theater will swing open at 7:15. First nighters will be invited to inspect the house before the inaugural program begins at 8:30, with music by a salon string ensemble under the direction of Alex Podnos.

The Hon. Melvin C. Hazen, chairman of the District Commissioners, and Mr. Myron Walker, president of the Glover Park Citizens Association, will speak during the dedicatory ceremonies.

Warners' Sixteenth.

The sixteenth theater operated by Warner Bros. in Washington and the thirty-eighth in the Washington territory directed by John J. Payette, general zone manager, the Calvert stands as the last word in modern motion picture theater construction.

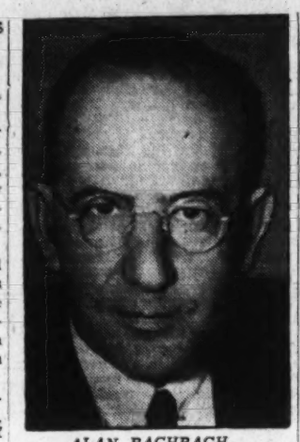
It was built by the Globe Amusement Co., of Washington, of which Joseph Makover is president. It will be operated by Warner Bros. under a long-term lease. Three modern stores are included in the Calvert Building.

Some 40,000 residents of old Georgetown, Cathedral Heights and Massachusetts Avenue Park will have in the Calvert a community theater embodying the latest improvements and developments for the entertainment, comfort and convenience of theater patrons.

Eberson's Design.

Located on Wisconsin avenue between Calvert street and Hall place, the Calvert will seat 1,100 persons in luxurious chairs arranged in the continental seating plan, with three full feet from back to back of the rows of seats. This unique arrangement will make the new theater one of the most comfortable in Washington.

John Eberson, internationally famous architect, designed the Calvert, which is the first theater in this section of the country to present a modern front combining the latest developments in colorful architectural glass and marble. The building itself is of limestone and granite.



ALAN BACHRACH.

A spacious lobby, 35 by 50 feet, provides a most attractive approach to the theater proper, which is of the one-floor type. Brown and red dominate the decoration scheme.

One of the largest screens in Washington, combined with latest-type sound and projection apparatus, will make the screen presentations outstanding.

Completely Air-Cooled.

Complete air-conditioning will provide comfortable temperature and clean, washed air in both summer and winter. There is not a radiator in the building, warm air being supplied in cold weather through the same ventilating system that provides the cool air in summer.

Appointments throughout the theater are the most modern available, the Calvert having been designed to take advantage of every modern development without any of the harsh lines or garish effects of so-called "modernistic design." Light is supplied by attractive direct and indirect fixtures and special outlets.

The Calvert embodies the full knowledge and experience of its distinguished architect, John Eberson, who has to his credit more than 500 theaters in the United States.

Totally unlike old-time auditoriums, it nevertheless retains the best features of the older houses in combination with new improvements.

The Calvert was constructed under the direction of A. Julian Brylawski, manager of the real estate department of the Washington zone, and under the general supervision of Herman A. Maier, chief of construction for Warner Bros.

Bachrach Manager.

Alan Bachrach, manager of Warner Bros. Calvert Theater, has been associated with show business for 27 years. He comes to the new theater from the Apollo, where he served with distinction for two years.

Born in Baltimore, the son of the Bachrach who founded the famous photographic studios, Mr. Bachrach came to Washington when he was 20 to manage the Bachrach Studio here. When this was sold to a cousin, he joined "Daddy" Brylawski, one of Washington's pioneer motion picture theater men, and was made manager of, first The Pastime, on Pennsylvania avenue between Four and a Half and Sixth streets, and then the Casino, which was located where Hechts' store now stands.

In 1917, Mr. Bachrach joined the Army and served for two years. After the war he spent some time as manager of Robinson's Music Store here, and then—in 1926—he was made manager of Brylawski's Academy Theater in Hagerstown, a post which he continued to hold after Warner Bros. acquired this theater in 1929. Since then Mr. Bachrach has continued with the organization in managerial capacities at the Arcade Theater, Waynesboro, and at the Ambassador, Home and Apollo Theaters in Washington.

Mr. Bachrach is an enthusiastic baseball fan. He is often seen leaving his residence, 3313 Thirty-fourth street, for an early morning game of golf. Strangely enough—for a Bachrach—he hasn't owned a camera since he sold his studio here in 1910.

Commissioner Hazen and Myron Walker Are to Speak.

Theaters Bring World to You

The gates of progress and romance never close while the doors of Washington's motion picture theaters are open. They know no season, depend on no particular brand of weather.

Still within the reach of all of us is life and laughter, travel and adventure, beauty and science—while human events march vividly across the silver screen. This coming year the movies will live as never before, closer to their audiences in their sweeping interpretations of American life and morals. They and they alone reflect every angle of how we live, touching every aspect of human emotion.

Present productions and those scheduled for the months ahead in Washington's motion picture theaters mark the culmination of the greatest artistic effort in moviedom to give you superb entertainment and fascinating education. You have usually enjoyed the movies. You will like them even better now.

Attend the movies regularly. In no other way can you get so close to life for so little.

Identical Twins in Calvert's Premiere

If you should want Billy Mauch for a radio program and put in a call to the Mauch home, the youngster probably would appear promptly, but you'd never know whether he was Billy or his twin brother Bobby.

The 12-year-olds are identical twins and are equally talented as radio, stage or screen performers. They are now playing the title roles in "The Prince and the Pauper," at the Calvert Theater tonight.

Theaters Show Friendly Spirit

The residential theater radiates a spirit of friendliness and hospitality.

To pass through its doors is to enter its heart; in its shadowed aisles there is surcease from sorrow; its silver screen is the roadway of new life and new adventure.

Troubles vanish and worries disappear within the four walls of the residential theater. It sends its patrons out into the world again, stronger to face everyday life.

If you come to the theater in a laughing mood, it greets you with hilarity. It offers its brightest smiles to greet your own, and entering into the spirit of the hour, presents its own best contribution to your mirth. Your happy evening is made more joyous because of the fellowship in the theater.

Whatever your mood and however you may feel, the ideal theater will offer something of value to you, something for which you have been seeking.

SIXTEENTH HERE.

The Calvert Theater is the sixteenth theater operated in Washington by Warner Bros., and the thirty-eighth in the Washington zone directed by John J. Payette, general zone manager.

Stars Feature Program for First Week

The Washington premiere of "The Prince and the Pauper," Warner Brothers picturization of Mark Twain's famous novel, will be the inaugural attraction tonight at the new Calvert Theater. Errol Flynn and the Mauch twins, Billy and Bobby, are featured in the cast of this dramatic story.

Claude Rains, Henry Stephenson, Barton MacLane and hundreds of others appear in the supporting cast. William Keighley directed "The Prince and the Pauper" and Erich Wolfgang Korngold provided the musical score.

A "preview" of the coronation of England's King is provided in the film, 20 minutes of this ceremony being included in the story, when Tom, the pauper, is almost crowned King instead of Edward, the rightful ruler.

"The Prince and the Pauper" will be presented at the Calvert tonight only. Its regular Washington engagement will begin Friday, May 14, at the Earle Theater, downtown.

Week's Program.

Tomorrow, May 7, the Calvert will begin its regular schedule of matinee and evening performances, opening at 2 p. m. "The King and The Chorus Girl," with Fernand Gravet and Joan Blondell will be the Friday attraction.

On Saturday, May 8, Carole Lombard and Fred MacMurray will be seen in "Swing High, Swing Low."

"Maytime," with Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy, will be presented Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, May 9, 10 and 11.

"On the Avenue," with Dick Powell and Madeleine Carroll, will be the attraction Wednesday and Thursday, May 12 and 13.

"Marked Woman," starring Bette Davis, will be offered on Friday, May 14, and the series of inaugural attractions will be completed on Saturday, May 15, with Simone Simon and James Stewart in "Seventh Heaven."

Productions from all of Hollywood's great studios will be presented for patrons of the Calvert.

STARS ON HAND.

Errol Flynn, Joan Blondell, Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy, Bette Davis, Simone Simon, Dick Powell, Carole Lombard and Fred MacMurray—a group of outstanding Hollywood favorites—all will appear on the inaugural programs of Warner Bros. new Calvert Theater.

FROM STUDIOS.

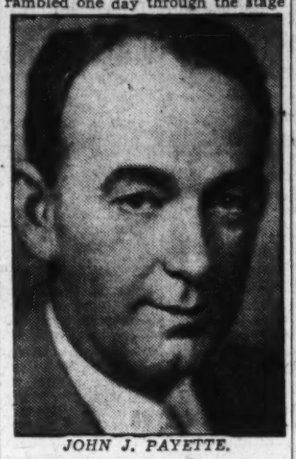
Leading productions from the Warner Bros.-First National, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Twentieth Century-Fox and Paramount Studios in Hollywood will be presented at the new Calvert Theater during its inaugural programs.

PAYETTE SUPERVISES 38 WARNER THEATERS

General Zone Manager Began His Career as Usher.

John J. Payette, general zone manager of Warner Bros. theaters in the Washington territory, including the new Calvert, which opens tonight, started in show business at the age of 12.

Always drawn by the theater, he rambled one day through the stage door of the old Academy of Music Theater and come out of the front door an usher.



JOHN J. PAYETTE.

Three years later he was made assistant treasurer of this old Washington legitimate theater. He was then 15, and the position necessitated his leaving high school. However, his progress was fast, for at the age of 17 he was appointed treasurer.

It was in 1910, while still 17, that Mr. Payette became identified with motion pictures. His work as treasurer of the legitimate playhouse brought him an offer to operate the Rhode Island Theater, a 250-seat house, built especially for the showing of motion pictures.

His affiliation with this theater for the next four years brought him the fundamental knowledge of buying and booking which was to be so helpful in later years.

In 1914, came the opportunity to join General Film Co. as assistant manager. He spent a year in Washington in that capacity and then was promoted to branch manager in Baltimore. With the dissolution of the company he became associated as salesman with the Baltimore outlet of VLSE (Vitagraph, Lubin, Selig and Essanay).

Then came an offer by Goldwyn which he accepted. It was while he was in Baltimore that he bought the Southern rights to J. Stuart Blackton's famous preparedness pictures, "The Battle Cry of Peace," which he took personally on road tour throughout the South.

With America's entrance into the World War, Mr. Payette enlisted for service overseas. On his discharge from the Army, he joined Harry M. Crandall's circuit of theaters. Mr. Crandall previous to this had asked Mr. Payette to join his organization which was the most progressive in Washington.

Back again in the theater operating field, Mr. Payette was made assistant manager of the ace house, the Metropolitan, rising to the managerial post within three weeks.

As manager he not only booked the house but also staged the prologues, which were so popular an adjunct to the entertainment in those days.

These prologues, the first in Washington, raised the grosses of the Metropolitan to unheard-of figures.

The presentation was doubly difficult because the theater had no stage, curtain or drapes. The only place to work was a 3-foot apron, but the prologues looked so rich that Mr. Payette's work was rewarded nine months after he joined the Crandall enterprises with the position of assistant circuit manager.

New duties brought under his jurisdiction the buying and booking of films, continuance of stage prologues and assisting in the operation of the circuit.

The merger of the Crandall Theaters with the Stanley Co. of America resulted in Mr. Payette's appointment as supervisor of theaters. The acquisition of the Stanley Co. by Warner Bros. saw him in the berth of general zone manager.

The Warner Bros. interests not only added new theaters to the Washington circuit but placed under direct supervision of the Washington houses additional Warner Theaters in Maryland, Pennsylvania, Virginia and North Carolina.

With the completion of Warner Bros. expansion plans this year, Mr. Payette will have under his supervision 45 theaters in this territory.

WARNERS PLAN TO BUILD 4 ADDITIONAL THEATERS

Program Calls for Spending $2,000,000 in Tenleytown, Bethesda, Silver Spring and Northeast Washington.

Warner Bros. building program in Washington, of which the new Calvert Theater is a part, will be continued with the construction of four more theaters, according to an announcement made by John J. Payette, Warner Bros. general zone manager.

Involving an expenditure of approximately $2,000,000, the program calls for the construction of neighborhood theaters in Tenleytown, Bethesda, Silver Spring and Northeast Washington.

They will be of the latest type, including complete air-conditioning equipment and all other improvements in theater design for the pleasure and comfort of patrons. Each theater will seat from 1,000 to 1,500 people.

The opening tonight of the Calvert brings to completion the first half of the contemplated program. Four new theaters were announced by Warner Bros. in December, 1935, and since that time the Penn, 650 Pennsylvania avenue southeast; the Uptown, 3426 Connecticut avenue northwest, the Sheridan, 6217 Georgia avenue northwest, and now the Calvert, have been opened to the public.

According to Mr. Payette, plans and sites for the four additional houses have been selected and approved, and construction will get under way in the near future.

"Local progress and the rapid expansion of the District necessitates new theaters," Mr. Payette said in making the announcement.

"In planning for these new theaters, we are keeping pace with the growing needs of the community."

First Important Role in Opener

Helen Valkis, recently recruited from the Pasadena Community Playhouse for films, gets her first important picture role as Jane Seymour, wife of Henry VIII, in "The Prince and the Pauper," which co-stars the Mauch twins, Billy and Bobby, and Errol Flynn, at the Calvert Theater tonight.

As the unhappy queen, Miss Valkis is the mother of the prince, doomed to die beneath the executioner's axe if she survives the travail of presenting an heir to the British throne.

Air Cooling Adds To Patrons' Comfort

"Air cooling" may not be necessary at the opening of Warner Bros. Calvert Theater tonight, but "air conditioning" will play an important part in the comfort of the large audience which will be present.

While Washington swelters under the heat, patrons fully realize the value of an air-conditioning system such as the one which has been installed in the Calvert.

Not so many people appreciate the year-round service which is rendered by these modern systems, which function in all kinds of weather.

The air-conditioning plant installed in the Calvert will service the theater in winter, by maintaining completely cleansed and properly humidified air at all times. All dust and other foreign material is removed from the air before it enters the auditorium.

In cold weather, heat is supplied through the same ducts and grills which supply cool air in summer. There is not a radiator in the building.

COLLECTIVE NAME.

The cameramen at the First National Studio invented a new collective name for Billy and Bobby Mauch, the identical twins who are appearing in Mark Twain's "The Prince and the Pauper." The lensmen call them "Double Exposure." The picture, co-starring Errol Flynn and the twins, is at the Calvert Theater tonight. William Keighley directed it.

Latest Screen Equipment Is Installed Here

One of the many features of the new Calvert Theater is the very latest type of sound equipment, embodying every development made in this field since the days when Warner Bros. first pioneered with the Vitaphone.

The speaker assembly at the new theater consists of six units—two speakers for low frequencies, two for high frequencies and two for intermediate frequencies. These completely cover both the musical and voice range from 40 to 10,000 cycles.

The speakers are behind the large screen on which the picture is projected, while all the sound equipment is in the operators' booth in the rear of the balcony.

The sound installation throughout is the most modern in type, arrangements, power, adjustments, etc. Many of the improved devices used have been on the market only a few months.

The latest type of projection equipment also has been installed in the Calvert, assuring patrons of a perfect presentation of eye and ear entertainment.

MATINEES DAILY.

The new Calvert Theater will open its doors daily at 2 p. m., and performances will be presented through 11 o'clock.

STORY OF WARNER BROS. RIVALS THE ROMANCES OF THEIR FILM DRAMAS

HARRY M. WARNER. (President)

JACK L. WARNER (Vice President)

MAJ. ALBERT WARNER (Vice President)

A romantic parallel to the juvenile business tales of Horatio Alger and Oliver Optic is found in the amazing careers of those leaders of the film industry, Harry M., Maj. Albert and Jack L. Warner.

The story of the rise of Warner brothers to affluence and a towering position reads like one of those youthful classics.

The Warner family of 12 first lived in Baltimore and later moved to Youngstown, Ohio. Harry Warner, the oldest boy, was a salesman for the meat products of Armour & Co., and from that organization went to a similar post with Swift & Co.

In the meantime, Sam Warner had gone into the world on his own and was employed by the Erie Railroad as a fireman. Albert had gone to Chicago, Harry having found him a position with the Armour organization.

Jack, still in knickerbockers, was found to have a pleasing singing voice, and in their modest way, as their means would permit, the Warners had it trained and the lad sang with some little success wherever he could find engagements.

Moving pictures!

The verdict, made in 1903, was unanimous. All four, from the senior, Harry, to the boy, Jack, had a liking for the baby industry and were sure they detected the sweeping future of it. They promptly put their combined purses in a general treasury and voted that they must find a theater and become exhibitors.

Started in Newcastle.

Their efforts were tireless and thorough and they finally found what they considered a promising location in Newcastle, Pa. The little theater was bravely opened, with a young sister, Rose Warner, playing the piano and the program enlivened with illustrated songs sung by young Jack, still in his knickerbockers.

The modest theater "caught on" as the Warners directed its destinies, and in its management the brothers learned a great deal about the film business. After a time, however, it occurred to the brothers that it was getting more and more difficult for exhibitors to get the quantity of quality of pictures they needed to do profitable business.

So, asked Sam, Albert, Harry and Jack, why not establish a distributing exchange, supplying the worried exhibitors with the number and kind of films they needed?

The adventurous ones made the plunge, as they had done before, and for six years conducted a flourishing exchange business in the busy Pittsburgh district. Then a body blow was dealt the brothers when a combination of the big film producers decided to establish their own exchanges.

Another Decision.

The four heads came together again, wiser heads than they had been in Youngstown or Newcastle, and the Warner brothers made a momentous decision. To get just the kind of pictures you wanted, you must make them yourselves. So they would produce their own films.

The Warner's "My Four Years in Germany was the film sensation of the year. They followed it with the equally successful "Why Girls Leave Home.

Then came a great event—August 6, 1926, when Warner Bros. were ready to display Vitaphone to the world. On that day in their own theater in New York, the brothers presented a great program to an astounded and delighted audience.

Will H. Hays gave a short introductory address, via Vitaphone, of course, then came the great New York Philharmonic Orchestra, Mischo Elman, Roy Smeck, Marion Talley, Harold Bauer, Giovanni Martinelli, Anna Case and the entire Metropolitan Opera House chorus, with John Barrymore in "Don Juan."

Vitaphone went over with a tremendous bang and the Warner Bros. were made—again. Then came a fresh problem, but after their experiences, the brothers were not disheartened. This was the task of finding theaters in which to display Vitaphone. The more important and large chains of houses refused to install Vitaphone. Independent managers welcomed the Warners, but in cities largely controlled by circuits, Vitaphone could find no opening.

So the undaunted brothers began leasing theaters wherever they could. A year passed and installations slowly became more numerous.

Then came the enormous success of "The Jazz Singer" and with it the Warners' greatest tragedy.

Sam Warner was taken ill and passed away as the quartet of which he was the creating genius was entering its era of greatest prosperity.

The three brothers, Harry, Albert and Jack, continued to carry on, as Sam would have wished. Experiments went on constantly in the studios. More sound was added to Vitaphone's accomplishments and then came speaking sequences.

Riotous Success.

Al Jolson's "The Singing Fool" was a little less than a riotous success, as was Fannie Brice's amusing "My Man."

Both displayed Vitaphone as a dispenser of deft comedy and musical numbers of the popular type identified with the fame of two revue notables.

A complete light operetta, "The Desert Song," was completed, a revelation for Vitaphone fans. Since then the world has thrilled to many great Warner films, many of them blazing still newer trails for the industry.

So the intrepid three, on the heights of their arduous climb, have seen their faith in the audible films justified, their loyal convictions proved. Harry Warner is now president of the Warner organization; Albert is vice president and treasurer, while Jack Warner is a vice president in charge of production at the coast studios.

Representative Sees 'Fallacies' In Crime Study

Not All Criminal Charges Are True, Hobbs Points Out on House Floor.

An attack on the report of the director of the Washington Criminal Justice Association was made on the House floor late yesterday by Representative Hobbs (Democrat), of Alabama.

Charging the conclusions were based on two "fundamental fallacies," Hobbs, a former circuit judge, said he was not criticizing the association or its members.

Waving a copy of The Washington Post, Hobbs said the headline reading, "90 Per Cent of Major Crimes Go Unpunished," was not borne out by the facts.

"The first fundamental fallacy in the report," he said, "is that every criminal charge is true.

"The second fundamental fallacy is that law enforcement officers can materially increase the number of convictions."

The failure to obtain convictions in many cases, Hobbs said, is due to three factors:

The gullibility of jurors.

The skill of criminal lawyers.

The peculiar handicaps of District courts due to the shifting character of Washington's population.

He pointed out that only a small portion of the criminal charges listed in the report were brought to trial, but that convictions were obtained in the vast majority of these cases.

"Just because a charge of murder is placed on the police books, it doesn't follow that the defendant is guilty or even that a murder was committed," Hobbs said. "It might turn out to be only a manslaughter case.

"All of these criminal investigators make the same mistake of confusing the number of charges with those that are prosecuted after proper sifting."

send me a report of his appraisal of the effectiveness of crime enforcement for the last year."

Hazen also suggested Washington's enforcement records be compared with other cities of similar size.

In answer to Commissioner Hazen's statement, Hepbron declared:

"After Commissioner Hazen has read the association's report, I will be happy to confer with him, go over the report and prove all facts and figures involved.

"Our facts and figures were compiled from official sources with cooperation of various city authorities. In all instances, our information was gathered from proper official records."

"To compare Washington with other cities of comparable size is possible, but in many ways unfair. For instance, Washington now has a far worse record than Baltimore, where we have been studying conditions for several years."

Hazen indicated facts contained in the report did not necessarily mean laxity on the part of enforcement officials.

"Crimes," said Hepbron, "are either committed or they are not committed. Where there are no convictions, these reported crimes cannot possibly be construed as solved."

In a lengthy written statement on the report, United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett said:

"I have only cursorily examined the report, and I have no disposition to quarrel with it. Necessarily, there may be various analyses made and different conclusions drawn from the statistics."

Citing a portion of the report showing that District bondsmen are signing bails far exceeding amounts of their assets, Garnett said:

"I agree that some fair basis might be established for determining the ratio between liability of bondsmen and their unmortgaged assets. Of course, the Police Court has a rule that no bondsman can write bonds in excess of twice the value of such assets. District Court has no such rule, but the judges are fully advised of the current situation of the bondsmen."

Huff is married and has two children. His wife, Florence Huff, is supervisor of the Pennsylvania avenue branch, public assistance division, Board of Public Welfare. In addition to his Federal post, Huff for the last two years has been an instructor in treatment of delinquency, School of Social Work, Catholic University.

Other posts now held by Huff are chairman of the Washington Chapter, American Association of Social Workers; chairman of the corrections committee, Washington Council of Social Agencies, and secretary of the American Parole Association.

Cain Leaves Post At University Here

Resignation of J. Harvey Cain as assistant treasurer of Catholic University was announced yesterday. It was also announced that 12 other clerical positions at the university will be eliminated.

According to the terms of the new constitution of the university the procurator shall take over the duties of the assistant treasurer, so the Rev. Joseph N. La Roe, appointed procurator last week, will handle Cain's tasks.

"It was with great regret that a change was necessary," said Mgr. Joseph M. Corrigan, rector of the university, "in view of Mr. Cain's long and faithful service to the university, but the change has been made under arrangements satisfactory to both parties."

Slayer Awaiting Chair, Baptized in Bathtub

Cincinnati, May 5 (AP).—In the drab surroundings of Hamilton County Jail, two ministers lowered a condemned murderer into a bathtub today in fulfillment of his desire to be baptized before being formally sentenced to die in the electric chair.

Pale and nervous as he entered the room, Charles "Teddy" Hines, 25, watched the ministers intently during the ceremony. Then, his nervousness gone, his step light, and smiling happily, he walked back to his cell to await the death sentence on Saturday.

Stowaway Killed By Leap Into Bay As Result of Jest

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 5.—An ill-fated jest that sent two stowaways plunging into the icy waters of lower New York Bay, terrorized by fantastic tales of long years in prison as punishment for their illegal passage, ended in death for one of the "hoax" victims today.

Four policemen vainly risked their lives to save a man, listed as Tom Garadilla, 38, an Italian, who succumbed to shock and submersion after his leap from the Dollar liner President Monroe.

The other stowaway, Dominic Celebirto, 37, Italian-born resident of Brooklyn, was rescued and returned to the President Monroe, where the ship's surgeon, Dr. G. W. Wright, found him "so stiff with cold that we couldn't bend him."

As the ship lay anchored at quarantine early today, the two men dived overboard, hoping to reach the shore 1,500 feet distant.

Officers aboard the President Monroe said that as the ship approached New York, members of the crew "kiddingly" told the two stowaways they would have to serve long terms of imprisonment for their "crime." Actually, the maximum punishment would have been three or four days in jail.

Wallace Presses Granary Program

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Wallace said yesterday the Administration hoped an "ever-normal granary" plan would be in operation this fall.

The Secretary told a press conference it was "possible to work out the program" despite the Administration's economy plans.

High School Students To Compete in Drill

The annual competitive drill of companies of the Ninth Brigade, colored high school cadets, composed of the Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth Regiments, representing Dunbar, Armstrong and Cardozo High Schools, will be held today at Griffith Stadium, beginning at 9 o'clock.

The companies will march on the field at half-hour intervals, until 5 o'clock, when a silent drill of noncommissioned officers, and a brigade review will be held, prior to the award of medals and ribbons. Company captains compete for the teachers' diamond medal and the Stephen A. Kramer consolation prize, a silver cup.

$77,000,000 Bridge Is Shown in Films

Nearly 1,200 persons witnessed the first public showing in Washington of motion pictures of the building of the San Francisco-Oakland Bridge, last night in the Department of Commerce auditorium.

In addition to the motion pictures, an illustrated lecture was delivered by C. F. Goodrich, chief engineer of the American Bridge Co., in which he described the various technical and engineering devices used in constructing the 8¼-mile bridge. The showing was sponsored by the District of Columbia Section, American Society of Civil Engineers, with several other local engineering societies.

Goodrich explained the process of spinning 28-inch thick cables, anchoring the supports in concrete blocks and solid rock and laying steel cat-walks preparatory to the actual construction. The bridge, the longest ever built, cost $77,000,000 and already is carrying more than the estimated traffic of 50,000,000 persons a year.

Pension Is Granted Dewey's Old Valet

Welfare authorities yesterday granted an old-age pension to Edward Racks, 73-year-old colored man, whose youth was devoted to the service of Admiral George Dewey, the hero of Manila Bay.

Racks scorned charity. He entered the service of Admiral Dewey in 1885, and remained with the famous officer until his retirement. He then entered the service of the family of a private physician, where he remained for 30 years. A provision made for him in the doctor's estate was swept away by the crash.

In the early days, Racks went around the world with Admiral Dewey. Afloat he occupied an adjoining cabin to Admiral Dewey's, and ashore he was his groom and valet. The pension he will receive will be $29 a month.

Washington Social Council Meets Tonight

Mrs. William Kittle, chairman of the Washington Social Settlement Council, will preside and speak at tonight's celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of settlements in the United States. The meeting will be held at 8:15 p. m. at the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K streets northwest.

Entertainment will be furnished by the children from the various Washington settlement houses. There will be dancing and music, both vocal and instrumental. The executives of each of the eight settlements in the Community Chest will speak briefly about their work.

M. F. McNamara Funeral Rites Are Tomorrow

Retired G. P. O. Worker, 75, Will Be Buried in Mount Olivet.

Requiem mass for Martin F. McNamara, 75, retired Government employe and long-time Washington resident, will be said at 10 a. m. tomorrow at St. Martin's Catholic Church. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Mr. McNamara died Tuesday at his home, 37 Michigan avenue northeast. He had retired in 1932 from the Government Printing Office, where he served in the office of the Congressional Record clerk.

Born in County Clare, Ireland, Mr. McNamara came to America when 19. He lived in Chicago and then came to Washington in 1881 to work at Soldiers' Home. He afterward worked with the Postoffice Department before transferring to the Printing Office.

Mr. McNamara was a member of St. Martin's Church Holy Name Society, of Immaculate Conception Chapter of the Third Order of St. Dominic, and of Old Glory Post, Woodmen of America.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Maria A. McNamara; three daughters, Agnes, Winifred F. and Cecelia M. McNamara; a son, Thomas A. McNamara, and a granddaughter, Eileen McNamara, all of Washington.

Simpson Rites Set Tomorrow

Funeral services for Harry C. Simpson, 68, veteran employe of the Evening Star, who died suddenly Tuesday at his home, 1101 Fifteenth street northwest, will be held tomorrow morning at 11:30 o'clock in the Chambers undertaking establishment, followed by private burial.

A native of Washington, Simpson worked as a compositor and copy holder on The Star, which he joined in 1884. He is a member of the Petworth Lodge of Masons and Artisans.

Surviving Simpson are his wife, Mrs. Mary Simpson; a son, Roland C. Simpson, of Washington; a daughter, Mrs. Blanche Rasely, of Arlington, Va., and a brother, Walter L. Simpson, of Washington.

Funeral Services Held For Lieut. Roger Olsen

Funeral services for Lieut. Roger Ralph Olsen, Medical Corps, U. S. Navy, were held yesterday afternoon in Arlington National Cemetery, with full military honors. Lieut. Olsen died Sunday in St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

Honorary pallbearers were Lieut. Comdr. George G. Dowling, Lieut. Comdr. J. Gregg Smith, Lieut. Thomas J. Carter, Lieut. Harold V. Packard, Lieut. (jg) Joseph F. Rech, and Lieut. (jg) Howard L. Puckett, all members of the Navy Medical Corps.

Relief Association Assets Row Ends

The battle over the assets of the Municipal Immediate Relief Association ended yesterday when Thomas Costello, acting president, announced a peaceful settlement.

He said the association, which consists of District Government employes, had reversed its previous decision to distribute the assets equally among members. Instead, he said, each member will receive like percentages of amounts respectively paid into the association fund.

Dispute over the assets arose when the association last month voted to disband.

Relatives Contest Will.

Hackensack, N. J., May 5 (AP).—The late John Sage, of Ridgewood, New York banker, left $300,000 for the use of British soldiers and sailors who were blinded in the World War, it was disclosed today. Probate of the will was contested by some relatives who received nothing of the $425,000 estate. Sage was born in Scotland.

W. H. Goldsmith Funeral Is Set For Tomorrow

Retired National Museum Foreman Dies at His Home in D. C.

Funeral services for William Henry Goldsmith, 64, retired employe of the National Museum, will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at his home, 1350 Perry place northwest. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Mr. Goldsmith died Tuesday night at his home. He had been ill for about three weeks.

Born in Washington, Mr. Goldsmith entered the service of the National Museum 41 years ago. When he retired May 1 he was foreman of labor.

Mr. Goldsmith was active in Masonic circles in Vienna, Va. He was a past master of Concord Lodge 307 of Vienna. He was also a lay reader in the Episcopal Church and for several years had conducted services in southern Maryland.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Mae Goldsmith; a son, Joseph B. Goldsmith, of Charleston, W. Va., and a daughter, Mrs. Henrietta Kornitzer, of Washington. Two sisters, Mrs. R. A. Veitch and Mrs. Ely Davidson, and a brother, James Goldsmith, all of Washington, also survive.

Peery Protests U. S. Soil Fund Cut

Richmond, Va., May 5 (AP).—Gov. Peery sent a protest today to Secretary Wallace of the Depasiment of Agriculture against the 32 per cent cut in Virginia soil conservation allotments for 1938 which he said "would very likely" result in the abandonment of one-third of the contracts with co-operator-farmers.

The Governor's action followed that of John Galleher, Virginia director for the National Emergency Council, who sent a similar protest to Eugene S. Leggett, executive director of the NEC.

Virginia's 1937 allotment of $284,358 was cut to $190,000 in the 1938 allotment draft, the greatest reduction of any of the States.

Mysterious Gunstock Order Keeps Firm Busy

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., May 5.—For the last five months the Lange & Crist Box Co. here has been manufacturing walnut gunstocks for an unidentified rifle manufacturing company, and during that time has shipped five carloads of them, it was revealed today. To fill the mammoth order it was necessary to increase employment to 100 men.

Foster L. Martin, general manager of the plant, said today he did not know whether the gunstocks were for rifles to be used in the civil war in Spain.

"I don't know where they eventually go," he said. Maybe they go to Spain, and maybe they don't. All I know is we have received an order from a large rifle manufacturing company for all gunstocks we can turn out."

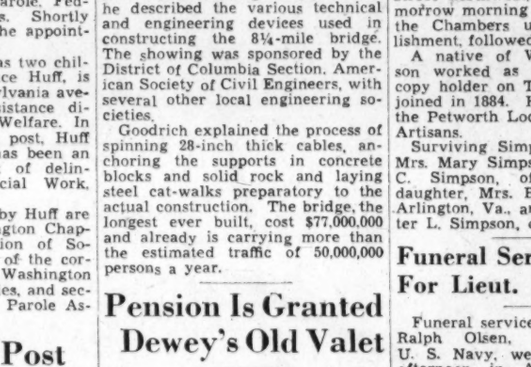
Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

Hogging the Bidding.

Though thousands of words have been written and spoken on the subject of selecting the trump suit, average and lesser players still go astray on this vital point. I suspect that they are often dazzled and unduly exhiliarated by the possession of a long, solid and, hence, powerful suit. This treasure is apt to be a mixed blessing unless they realize that such a suit may be even more valuable as a side suit than as the trump suit itself. Consider today's hand.

North, dealer.
Both side vlunerable.



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 N T	Pass	3 ◇	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	5 ◇	Pass
6 ◇	Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened the Jack of clubs, and declarer soon found himself with a lost cause. He ruffed the opening lead, drew trumps, and hopefully led the ten of hearts through West. The latter cheerfully sacrificed the King to the possibility that his partner might hold Queen and nine, which proved to be the case and, thus, the contract was down one. Declarer blamed his luck because he had not found the crucial nine of hearts in West's hand instead of East's.

He should have blamed himself for his lack of vision. With splendid support for his partner's secondary spade bid, South should have promptly abandoned his own suit on the realization that as a side suit instead of trump it would provide numerous discards for North. Thus, instead of bidding five diamonds over three spades South should have bid five spades, and North six.

As it happened a grand slam would have been a laydown, but it is almost impossible to reach this height by logical and safe bidding methods. With spades as trump, North would have had to ruff only two clubs and could then have spread the hand for 13 tricks.

Frostburg Faces Rise In Taxes, Council Told

Frostburg, Md., May 5 (AP).—City Clerk Roland Lammert told the mayor and council they would either have to raise the town tax rate to $1 per $100 or cut town expenses and cancel proposed improvements. The rate is now 90 cents.

The town lost $4,500 annual income when a coal company was reorganized. The council will consider parking meters as a means of increasing revenue.

Growers Select Agency.

Martinsburg, W. Va., May 5.—The board of directors for Appalachian Apples, Inc., four-State apple advertising co-operative, has employed N. W. Ayer & Son, a nationally known advertising agency, to handle the newspaper and radio apple advertising for this apple belt the coming year, it was disclosed today.

He laughed at his jester but the joke was on him

Not the cares of state, but his own avoirdupois, weighed him down . . . Modern man travels light, eats light, and —when he drinks—drinks lightly of a light whiskey

HIS MAJESTY sat long at table, packing in rich foods and pouring in heavy liquors until he could hold no more. He had no time-clock to punch, no office hours to worry about. So his jester's mimicry of his mighty girth brought only a shout of royal laughter.

Modern man, however, keeps a sharp eye on his diet, and, when he drinks, partakes lightly of a light whiskey like IRISH AMERICAN. This modern whiskey, with its distinctive flavor, was especially developed for modern tastes. It is a delightful combination of round, robust pot still whiskey and specially distilled American whiskey. As a straight drink, it is popular everywhere. And, with knowing, up-to-date drinkers, it is now virtually standard as the basis for delicious mixed drinks.

Now available at most good places. Ask for it by the full name.

Women Voters Delay Action On Court Plan

Opinion Split on Reform; Appeal Is Made for District Vote.

The National League of Women Voters failed to take any action on the President's court revision plan, at the final meeting of a three-day session yesterday at the Washington Hotel.

Nation-wide support for suffrage for residents of the District was asked by Mrs. William Kittle, president of the District of Columbia Voteless League of Women Voters. Mrs. Kittle analyzed the "plight of the voteless District," to the league, which, for 17 years, has been advocating the enfranchisement of District citizens.

Mrs. Marion A. Cheek, of Buffalo, chairman of the league's economic welfare department, in discussing her plan to withhold action on the President's court plan, said:

"In view of the fact Congressional hearings have concluded, the league is not in a position to act effectively at this time. There is a diversity of opinion, and the delegates here are not able to reflect correctly the recognized division among the general membership."

Action reflective of the league's interest in the court was an earlier vote to "advocate an amendment to the Federal Constitution" which would make State ratifications less difficult. Mrs. LaRue Brown, of Boston, offered this suggestion, which received general approval in various forms from league leaders, who asked that the Constitution be made "more responsive to the will of the people."

Mrs. Kittle said, regarding the District of Columbia enfranchisement:

"There is no logical basis for discrimination against such an intelligent group of American citizens, as we have in the District. We are in a no-man's land of representation. We urge upon you to go back home, bestir public support for Congressional representation for the District, and get the pledge of your own Congressmen to remedy the voteless situation."

Marriage Act Pressure Urged.

Chances for repeal of Section 213, prohibiting a man and his wife from holding Federal job, is slight without greatly increased pressure on Congressmen by their constituents, Representative Robert Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, told the local chapter of the League of Women Voters last night.

Representative Ramspeck spoke at a meeting of the Department of Legal Status of the Voteless District of Columbia League of Women Voters, in the American Association of University Women headquarters The meeting was devoted to the problems of "The Married Woman and Her Job."

Local agitation alone will not suffice to bring about repeal of the statute, according to Ramspeck.

Other speakers at the meeting, which was attended by delegates from 15 States here for the national convention of the league, included Mrs. Pearl Klein, chairman of a study group investigating the subject "The Married Woman and Her Job," Mrs. Pittman Potter, of Geneva, Switzerland, who talked on "The World of Women's Organizations in Geneva;" Mrs. Edith Valet Cooke, of Connecticut, who discussed the question of "Legal Status," and Mary Anderson, chief of the Women's Bureau in the Department of Labor, who discussed the "Industrial Woman's Need of a Job." Mrs. William Kittle, president of the District organization, presided.

Wadden Backs Wagner Act.

J. Warren Madden, chairman of the National Labor Relations Board, scoffed yesterday at arguments that the Wagner act loads the scales of law against employers.

Madden, whose board administers the act, guaranteeing labor the right to organize free from coercion by employers, told the National League of Women Voters:

"* * * It is said that the law is one-sided, because it forbids only coercion by employers and does not forbid coercion by employes upon each other.

"For violation of law in labor disputes, employes, under existing law, have suffered imprisonment and paid fines in tens of thousands of cases.

"Is it seriously contended that when, over against all these legal weapons which are aimed at employes, there is placed the one remedy of a cease and desist order against an employer who violates the law, the scales of the law are loaded against the employer?"

Counsel for Jordon Calls Mass Meeting

In a last-minute attempt to save the life of Thomas Jordon, sentenced to die in the District Jail May 14 for the murder of Mrs. Lizzie Jaynes, John M. Holzworth, defense counsel has called a mass meeting at the Shoreham Hotel at 8 tonight.

At the same time Holzworth asked the Court of Appeals to grant a hearing on his petition for a new trial. He had asked the appellate court to order the District Court to entertain the new trial motion.

Holzworth, in a letter to 1,000 Washington citizens, asked them to form a committee and attempt to gain a reprieve for Jordon. Holzworth based his plea on the recently discovered police incident which described the slayer as a fair-haired six-footer. Jordan is 5 feet 8¼ inches tall and has brown eyes and black hair.

Denhardt Jurors Still Deliberating In Murder Trial

New Castle, Ky., May 5 (AP).—Small groups of villagers tonight awaited a verdict from the courthouse, where 12 men debated the fate of Brig. Gen. Henry H. Denhardt, Kentucky's former adjutant general and lieutenant governor.

Since 5:25 p. m. yesterday a jury had debated charges against the 61-year-old soldier, who the State says killed his fiancee, Verna Garr Taylor, last November.

Ban on U. S. Relief For Reds Is Urged

Walter I. Plant, State deputy of the Knights of Columbus for the District, last night called for tighter deportation laws and more strict relief policies as a method of combating communism in the United States.

In a radio address over WRC he asked that the deportation laws be changed to give the Secretary of Labor power "to deport Communists, especially alien Communists." He asked that Congress cut Communists from relief rolls and deny Federal funds "to aliens who seek our destruction."

The Knights of Columbus official also urged Catholic employers to increase wages and improve working conditions and thus eliminate the social unrest which, he declared, breed communism.

Norris Opposes Summer Session

By the Associated Press.

Senator Norris (Independent), Nebraska, said yesterday that if Congress cannot adjourn by the time Washington's sizzling summer weather arrives it should recess during the hot months and return in the fall to complete its work.

The veteran Nebraska Senator asserted that "Congress can't do good work when everybody is suffering from the heat."

"If it becomes aparent—which I think it will—in the latter part of June or early July that we can't get through," Norris said, "I would have Congress adjourn until the latter part of September or the first of October."

Norris added that he wouldn't want to take the summer recess if Congress could finish up quickly by staying in session, but would advocate a recess if it became apparent that there were "months of work ahead."

Priest to Present Three Radio Talks

The moral case for collective bargaining, social legislation and a new social order, is the theme of a series of three addresses to be opened Sunday by the Rev. R. A. McGowan in the Catholic Hour, Nation-wide religious radio broadcast, the National Council of Catholic Men, producer of the program, announced.

The series, entitled "Society and the Social Encyclicals: America's Road Out," will stress the great encyclical letter of Pope Pius XI, "On Reconstructing the Social Order," and will apply its principles to this country. Sunday's address, "Collective Bargaining: A First Step," will show collective bargaining to be a right and a present necessity.

The second addres, Sunday, May 16, will be "Christian Principles and Social Legislation." The last address, Sunday, May 23, will be "A Christian Social Order."

"My SKIN now invites a close-up"

"—how well I recall the days and long evenings when I felt tired-out and looked it."

A SKIN that glows naturally bespeaks radiant health beneath... it is alive... stays fresh! So, be good to your skin from within and it will be good to you.

The reason for this is quite simple... skin tissues must have an abundance of red-blood-cells to aid in making the skin glow... to bring color to your cheeks... to build resistance to germ attacks.

It is so easy for these precious red-blood-cells to lose their vitality. Worry, overwork and undue strain take their toll. Sickness literally burns them up. Improper diet retards the development of new cells. Even a common cold kills them in great numbers.

Science, through S.S.S. Tonic, brings to you the means to regain this blood strength within a short space of time... the action of S.S.S. is cumulative and lasting.

Moreover, S.S.S. Tonic whets the appetite. Foods taste better... natural digestive juices are stimulated and finally the very food you eat is of more value. A very important step back to health.

You, too, will want to take S.S.S. Tonic to regain and to maintain your red-blood-cells... to restore lost weight... to regain energy... to strengthen nerves... and to give to your skin that natural health glow.

Take the S.S.S. Tonic treatment and shortly you should be delighted with the way you feel... and have your friends compliment you on the way you look.

S.S.S. Tonic is especially designed to build sturdy health by restoring deficient red-blood-cells and it is time-tried and scientifically proven.

At all drug stores in two convenient sizes. The large size at a saving in price. There is no substitute for this time tested remedy. No ethical druggist will suggest something "just as good."

Rogers Urges Modern Trend In Bar Training

Tells 500 Lawyers Here Thought Is Changing; Must Keep Pace.

Dr. James Grafton Rogers, chairman of the Council of Legal Education, American Bar Association, told an assembly of 500 lawyers yesterday afternoon at Georgetown Law School that training for the bar must keep pace with the constant change of public thought in this country.

"The thought of mankind has completely altered in the last 20 years and in more recent years, and the forms of law are changed by thought," Dr. Rogers warned. "We have found generally that the lawyers trained in the old schols are not equipped to meet these new ideas, and many of them are frightened and unhappy over these changes in thought."

With the increased tendency under pressure from the American Bar Association to raise the standards of legal education, he said he had no fear of the future. "In the end you will belong to a profession in which each generation will be better educated and better trained," he added.

Henry I. Quinn, president of the District of Columbia Bar Association, who presided, had invited the officers and members of the bar to hear Dr. Rogers, who is a former Assistant Secretary of State and professor of law at Yale University. A number of prominent officials of the American Institute of Law, which is in session here, also attended the meeting with the faculty of Georgetown Law School.

Leo A. Rover, first vice president, and Ralph A. Cusick, second vice president of the District Bar Association, who with President Quinn are graduates of Georgetown Law School, were the local bar officers attending.

Judicature Session Closes.

The one-day session of the American Judicature Society closed with an informal dinner at the Mayflower last night after the first part of the day had been devoted to business meetings and to addresses by Clarence N. Goodwin, Washington attorney, and Thurman W. Arnold, Yale University Law School professor.

Newton D. Baker was re-elected president of the society. Other officers elected were Oscar C. Hull, of Detriot, chairman of the board; Van Buren Perry, of South Dakota; Henry B. Walker, of Evansville, Ind., and Frank E. Atwood, of Missouri, all vice presidents.

The retiring board chairman, Clarence Goodwin, a former Judge of the Illinois Appellate Court, turned over to the organization's treasurer a $6,000 check from the Carnegie Corporation, the first installment of a $30,000 Carnegie grant made last fall.

Between 700 and 750 lawyers, judges and law school professors were expected at the Mayflower today to attend the opening sessions of the American Law Institute. The first meeting of the three-day convention will be held at 10 a. m. today and will be featured by an address by Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes.

District Music Federation Has Yearly Banquet

New Compositions Played and Sung at Event in National Press Club.

Continuing its observance of National Music Week, the District Federation of Music Clubs held its annual banquet last night in the National Press Club auditorium, with Eva Whitford Lovette, president, in the chair. The guests of honor included Mrs. Vincent Hilles Ober, of Norfolk, Va., newly elected president of the national federation; Dr. Hans Kindler, conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra; Mrs. Joseph Byron, of Hagerstown, Md., national corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Richard Hamlen Jones, honorary president of the Massachusetts federation.

The guests were welcomed by the Lovette Choral Club singing the federation "Salutation" composed by Samuel Richard Gaines. During the banquet musical numbers were presented by the Madrigal Singers, the Elizabeth Somers Glee Club and the Alexandria Music Club.

Later a concert was given by the Washington Composers' Club with the assistance of resident artists. The program opened with three harp solos—"Romance," "Chinese Impression" and "Dragonfly"—played by the composer, William T. Cameron. Three songs—"The Change," "Crystal Moonlight" and "What Is It?"—texts by Alden Hayes Emery and music by Dorothy Radde Emery, were sung by Norma Simonson and Dolph Atherton, with the composer at the piano.

A "Prelude" and a "Nocturne" for piano by Mary Howe were played by Willa Semple. A mixed quartet, "O Silent Hills," text by C. D. Blachley and music by R. Deane Shure, was sung by LaVergne Faircchild, Lily Garrett, David Manley and Arthur Tabbutt, accompanied by the composer. The minuet from Shure's "Berkie Symphony" was danced by Lisa Gardiner Dancers.

A monodrama, "The Figurehead: A Salt Sea Yarn," text by John McCall and music by LaSalle Spier, was recited by Maurice Jarvis, with the composer at the piano. Edward C. Potter's "Old King Cole," a musical treatment of the Mother Goose rhyme, was mimed by Alice Louise Hunter and members of the Lisa Gardiner Dancers impersonating pages, lackeys and the "fiddlers three."

The concert closed with a performance of John Alden Finckel's third string quartet by the National String Quartet, composed of Henri Sokolov, Leo Krakov, Sam Feldman and J. A. Finckel.

Democratic Club Concert.

Under the direction of J. Horace Smithey, the Glee Club of the District of Columbia Democratic Club, will give its first public concert at 8 o'clock this evening in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets. Assisting soloists will be Edwin M. Singer, tenor; Kevin Cosgrove, violinist, and Donald Brown, pianist. Mrs. Marie Morris, organizer of the club, will be the accompanist.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE
Caused by Tired Kidneys
Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.
The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.
If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, lumbago, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.
Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Should She Marry Man When She Feels "None of Those Ecstatic Sensations" She's Read About.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Is there any such thing as this love you read about in novels? I am beginning to doubt it. When I was 17 (I am now 22) I was passionately in love with a boy not much older. He was far from being my mental or social equal and I was well out of it when he threw me over. Mind you, I loved him physically only. Why, then, am I unable to get him out of my mind after five years?

* * * *

Since then I have not been able to get interested in any one man for any length of time. I see him only at rare intervals and then only at a distance, yet for days after seeing him I am moody and morose. He wasn't the first boy to throw me over. Otherwise, I might understand my feeling this way.

* * * *

All this may seem irrelevant to the first paragraph, but here is the connecting link: I am going with a boy whose companionship I enjoy above any I have ever known. He is an intelligent conversationalist, has a good position, excellent social standing and we understand each other completely (although I have never told him of my feeling for the other boy).

* * * *

He wants me to marry him, and would make an ideal husband. But would I make him a good wife? And do I love him? I know I could be content with him for the rest of my life, but I feel none of those ecstatic sensations of which I read. Please tell me what you think. It would help so much to have your analysis of my problem. Sincerely.

YOUNG READER.

What to Believe.

DEAR YOUNG READER: The difference in your feeling for the two boys is, obviously, the difference between sexual desire and love. You were physically infatuated with the one; you are psychically in accord with the other. Overweening physical desire, when denied expression, inevitably brings grouchiness, gloom and a fettered feeling in its wake. Love, on the other hand, being composed in equal parts of mental, spiritual and physical elements, is able to discipline passion without undue distress, for the reason that it knows and employs other approaches to an exhilarating and solacing oneness of being. It sustains itself with mental and social companionship and spiritual understanding, while quietly awaiting the coming of physical intimacy, if such there is to be.

* * * *

There are instances, of course, where physical attraction blazes the way to true and lasting love, but only when full mutuality of wider interests potentially exists already; in other words, where the two persons concerned possess equal intelligence and comparable social backgrounds, experience and education. Lacking this broad foundation to build on, passionate love is a short-lived flame which expires when the relationship loses its novelty.

"This love you read about in novels," as you say, is a romantic fictional glorification of ignorant adolescent passion, primarily prepared for adolescent consumption, and very often presented either by authors who have their tongues in their cheeks as they write it, or who are in essence as immature as the persons they write about and the public they're writing to. Don't be deceived by it.

* * * *

The reason you can't get the object of your girlish grande passion out of your mind after five years is, I imagine, because you are still as emotionally unsatisfied today as you were when he cast you off; and for you he remains, therefore, the symbol of your emotional need.

* * * *

If this other boy who wishes to marry you would, indeed, make an ideal husband; if you truly enjoy his companionship above any you have ever known; if his professional attainments and social standing compel respect; if he is really intelligent, knows something of life and human relations, and the part which a man and a husband is called upon to play, I believe you should hail him as your long-awaited savior. That is, of course, if you in turn possess any common sense, intelligence, human understanding and ability to co-operate.

Those "ecstatic sensations" you've read about are nothing more nor less than the nervous vibrations of an emotionally repressed person. They may or may not be a prelude to true love. They lead equally often to heartbreaking disillusionment, if no other factors are taken into consideration in choosing one's mate.

* * * *

If you are at all responsive to your current beau's caresses; if you know definitely that he is not physically objectionable to you; if both of you are resourceful enough to acquaint yourselves after marriage with the technique of lovemaking in marriage—a field of human relations on which science has thrown a great deal of much-needed light in recent years—you have nothing to fear in becoming his wife. It is probably the only way you will ever dispel the jinx of the other man's image.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Plan Vacations With an Atlas

OFF TO YELLOWSTONE, Grand Canyon or Atlantic City to explore the American scene! That's what thousands of families are doing each year.

Thousands more have fun exploring in a good up-to-date atlas. Imagine the thrill of knowing and telling facts about the countries of the world, their governments, their cities, their industries.

Is the talk of Pacific air flights? "By the way," you add, "do you know which is farther west, Nome, Alaska, on the mainland of North America, or Honolulu, in the Mid-Pacific?" Nome is, though you'll probably have to trot out your map to prove it to skeptical friends.

What's new on the map? The Italian Empire of East Africa. It's made up of the old Italian colonies of Eritrea and Italian Somaliland and the newly conquered Ethiopia.

Can you picture where Madrid is? It's farther north than Philadelphia, farther south than Rome.

Of what countries are these cities the capitals: Helsinki? Of Finland. Kaunas? Of Lithuania.

Keep alert and informed with the help of our handy 40-page "World Atlas and International Gazeteer." Maps in full color and up-to-date figures on governments, populations, industries of the important countries of the world.

A Travel Twosome to Meet All Occasions

To appear smart and appropriately dressed while traveling is a feat that may be achieved by the ingenious woman who plans her wardrobe with an eye to all occasions that may arise. The coat and printed frock illustrated here are ideal for this purpose. Because the coat has the trim, tailored appearance of a suit, it is especially recommended for train, boat or plane travel. The gay print—bright flowers on a black ground—featuring the new apron-effect, is ideal for lunching or dining, either aboard or ashore, for sightseeing, the theater and shopping.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Surgical Anesthesia.

Most of the improvements in medicine in late years have consisted in perfection of methods of treatment already well established. Most of the work is done quietly by technical workers, and while it does not receive the ballyhoo that some so-called discoveries of new methods of treatment are accorded in the magazines and newspapers, it is really more lasting and important in its effect.

An instance is the chemical work that has been done in the production of new agents for surgical anesthesia. Unless you have visited a hospital lately as a patient, you are probably unaware of how many improvements have been made in this field.

Ether Still Used.

Of course, in the beginning, less than a hundred years ago, when anesthesia for surgical operations had just been established, patients and surgeons were glad to get anything which would numb the consciousness from the sensations of pain. Ether seemed then to be the greatest possible boon. It is still used quite widely but has many disadvantages. One is that for most people it is an extremely uncomfortable sensation to "go under" ether. Dreams are disturbing, and the after effects in the form of vomiting are quite uncomfortable.

The second agent to be used was chloroform, which was a more comfortable drug for the patient, but carried a distinctly higher hazard of danger. The third was nitrous oxide or laughing gas, which can only be used for short operations, and does not give sufficient muscular relaxation.

You can see, as we recite these different steps, how men were trying to find an agent which would combine the elements of safety, comfort for the patient, and muscular relaxation which is necessary, especially for an abdominal operation.

New Agent Found.

The latest agent to be used is a substance called "cyclopropane." It is a colorless gas with hardly any odor. Patients who have taken it tell me that there is none of the frightening sensation that accompanies going under with ether. The patient suddenly "goes out like a light." He wakes up almost immediately after the anesthetic has been stopped, and in almost no instances is there any nausea or vomiting. One patient whom I saw recently asked for a cup of coffee within five minutes after awakening. It is also extremely safe. It can be used in practically all operations except those in which extreme muscular relaxation must be maintained.

Other new anesthetics are divinyl ether and evipan sodium.

The professional anesthetist is today an extremely important consultant for the surgeon. He can select practically any form of anesthesia; can use those which are breathed in or given hypodermically or by numbing the spinal cord with direct introduction into the spinal canal. Whatever anesthetic is used in your next operation, you may be sure that it will have been carefully selected beforehand.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a 3-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

Actress Prefers Blue.

Elissa Landi, movie actress, has decided upon a unique experiment. For summer she is confining her wardrobe to tones of blue. Shades range from navy, to delicate powder colorings, and accessories are in beige, patent, blue and red kid.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, May 5.

LAST SUNDAY afternoon a dramatic and touching ceremony took place in the very center of this far-sprawled town. Surrounded by the old Irish regiment he served and loved, and in the presence of notabilities from far and near, they unveiled a 9-foot bronze statue of Father Francis P. Duffy, the soldier priest, in the very middle of tumultuous Times Square.

ALICE HUGHES.

This was no ordinary event in New York's life, for the town's love and admiration for Father Duffy far transcended such matters as race or creed. I dare say he had more friends than any man in Gotham. After the war, in which he served so gallantly with the old Sixty-ninth Regiment of the Rainbow Division, he was given the rectorship of Holy Cross Church, on Forty-second street, in the midst of the hurly-burly, and thus Times Square and its noisy highways became his parish. His tall, soldierly figure and his kindly Irish smile were known throughout the area—and now he stands in bronze in the heart of his parish, looking benignly over the ugliness and spurious color of that crazy place.

His niece, Miss Agnes Duffy, performed the actual ceremony of unveiling. The district was almost impassable, but I shouldn't have missed this very moving episode in the city's life. In fact, I could not have done so, for my little old gentleman was one of Father Duffy's warm admirers. He believes that this line, from Father Duffy's war memoirs, is about as beautiful as possible. Speaking of one of his young Irish soldiers, he says, "With death all around, he hears but the grace of God purring in his heart." A strange but fine thing, this memorial to a gallant soldier and servant of God—in Times Square!

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Pretend not to notice, but as this is written I am whirling back from a dash to Santa Fe, N. Mex.—the whole mad junket taking less than seven days. We seem to be trying to set silly travel records. Last year it was 16 days to London and return, and now this. Once I get safely settled on rocky Manhattan, I'll tip you off on what the smarter squaws are wearing and the new trends in beadwork.

* * * *

Are you one of the girls who are fretted about the number of phone calls you make each month, as you con skeptically the company's bills? If so, you'll be interested in the latest gadget to thud on my desk. It is called a "phonometer," and every time you make a call you pull a lever and it is registered. This is supposed to inculcate thrift. But suppose you forget to work the darned thing in the heat of the day?

* * * *

Judge Brodsky, of here, just set a mother a pretty impossible task. William Moore was before the bar on a charge of hitting a woman. The stricken lady finally withdrew the charge, and the magistrate advised Mrs. Moore to give her boy a good old-time whopping. He's 20, husky, and an amateur boxer. I'm still waiting to hear what happened.

* * * *

Always something new in the way of trick jewelry. Now Paul Plato has thought up jeweled turtles for the girls! I saw one on Mrs. Allan A. Ryan the other day. But why turtles, my dears, I just wouldn't know. I'm wearing a zebra myself, and if people don't like it, they can look away!

* * * *

Now that Shirley Temple is safely 8, and the Princess Elizabeth has attained the age of 11 without much trouble, we can sit back quietly and brood until the Divine Dionnes get to be 3, very soon.

* * * *

One of the loveliest spots in this town is forever-dear Old Gramercy Park, with its barred gates, to which only residents of the area have keys, its flowers and trees, its horde of romping children and the statue of Edwin Booth which stares across at the Players Club, which he founded. It's Little Old New York at its best, and I love it. The other day I went down to see old Jim Hannan get a purse of $1,000 on his thirty-fifth anniversary as a caretaker, and how the youngsters danced around the dear old boy! Other beautiful bits fall before the horrid march of civic progress, but thank God for Gramercy!

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

BETTER watch out how you talk about wallpaper, or you'll give your age away as sure as fate.

There is a generation that remembers with horror the way flowered wallpaper was done to death in the nineties and the first years of this century. So if you shudder yet over flowered wallpaper, you'll be dated accurately . . .

and if in spite of all that you still just can't abide a paper blossom, you'd better have your own walls plain with no explanations and take your friends' papered walls with no remarks.

Because ladies who grew up later in the plain wall era simply adore flowered wallpaper. Even when it's not so practical to go in for entire walls papered in abundant florals, it's smart now to have accents of flowered paper here and there around the house.

Nancy Wood has just finished a dressing table made out of a table with an "apron" all around—that's the wide part that comes down below the table top. She got herself a lovely wallpaper border and pasted it around the apron, then painted the top of the dressing table in a glossy enamel pink to repeat the predominant tone in the border and added a white organdy petticoat with pink taffeta ruffles around the bottom and up the middle of the front.

Helen Macey made her kitchen sit up and take notice of a hitherto neglected looking breakfast nook. She papered the walls of the breakfast nook, ceiling and all, with a paper sprinkled all over with bright vegetables on a white background, then painted her benches and table garden green and made cloth and napkins out of fringed cotton in white with big red polka dots. What a pleasant surprise that was, opening off a very usual white kitchen! Where the paper of the breakfast nook joined the painted walls of the kitchens, Helen used a wallpaper border in a molding design. Plaid paper would work in a place like a breakfast nook, too.

If you doted on paper dolls when you were a little girl, these wall decorations should be just your pie.

Crocheted Companion Squares Ornament Table, Bed or Pillow

Pattern 5738.

By Alice Brooks.

MAKE it with ease, enjoy it "at ease"—this cloth of crocheted companion squares. Or, thrill to the ownership of a bedspread, scarf, pillow top or buffet set made of these joined squares. Crochet each bluebird and rose medallion separately, then join alternately, or use but one motif throughout. In string, the square measures 10 inches; in a finer cotton, 6½ inches. In pattern 5738 you will find instructions and charts for making the squares shown; an illustration of them and of the stitches used; material requirements.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post, Household Arts Dept., 259 W. 14th St., New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

Dogs Reflect Their Owners By Behavior

Ill Breeding Evidenced by Hostess Who Lets Pets Annoy Callers.

By Margaret Wallace.

DO THE MANNERS of the family dog reflect the breeding of the family? One Washington woman is sure they do. She has raised the question of canine etiquette in the following letter:

"Dear Miss Wallace: Do you not agree with me that a dog that is permitted to climb on the laps of visitors, attempt to lick their hands or playfully sniff at their ankles, reveals lack of good manners in the family to which it belongs? I recently called on a neighbor whose large mastiff that did not look any too friendly to me sniffed about my ankles and attempted to lick my hands. Two small Pekingese climbed in my lap, although I had on a newly pressed suit. My hostess calmly went on talking and never noticed my distress nor made any attempt to restrain her dogs. Finally I asked her if the mastiff could be taken away from me. She was very cool about it and later told my sister that I had been very rude to her about her dogs. I was really very polite. I said it was a lovely dog, but that I was always a little afraid of dogs, especially large dogs I did not know. She put the mastiff out, but the Pekingese continued to climb in my lap and attempt to drink out of my teacup. I like dogs and have two of my own. I have trained them not to jump upon people and do not allow them to annoy callers."

Well-Bred Dogs.

Dog manners do reflect the manners of the household. Well-trained dog do not annoy callers. The well-bred hostess will remove her pets from a room when she notices that they are making the callers uncomfortable. No one, not even a dog lover, likes to be approached by a strange, large dog and be sniffed at. It is also the part of the caller not to make a scene about other people's dogs. If the dogs are well trained and do not pay any attention to the callers, then the caller should ignore them. It is quite good form to ask that a dog who is sniffing at one's ankles be taken away. The Pekingese, which doubtless had been encouraged to climb in people's laps, should have been gently deposited on the floor or told to get down. The polite hostess will take the hint and see that her pets do not climb into the lap of the caller.

Something is to be said for the hostess whose callers bring dogs when they call. The person who walks to social engagements with her dog prancing beside her or on a leash should find out if her dog would be welcome before she attempts to bring it into another person's house. No well-bred person will invade another home for a call or for an entertainment with a dog unless there is a certainty that the hostess will welcome the pet. The dog can be as much an uninvited guest as a person can be.

Neighbors lack ordinary politeness when they allow their dogs to bark and snarl at those who pass by, or invade other persons' yards and gardens. People who would never allow their children to call uninvited on their neighbors will allow their dogs to run over the neighbors' lawns, scratch in their flower beds and knock over the plants on the verandas.

A Small Gift Goes Long Way In Childhood

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

EVEN as an old lady, Mrs. Jones had a special fondness for pansies, or "hearts-ease" as she preferred to call them, all as a result of an episode of her childhood.

She was recovering from diphtheria, and the days were very long and tedious. Toys and books were forbidden lest they carry infection, and no one but her parents was allowed to go near her. The hours dragged away into infinity. Then one morning there came to the door a basket of pansies sent by an imaginative neighbor. There were hundreds of them, of all colors and sizes, dropped helter-skelter into the basket.

Comforted in Loneliness.

Instead of putting them in water, her mother gave them to the child, and for hours they comforted her in her loneliness. Picked in the early morning, they stayed fresh for a long time. The little girl sorted them by color and size, examined each little monkey-face separately, named them, made up stories about them. By night they were ready for the trash-basket, but another lot arrived in the morning.

A little goes a long way with an unspoiled child. But only the person with imagination can keep a child unspoiled and at the same time occupied and amused. The gardener who had the vision to send the flowers, the mother who could see the endless possibilities of such a gift, both gave the child something.

Content With Inferior Toys.

Furthermore, the age and circumstances in which the child lived helped. Easy mechanical toys were almost non-existent 40 years ago, and children who belonged to families of modest means were content with few, and what would today be thought very inferior, toys.

They were, however, no less happy; indeed, were often happier than the children of today. Their imaginations and interest were alive to a host of impressions which are denied to most modern children.

Woven Leaf Design In Coronation Gown

Paris, April 26 (U.P.).—Many of the court gowns for the Coronation are being made by Schiaparelli, including that of the Countess of Cromer.

One of Schiaparelli's most popular Coronation gowns is in white and gold lame with the material woven in a leaf design. The gown is simply cut with a draped bodice back and front with a low cut decolletage. The gown is tightly fitted over the hips, and has a soft drapery falling from the waistline in back. The court train of white and gold falls from the shoulders and extends several feet in the rear.

The same dress house is making the court gown for Mrs. Winston Churchill in a heavy white crepe with drapery and a regulation length train in back. White crepe roma in a draped model has been selected by Lady Haig for the Abbey ceremony.

Mrs. Lloyd Bride-to-Be, Entertained

Mrs. Edward G. Yonker Is Luncheon Hostess at Shoreham.

Miss Elizabeth Schneider Will Become Bride Monday Night.

Miss Elizabeth Gaede Schneider, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Schneider, who has selected Monday night, May 10, as the date of her marriage to Mr. Frank Allen, was guest of honor with Mrs. Fergus L. Lloyd, of Oakland, Calif., yesterday at a luncheon at the Shoreham given by the latter's mother, Mrs. Edward George Yonker.

Mrs. Lloyd, who was married in Washington three years ago, is here for a visit.

Miss Schneider is to be married at the Congressional Country Club, with the Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce officiating. A reception will follow the ceremony. Several parties are planned for her, including a dinner dance being given Saturday night by Miss Marjorie Brockett and Mr. James Heaton.

Miss Schneider will have as her only attendant her cousin, Miss Helen Marie Gaede, of Ridgewood, N. J. Mr. Francis Dickey Allen will serve as his brother's best man, and the ushers will be Mr. James Heaton, Mr. James Marsh, Mr. George Nowell and Mr. Carl Gaede, of Glenrock, N. J., another cousin.

Guests at the luncheon yesterday were Mrs. George MacNeill, of Morehead City, N. C.; Mrs. Graham Norris Lowden, of Philadelphia; Mrs. George A. Berry, Mrs. Thomas Humphries Horner, Mrs. Clarence Caldwell, of San Diego, Calif.; Mrs. Edward Blair Yonker, Mrs. Winton Elliott, Miss Elisabeth Schneider, Miss Margaret Ferguson and Miss Mary Kathryne Spinks.

'The Bachelors' To Give Dance

Will Be Hosts on Saturday Night to 'The Madhatters' at Belle Haven.

The Bachelors, a group of young men in Alexandria who have been invited each season to the dance given by The Madhatters, a group of young ladies who have issued invitations under that title, are now planning to entertain in honor of the girls. They will give a dance Saturday night at Belle Haven Country Club, with a cocktail party preceding it.

The Madhatters, who are organized chiefly for their annual dance, include Miss Randolph Richardson, the Misses Inez and Margaret Moore, Miss Mary Talman, Miss Courtenay Page Waller, Miss Vernie Blankenship, Miss Sarah Ellen Bowers, Miss Nancy Butzner, Miss Anne Carter, Miss Page Cauthorne, Miss Courtenay Cochran, Miss Anne Hunter, Miss Ella Jesse, Miss Elizabeth Nicholson, Miss Warwick Rust, Miss Elizabeth Schneider, Miss Elisabeth Swan, Miss Ellen Ticer and the Misses Elizabeth and Margaret Warwick.

The Bachelors, whose names appear on the invitations, are Mr. Franklin P. Backus, Mr. Robert Blickley, jr., Mr. C. C. Brown, Mr. J. C. Herbert Bryant, Mr. G. Anderton Burke, Mr. Everett Clarke, Mr. William A. Cleveland, Mr. John Hauber, Mr. Ashton C. Jones, jr., Mr. Donald King, Mr. Stanley King, Mr. W. Bernard Knight, Mr. Urban S. Lambert, sr., Mr. Robert E. Latham, Mr. Milton A. Leadbeater, Mr. John T. Martyn, jr., Mr. Thomas J. Moncure, Mr. Tom Monroe, jr., Mr. Reginald B. Munson, Mr. John R. Robinson, Mr. Charles B. Rollins, Mr. DeButts Saunders, Mr. Robert Schneider, Mr. E. Wallace Schreiner, Mr. Charles M. Shepperson, jr., Mr. Douglas R. Smith, Mr. Stanleigh Swan, Mr. Park Ticer, Mr. Robert G. Whitton and Dr. Herbert D. Wolff.

Alexandria to Open Homes to Tourists

Many Famous Old Houses Can Be Seen on Tour.

Many visitors will pass through the colonial doorways of Alexandria's old homes May 15, when the most historic residences will be opened for St. Paul's tour.

Several houses included in the tour never before have been open to the public. Among them is the handsome residence of Mrs. Davidson Maigne, which has been occupied by her family for five generations, and whose heirlooms have been kept intact. Another home opened for the first time is that of Mrs. John Tackett. While Alexandria was held by Federal forces in 1862 it was the home of Federal Judge Underwood, and many of the plans incident to the creation of West Virginia were formulated there.

The houses will be opened to the public from 10 a. m. to 1 p. m., and from 2 to 5 p. m.

Leaving Soon for Pacific Coast to Reside

Harris & Ewing.

Mrs. Royal Duncan Gardner and her four sons, Duncan, Kermit, Donald and Kenneth, will leave June 5 by motor for San Francisco, Calif., where they will join Mr. Gardner and make their home after three years' residence in the Capital. Mrs. Gardner has been prominent here in musical circles, having sung with the United States Army Band and, on several occasions, at large civic and club functions. She has also been head of the Red Cross Motor Corps, an office from which she has just resigned in preparation for leaving. The boys have the unusual distinction of all being twins. It is also a coincidence that the birthday of the older two, Kenneth and Kermit, is January 30, that of President Roosevelt, and of the younger, March 15, that of Andrew Jackson. Kermit is a freshman at George Washington University, Kenneth a senior at Roosevelt High School, and Donald and Duncan both are honor students at Paul Junior High School.

Mrs. Greenlee Will Be Guest

Senator's Wife Entertains at Luncheon Today for Colonial Dames.

Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, wife of Senator Lewis, is entertaining at luncheon today, at the 1925 F Street Club, in honor of Mrs. William Brooks Greenlee, president of the Illinois Society of Colonial Dames, of which Mrs. Lewis is a member.

Other honor guests are her cousin, Mrs. William Saunders Manning, president of the Florida Colonial Dames, and Mrs. George F. von Kolnitz, president of the South Carolina Society.

Other prominent members of the biennial council who will be present are Mrs. C. Frederick Childs, vice president of the Illinois Society; Mrs. Wentworth G. Field, an Illinois officer; Mrs. Frederick E. Swantrom, president of the Washington State Colonial Dames; Mrs. Russell C. Langdon, of the council, who is president of the Navy Sponsors National Society.

Also Mrs. Steadman V. Sanford, Mrs. John B. Whitney, Mrs. Shelby Myrick, Mrs. Frank F. Jones, delegates from Gergia; Mrs. Ernest W. King, delegate from South Carolina; Mrs. Robert Peck, former presidnt of the Illinois Colonial Dames; Mrs. Warren Austin, wife of Senator Austin, delegate from Vermont; Mrs. H. P. Adair, member from Florida, and Mrs. George T. Marye of Washington.

A Constitution Dinner at the Shoreham this evening will conclude the social activities of the twenty-third biennial council of the National Society. Mr. Gilbert Montague, of New York, will be the guest of honor and speaker.

The final business session of the council will be held tomorrow morning.

The Club of Colonial Dames gave a reception at the clubhouse last evening in honor of Mrs. Joseph B. Hutchinson, president, and the national officers. Mrs Harry F. Robinson, president of the Club of Colonial Dames, received, and was assisted by the past presidents of the club, who are Mrs. James Carroll Frazier, Mrs. Thomas Taliaferro, Mrs. Everard R. Todd, Mrs. Hughes Oliphant, Mrs. Wilkins Shields and Mrs. Gilman Brenizer.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss opened her famous gardens at Dumbarton Oaks to the visiting members of the Colonial Dames. Mrs. Bliss, who wore a lemon-colored two-piece suit and white panama hat banded with emerald chiffon, mingled with the visitors, who strolled through the beautiful 67-acre garden which is now in full bloom.

Mrs. Robert Fenner Jackson, of Nashville, president of the Tennessee society, entertained the national officers and several delegates in her suite at the Shoreham after the Sulgrave lecture last night. Mrs. Jackson's daughter, Mrs. Marvin E. Holderness, of St. Louis, is with her.

Fashion Show Will Feature Medical Center Garden Party

The annual bridge and garden party at the Army Medical Center, Walter Reed Hospital, will be held Saturday afternoon, May 22, for the benefit of the Memorial Chapel Guild and the Army Relief Society. One of the features will be a fashion show.

Arrangements are under the direction of a committee headed by Mrs. Wallace DeWitt, of the Memorial Chapel Guild, and Mrs. Albert N. Baggs, of the Grey Ladies of the American Red Cross in Washington. The card party will be held in the Red Cross House at the Center at 2 p. m., to be followed by the Fashion Show at 4:30, and tea in the formal garden at 5 o'clock.

This event celebrates the birthday anniversary of the Grey Ladies, and a big birthday cake is always a feature of the occasion, usually cut by Gen. John Pershing. Owing to the absence of Gen. Pershing, who has gone to England to attend the coronation, his place and part in the program will be taken by another prominent person.

Music will be furnished by the United States Army Band.

Abigail Hartman Rice Chapter, D. A. R., will hold a benefit bridge party Saturday, May 15, at 8 p. m. at the Thomas Circle Club, 1326 Massachusetts avenue northwest. Mrs. Marie Rice, regent of the chapter, has appointed the following committee: Mrs. Edgar E. Good, chairman; Mrs. Goodwin W. Miller, vice chairman; Mrs. John F. Wolfe and Mrs Herbert H Shinnick.

The chapter sent several underprivileged children to summer camp last year, and hopes to obtain enough funds to materially increase the number of children which it will send this coming summer.

The honor music group and glee clubs of Friendship House, under the direction of Jessie M. Olin, will give a program in the Parish Hall of the Church of the Reformation, 212 East Capitol street, Wednesday, May 12, at 8:15 o'clock. They will present "The Lad of Stratford," a one-act play with music, based on the boyhood of Shakespeare, written and arranged by Milnor Dorey and Bryceson Treharne, and "The Seven Old Ladies of Lavender Town," an operetta in two acts, by H. C. Bunner. Those assisting in the preparation of this program are Sonia de Blunmenthal Gardella, dramatic coach; Doris Hilton, scenery; Bernice Anderson Kendall, costumes, and Mrs. Charles A. Klesius, folk dances. Piano solos will be played by Karlien Meyer, who also will accompany for the operetta. The patrons and patronesses for this program are Dr. and Mrs. Oscar Blackwelder, Dr. and Mrs. John Weldley, Mrs. Merle Cain, Mrs. Henry Hesse, Miss Freda Van Nest, Miss Anna Hinkel, Mrs. Wilhelm Krechting and Mrs. David Yount.

Members of the Institute of World Affairs living in and near Washington met last night in the Romaine-van Schaick room of the Universalist National Memorial Church, Sixteenth and S streets northwest, at 8 o'clock. Miss Ruth Dawson, Mrs. Eleanor Bonner and Mr. Allan H. Lester were the committee in charge.

The secretary of the institute told of the courses scheduled. Among informal discussions by members was a brief summary by Dr. Frederick W. Perkins, of the place of the institute in relation to the study of American foreign policy.

Miss Irene Wright, who recently has returned from Spain, told of situations there.

The faculty of the institute, Dr. Arthur I. Andrews, dean, each August conducts courses and round tables on world affairs at Ferry Beach, Saco, Me., and also provides opportunity for members to continue their progress in the field of international relations throughout the year by periodically publishing annotated bibliographies for them. Among faculty and lecturers have been Profs. George Grafton Wilson, Clifford C. Hubbard, Joseph Mayer, and Benjamin G. B. Durkee, as well as several diplomats.

The Ferry Beach Park Association's dormitories and classrooms provide comfortable facilities in a cool vacation land. This year's session will be from August 14 to 21. Many from legations here have been guests of the institute. Members are inviting friends from groups interested in the conduct of foreign relations.

At a meeting Tuesday at the home of Mrs. William Bullis, Silver Spring, Md., Abigail Hartman Rice Chapter, D. A. R., elected the following officers to serve during the coming year: Regent, Miss Marie Rice; vice regent, Mrs. Edgar E. Good; chaplain, Mrs. Sterling P. Eagleton; recording secretary, Mrs. Lewis B. Rhodes; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Goodwin W. Miller; registrar, Miss Natalie Hammond Schneider; historian, Miss Audrey Belt; treasurer, Mrs. Leonard W. Richardson.

Mrs. Edwin H. Etz and Miss Clara R. Saunders will be hostesses for the chafing dish supper at the Arts Club this evening, when Mr. W. Lester Stevens will be the guest of honor. Mr. Stevens is a National Academician and has been conducting a sketch class in this city for the last two weeks and the subject of his talk this evening will be "Culture Needs a New Deal."

D. C. Man Weds Miss Beaulac

S. P. Gilstrap Marries Oklahoma Girl in Arkansas.

The wedding of Miss Mary Ethel Beaulac, of Oklahoma City, and Mr. Samuel Patrick Gilstrap, of Washington, director of finance and statistics for the National Youth Administration, took place last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hull on the campus of Arkansas Polytechnic College at Russellville. A reception was held immediately after the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. John Morris, of that city.

Miss Beaulac, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund J. Beaulac, of Oklahoma City, attended college at St. Joseph's, Emmitsburg, Md. Mr. Gilstrap is the son of Mrs. Harry B. Gilstrap and the late Mr. Gilstrap, of Oklahoma City.

He received his B. S. at Oklahoma A. & M. in 1930 and his LL. B. at the Cumberland School of Law in 1931. He was affiliated with Kappa Sigma, national social fraternity; Pi Kappa Delta, forensic fraternity; Theta Alpha Psi, national dramatic fraternity; the Players' Club; Press Club and Scabbard and Blade, national military fraternity. Mrs. Barnett Gives Tea To Honor Mrs. Fairfax Hostess and Guest of Honor Receive in Drawing Room; Mrs. Arthur Nixon Celebrates Birth Anniversary.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Mrs. George Barnett was hostess at a tea yesterday afternoon which she gave at her home on Rhode Island avenue in honor of Mrs. Ronald Fairfax, of Roanoke, Va., who is visiting her for a few days. Mrs. Arthur Nixon, of Minneapolis, Minn., sister of the late Maj. Gen. Barnett, also was there and was celebrating her eightieth birthday. It is the first time she has been here for seven years.

The hostess and guest of honor received in the drawing room on the second floor. The tea table was in the dining room adjoining where there is a handsome portrait of Gen. Barnett, who was major general commandant of the Marine Corps during the World War. Mrs. William Barret Ridgely, Miss Elizabeth Howry and Miss Elizabeth Sinclair, a cousin of the hostess, alternated in pouring during the afternoon. Miss Sinclair, with her father, Mr. Arthur Sinclair, is here from New York, and tomorrow they will leave, accompanied by Mrs. Barnett, for Hot Springs to spend a few days.

Among the guests yesterday was Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman, another cousin of the hostess, who, her friends have learned, is leaving shortly for Europe to attend the marriage of her niece, Mrs. Wallis Simpson, and the Duke of Windsor. She wore a costume of black with narrow white piping trimming the front of her dress and the hip-length cape lined in white. Her hat of black straw was shell-shaped and had a short veil.

Among others there were Dr. and Mrs. Laurence Benet, Mrs. Isaac T. Mann and Miss Mary Howry who, with her sister, is leaving May 15 for their summer home at Beckett, Mass., in the Berkshires. They have rented their house in Georgetown for the season to Judge Thomas McAllister, who is here with Mrs. McAllister for a few months from Michigan as a special assistant to the Attorney General.

Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, wife of Senator Lewis, was among the guests, as was Mrs. Royal S. Copeland, wife of Senator Copeland, whose new book is to come out on May 17. She and Senator Copeland will go to Philadelphia Saturday for the celebration of the signing of the Constitution, at which he and Senators Peter G. Gerry and Pat McCarran will speak. From there she will go to New York.

Mrs. George C. Thorpe, who will make the final safety talk in her radio series on Tuesday, was in a group in the dining room with Mr. and Mrs. Wade Ellis.

Also present were Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, wearing a gay spring print with a little line of flowers around the crown of her hat, matching the colors of those in her dress; Mrs. William Wheatley, Gen. and Mrs. Hugh Matthews, Miss Janet Richards, wearing a small ermine scarf; Baroness von Below, in gray; the Minister of Greece, Mr. Demitrios Sicilianos; Mrs. Sol Bloom, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Elliott Tuckerman, of New York.

Miss Barbara Field to Be Married To Mr. Anthony A. Bliss, of New York

Of interest to Washington is the engagement of Miss Barbara Field, daughter of Mrs. Diego Suarez and Mr. Marshall Field, of New York, to Mr. Anthony A. Bliss, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Bliss, of New York and Westbury, Long Island. Both families are well known in the Capital and Mrs. Bliss was a visitor last week at the home of Mrs. Dwight Davis.

Miss Field, a great granddaughter of the late Marshall Field, founder of Marshall Field & Co., of Chicago, was graduated from the Brearley School in New York. She was introduced to society last summer at a dinner given by her mother at her country home, Easton, in Syosset, Long Island, and later that evening at a dance given by her father at Caumsett, his country place in Lloyd Neck, Huntington, Long Island.

Mr. Bliss is a grandson of the late Cornelius N. Bliss, Secretary of the Interior in the Cabinet of President McKinley, and a nephew of the late Miss Lizzie P. Bliss, one of the organizers of the Museum of Modern Art, to which she left her famous collection of modern paintings. Mr. Bliss attended Groton School and was graduated from Harvard in 1936. He is now a student at Columbia Law School.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe are at their Newport home, Berry Hill, for the spring and summer season. They will be joined by Miss Molly Howe, their daughter, at the close of her school.

Mr. Justice and Mrs. George Sutherland will sail on Wednesday, June 9, for several months in Europe, returning in time for the convening of the Supreme Court the first of October.

Mrs. Ralph Church, wife of Representative Church, of Illinois, entertained at a luncheon yesterday in honor of Mrs. Daniel Reed, president of the Congressional Club. On Tuesday she entertained at a luncheon at which Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone and Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., were the ranking guests.

The Minister of Panama and Senora de Boyd have canceled all social engagements, as they are in deep mourning.

Mrs. Gerald Linke and Mrs. R. B. Buchanan, last night entertained at dinner at the Chevy Chase Country Club in honor of Capt. Marcus Zar, Chief of Aviation of Argentina.

The guests included Rear Admiral and Mrs. Gilbert Rowcliffe, the First Secretary of the Argentine Embassy, Senor Don Hector Leguizamon, the Naval Attache of the Argentine Embassy and Senora de Sueyro, Capt. and Mrs. Alan Chantry, Col. and Mrs. John Coulter, Commander Vance Chapline, Commander and Mrs. Henry A. Seiller, Lieut. Comdr. Bonnet, of Argentina; Mrs. Van Rennep and Lieut. and Mrs. John Greenslade.

Mr. and Mrs. Wade Ellis will be "at home" at their historic country estate Rippon Lodge Sunday afternoon. No cards have been issued.

Rippon Lodge, which was one of the places open for the Virginia Garden tour, is 20 miles below Alexandria, on the Richmond highway. The house, overlooking the Potomac, is half a mile in from the highway.

Miss Alice Noel Tuckerman is in New York, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Randall Creel.

Mrs. Phelps Brown, of Springfield, Mass., the former Miss Catherine Ridgely, is here for a short stay. She spent the winter in Florida and stopped in Richmond, Va., on her way to Washington to visit her daughter, Mrs. Scott Parrish.

Chancellor, Mrs. Gray Honor Junior Class

Hostess to Californians.

Miss Mabel Walker Willebrandt will entertain the California delegates to the American Law Institute at a buffet supper at the Sulgrave Club this evening.

Highland Gardens Open for Tea-Musicale

Hessler-Henderson.

MISS ALICE JEAN INGERSOLL, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Royal Ingersoll, will present the musical program for a garden tea to be given Saturday at Highlands, home of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Cary T. Grayson on Wisconsin avenue. Miss Ingersoll, at 15 years of age, is an accomplished pianist and is studying under Mrs. Fannie Amstutz Roberts at the Washington College of Music. The tea is being given as a benefit of the Women's Auxiliary of St. Alban's Church.

THE MERRY WHIRL

By Marylyn

If you want a half hour's good, wholesome fun and perhaps a bargain or two, or even three—come with us to the rummage sale going on this week at 1201 Connecticut avenue under the very able and enthusiastic guidance of the ladies of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps.

Here we go—in the door where Mrs. Harold J. Nelson is presiding over a young garden of flowers, roses, violets, lilacs and just about every blossom that is out these days—next there is a table loaded with pictures and prints.

A young man—no, several young men—are clamoring for hunting prints and are promising to come back in a day or so to see if any have been donated.

Mrs. William Pye, wife of the Admiral, in a black frock effectively trimmed with bright printed crepe on the bodice, is going about pepping up sales at each booth.

Ellen Bryden, in a bright blue and white linen print and a cute wee nothing of a hat is dashing about trying to find a mate in a pair of shoes someone has designs on—

Dr. Dimas Aruti, arriving with a very determined look in his eye and hurrying right on through the doorway and past the tables of wares, as though he had a very definite something in mind.

Each and everyone entering being terribly impressed by the two tall, immaculately uniformed Marines standing guard just outside—

Mrs. William O. Spears, wearing a good looking brown ensemble, talking to a friend about her son at Annapolis, and her plans for entertaining Sarah Thompson, winsome Randolph-Macon student who is due here for a visit—

The note and calling card of our First Lady tacked up on a near wall—she sent some perfectly gorgeous posies, from the White House, not to be sold, but given to each purchaser—

Everybody having a very pleasant time, the sale being for charity and the sellers as well as the "sellees" making it more of a social function than a job.

* * * *

A gay halloo from the curb, the sound of screetching brakes and there was Patsy Brewer in a swanky green roadster with her two dogs, Sir Cuthbert Marmaduke, a dignified spaniel with sad eyes, and Miss Pat, a frisky roguish Scottie, giving us the once over from their perch.

* * * *

Michal Budny, of the Polish Embassy, and Joao de Deus Ramos, of the Portuguese Legation, two of the most popular diplomatic bachelors, were comparing their woes over salads and iced tea at Pierre's yesterday.

* * * *

If you think little Helen Fish looks as though she might be excited about something—she is! There is a long, fairly involved story that goes something like this: Helen, who has been interested in dramatics ever since she could read and talk, was spurred on to radio ambitions by a ring of friends, with the result that she finally decided to call up one of the stations and inquire about the procedure one has to go through in order to get to the person or persons who give auditions. Well, when she called up, somehow or other she reached the head man, who immediately saw possibilities in her voice and asked her to come right over. And then what? Well, our Helen is deserting Washington for New York, packing up and taking a train in a week or so, and already is signed up for two programs a week on the air. And not only that, but she is to have a screen test to see whether or not Hollywood might be her next destination, and also keeping television in mind. Good luck, Helen!

Saw Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, just as she was about to step into her car in front of the Carlton. Smartly attired as she always is, Mrs. Hull was in black and white, with a tricky little black, shiny straw hat, the brim of which was turned up in front and fastened to the crown.

These people who can just up and leave for a Mediterranean cruise, deserting their offices and all that, simply turn us green with envy. Stanley Current, now basking in the sun at the Greenbrier, will set sail from New York the end of this month on his voyage. In Naples he will tarry a while and will be the guest of the Doug MacArthurs—Doug having just gone there for duty.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Cohn have returned to their home in New York, after passing several days with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Riefkin.

Mrs. Morris Cafritz, Mrs. Frederick Pelzman and Mrs. Martin Mendelsohn have motored to Charlottesville, Va., to attend the spring meeting of the Regional Federation of Temple Sisterhoods, of which Mrs. Cafritz is president.

Mrs. Curtis Is Hostess At Hospitals Appeal Tea

1925 F Street Club Is Opened to Public for the Occasion; Music, Food and Flowers Donated in Charity Drive.

By Dudley Harmon.

Mrs. James F. Curtis, who has a reputation as one of the Capital's premier party-givers, yesterday turned her abilities as a hostess to opening the 1925 F Street Club to the public for the benefit of the United Hospitals Appeal. Not only did she spend the entire morning putting 192 daisy plants into the garden, to add to its attractiveness for the afternoon, but, at the tea, she herself handed around the platters of delicious turkey and watercress sandwiches for which the club is famous.

Tables were arranged on the grass and brick terrace behind the club, which used to be Mrs. Curtis's home. Sidney's orchestra played during the afternoon, and his music, like the food, flowers and service, was donated for the occasion.

The same attention to detail which characterized the food was evident in the arrangement of flowers on the tables. Crystal vases of big white roses and larkspur, of tulips and jonquils, added to the artistic appearance of the garden.

There was a concerted move in the direction of Miss Ruth Draper when she arrived during the course of the afternoon, wearing a print dress and matching beige hat. Everybody wanted to meet the famous monologist. She sat in a garden chair chatting with Mrs. Phillip Coffin, who takes a leading part in work for the Children's Country Home, and Mrs. D. Lawrence Groner, president of the ladies' board of Columbia Hospital.

In fact, the presidents of eight hospital ladies' boards were present yesterday afternoon assisting Mrs. Curtis: Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke, who wore a black and white printed jacket with her silk frock; Mrs. Clarence Dodge, Mrs. J. L. B. Murray, Mrs. L. B. Norris, Mrs. George P. Scriven, Mrs. H. H. Semmes and Mrs. H. Clifford Bangs.

Others who assisted or were present during the afternoon included Mrs. Montgomery Blair and Mrs. Louis Caldwell, who served tea; Mrs. John Lyon, Mrs. Richard Wilmer, Mrs. Donald Richberg, in a navy blue pleated frock with a white collar and a blue hat; Mrs. Merle Thorpe, Mrs. L. B. Norris, Miss Madeline Cotter, Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, Mrs. John M. Carmody, Mrs. William A. Morgan and Miss Peggy Duffy.

Playing bridge on the porch of the club were Mrs. Wallach Merriam, sister-in-law of Mrs. Curtis, and a group of friends including Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, who recently returned from Europe. She wore yesterday a cape of silver foxes and a small black hat with a red pompom.

SOCIAL NOTES

Mr. Cyro de Freitas-Valle, former Counselor of the Brazilian Embassy, arrived in Washington with his son and is staying at the Embassy. He left Washington a year ago to become Minister to Cuba, and has now been transferred to Rumania as Minister there.

The Naval Attache of the Japanese Embassy and Mme. Kobayashi entertained at a cocktail party this afternoon in their apartment at the Alban Towers.

Mrs. William Wood Ricker will give a tea today at her apartment, 1700 Rhode Island avenue. Guests will include several Representatives, members of the American Law Institute meeting here this week and delegates to the convention of the National Society of Colonial Dames of America.

Mrs. W. W. Chiswell, of Washington, has sailed on the Berengaria for a sojourn in Europe.

Mr. and Mrs. Ash Return to Capital.

Mrs. Wintemute W. Sloan entertained at a luncheon at the Shoreham yesterday in honor of Mrs. Tilman Bacon Parks, who is retiring this week as president of the Political Study Club. Mrs. Parks is the wife of Representative Parks.

The guests included Mrs. Frank Morrison, Mrs. Frank M. Shortall, Mrs. William Kinnan, Mrs. P. Lee Hodges, Mrs. Philip B. Matz, Mrs. Lane Schofield, Mrs. Warren J. Haines, Mrs. Needham C. Gillingham, Mrs. Byron M. Coon, Mrs. William McGee, Mrs. William A. Boss and Mrs. Joseph F. Randall.

Mrs. Celia Rosen, of St. Louis, Mo., is here for a short stay. She is registered at the Shoreham Hotel.

Miss Gertrude Maser has returned from England, where she spent several weeks in travel.

Mr. J. Russell Carney, who formerly resided at the Dupont Circle apartments, has returned to his residence at 2 East Eighty-sixth street in New York City.

Frank Mondell, Jr., Miss Ethel Murdock Wedding Saturday

Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Wilson, jr., gave a dinner at their New York residence last evening in honor of Miss Ethel Natalie Murdock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Murdock, of Larchmont, N. Y., and her fiance, Mr. Frank Wheeler Mondell, jr., son of former Representative and Mrs. Frank Wheeler Mondell, of Washington.

Their marriage will take place on Saturday in New York and will be followed by a reception at the Ambassador Hotel, where Mr. and Mrs. Alfons B. Landa, of Washington, members of the wedding party, and the bride-to-be and her mother are passing the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacques Living in Washington

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Francis Jacques, who were married Monday at the Carmelite Monastery Chapel, are living in Washington, where the bridegroom is associated with one of the Government departments.

The bride is the former Miss Mary G. Shea, of Hartford, Conn., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Shea, of Holyoke, Mass. Mr. Jacques is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Jacques, also of Holyoke.

Air Bureau Opens Inspection Branch

Organization of the certificate and inspection division within the Bureau of Air Commerce, to be headed by Bryan M. Jacobs, was announced yesterday by Secretary of Commerce Roper.

The division is one of seven announced last week by the Secretary in a complete reorganization of the bureau. At that time, personnel of five divisions was appointed. The remaining division, the safety and planning section, probably will not be organized for some time.

Seven sections, one devoted to international airline inspection service, will be embraced in the new divisions. The other units include interstate airline inspection service, headed by J. B. Jaynes; aircraft airworthiness, L. V. Kerber; general inspection service, R. S. Boutelle; medical, Dr. R. E. Whitehead; airways inspection service, Harry Agerter; link trainer service, Ward Davis.

Robert S. Scott Gets Boiler Inspector Post

Robert S. Scott, of the Columbia Casualty Co., New York City, was appointed by the District Commissioners yesterday to fill the vacancy left Tuesday by the resignation of Price M. Greenlaw, District boiler inspector. Scott is now in Dallas, Tex.

On the Air Today

Rudy Vallee's show, as advertised, comes from London tonight, at the usual hour. The young radio impresario has not been idle since he arrived in the British metropolis, for we learn that no less than the Lord Mayor of London, Sir George Thomas Broadbridge, will head the "guest stars." We Americans have a definitely curious vernacular. What I would like to know is whether the Lord Mayor knows he is being billed on this side as a "guest star." Vallee and these other variety gentlemen have offered everything from trained ducks to movie stars' mothers as guest stars. Anyway, the Lord Mayor, is the starriest of the night's "guest stars."

Others to be presented are Richard Tauber, operatic and concert tenor; Charles Laughton, stage and screen actor, and Will Fyffe, English music hall comedy singer. For the feminine touch you'll hear Binnie Hale, film and musical comedy star. For good measure, some instrumental music by the Royal Guards Band is also on the bill.

Weather forecasts for the transatlantic short waving are reported as excellent. N. B. C. feels that the program should be received quite clearly.

The Lord Mayor's contribution will be an interview with Rudy on various aspects of the coronation. Laughton will do a sketch. (Oddly enough Laughton has been heard by radio listeners on this side just three times and all came by short wave from London.)

Before long Washington listeners should note a distinctly stronger signal coming from WRC. The Federal Trade Commission yesterday approved an increase in WRC's power from 500 watts to 1,000 watts night time, and 1,000 watts to 5,000 watts day time. At the same time the commission approved WRC's application to move its transmitter from atop the Riggs Bank Building at Fourteenth street and Park road northwest, to a plot on the Alger road in Prince Georges County. Naturally the strength of WRC's signals (in other words the volume with which programs are received on your home set) should be greater with the use of the increase power. N. B. C. will construct a 400-foot radio tower on the new transmitter site. The company announces also that it has dedicated 23 acres of the land it acquired on option for the new transmitter building and tower to the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission as an extension to a park proposed for the neighborhood.

Other features:

"Myriad Voices"—In another "Do You Remember?" group, at the organ, WMAL, at 9:45 a. m. Tickets to the Rialto if you guess the titles of the tunes.

Kate Smith—Competing with Vallee's London show for attention, presents Margale Gillmore, Ilka Chase and Earle Larrimore, in Winter's "The Shining Hour," WJSV, at 7.

Boston Symphony—Begins another season of "Pop Concerts," WMAL, at 7:30. Arthur Fiedler conducting. This is the fifty-second season.

"Show Boat"—Presents Nadine Conner, soprano; Margaret McCrae, blues singer; Lizzy Wilson, originator of the "Schnitzelbank" song game, WRC, at 8. Lanny sings "Summer Is A-Comin' In," said to be the oldest known song in the English language.

John Steele — Pre-coronation broadcast from London, WOL, at 8:15.

Spelling Bee—In new series, taking over the "America's Town Hall" period, WMAL, at 8:30. Teams from Smith College and University of Pennsylvania.

Mary Garden—In interview with Bing Crosby, WRC, at 9. She will not sing. Also Janice Porter, opera sensation; Basil Rathbone and Connie Boswell.

Jamboree—With Eleanore Whitney, tap dancer; Morey Amsterdam, comedian, and the Cadets, WMAL, at 10. Also Sylvia Clark and Harry Kogen's orchestra.

Here and there: Ronald Dawson celebrates this week when he directs his Northern Dramatic Company in "Extremity" at WOL. It will be Dawson's 1,500th radio show. Mrs. Ralph Elliott is expected to provide Uncle Arthur Godfrey with some extra shenanigans in his "Moon Dial" tonight. Mrs. Elliott is Larry Elliott's sister-in-law and has just returned from Hawaii with an arm full of genuine Hawaiian recorded music—and a fairly good impression of a Hula dancer as the Hula really should be done. Godfrey will be able to project the records if not the Hula for his audience tonight.

Aside to Margaret G. Price: The top price for Crosby under the terms of his reported contract is $7,500 weekly . . . Aside to Marie: No one knows why the radio mind operates as it does but for what apparently was considered good and sufficient reasons, Ted Malone was not continued on a sustaining basis after his commercial contract expired. WJSV, perhaps, could take it up with New York and tell you why.

Callahan Resigns His N.B.C. Positions

Resignation of Vincent F. Callahan, commercial manager of the National Broadcasting Company's two Washington radio stations, was announced yesterday by Kenneth H. Berkeley, general manager. Callahan leaves Washington May 17 to become general manager of Radio Station WWL, at New Orleans. Berkeley also announced the appointment of John H. Dodge, for the last three years a member of the sales staff of WRC and WMAL, to succeed Callahan.

Callahan is a native of Washington and has been associated with publishing and radio concerns in the city for 15 years.

G.W. Woman's Hall To Be Dedicated

The Hattie M. Strong Residence Hall, George Washington University's first campus home for women students, will be dedicated tomorrow at 4:30 p. m.

Mrs. Henry Alvah Strong, donor of the hall and a member of the university's board of trustees, will unveil a tablet. The dedicatory address will be made by Mrs. Harper Sibley.

Society Will Hold Coronation Dance

The District Chapter of the Daughters of Scotia will celebrate the coronation of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth with a banquet and dance at the Raleigh Hotel Saturday.

Addresses will be made by several members of the local British colony, including Sir Willmott Lewis, Washington correspondent of the London times, and Leander McCormick-Goodhart, of the British Embassy.

Bob Burns Says

Copyright, 1937.

By Bob Burns.

You hear a whole lot about actors havin' "Yes Men" but I don't think you ought'ta blame the actors. Some of 'em are so bad they have'ta hire somebody to tell 'em they're good.

I remember one actor down home that was so bad the audience started to hiss him. He came out and says "I've been hissed all over the country, but this is the first time I ever had the entire audience hiss me." So Uncle Fud rose up and says "I didn't hiss ya, Brother." The actor ran down the aisle and says "Well, mister, Want'ta shake hands with you for not hissin' me." He says "Did'ja really like my act?" and Uncle Fud says "No, it wasn't that—I was yawnin' at the time!"

Death Warrant

"Like a man reading the notice of his own hanging," was the reaction of the individual technical worker in the Procurement Division of Treasury when, last Saturday morning, he saw in the newspapers accounts of an impending lay-off of 210 workers of the technical class. This was the first official intimation the technical employes had of the lay-off; and they promptly issued a press release saying that they felt like men who see their own names on a death warrant.

Individually, and later collectively, they wondered why the Government had gone to pains to inform the newspapers before informing the people whose bread and butter were imperiled. Then they sent a committee on grievances to the office of Director Peoples—could not obtain an interview there—and then proceeded to the office of W. N. Rehlaender, Peoples' administrative assistant, who talked to them awhile.

There they asked: "Continuation of the department's building program until, at least, the end of the fiscal year . . . Extension of the present lay-off notices until that time . . . In all cases where lay-offs are necessary, a minimum of two weeks' notice exclusive of accrued leave, be granted.

They were assured of the latter request; the other requests are still suspended in the wide air. Then the F. A. E. C. T. called what amounted to an indignation meeting for Tuesday afternoon in its headquarters at 808 Seventeenth street northwest. Only 15 persons were present. "Indignation isn't ripe as yet," the leaders inferred; it probably won't be ripe until after they've gotten the official notices laying them off."

* * * *

'A Mess'

Talking informally at the meeting Tuesday afternoon, the technical workers said in effect that "this is a pretty mess . . . We're not clerks or a lot of kids; we're settled professional people and many of us have resided in Washington for three years or more . . . We've established our families here . . . Many of us have built homes . . . Our average salary range is between $2,600 and $3,000 a year . . . And there's little possibility of deferring the lay-offs."

About all this, their press release, issued the day the blow fell, read in part:

"Although rumors of possible lay-offs have always been rampant in the Procurement Division, due to the persistent lack of a fair personnel policy, these employes had not been given official notification of their dismissal. The Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians, a national organization of technical employes numbering many members in the Procurement Division, had previously attempted to interview the officials of the department, but the officials not only refused the interview, but also refused to give out any statement to the demoralized employes who are so vitally concerned.

"The newspaper accounts gave 'reduced Federal building activity and no other cause' as the reason for the wholesale lay-offs. Large lay-offs one year ago were caused by 'lack of funds' and partly explained as an attempt to stretch out each year's building program over the entire year without any violent fluctuations in the number of employes.

"This year's appropriation for the department was about equal to that of the previous year and the force of architects and engineers was much smaller. It is implied that there are sufficient funds to continue all employes to the end of the fiscal year," it was said.

The division's announcement to the newspapers said that "services of employes (involved in the lay-off) will be terminated on May 15 . . . Included in the list . . . are 144 architects, 41 mechanical and electrical engineers and 21 structural engineers . . . Letters addressed to the employes pointed out that the termination of their services was because of reduced Federal building activity and for no other cause . . .The present reduction in the force of emergency technical employes leaves a force of 295 workers still employed . . . These changes do not affect the permanent staff of technical employes or the temporarily employed 21 architectural engineers."

The Agriculture Athletic and Recreational Association will sponsor a dance Saturday evening, May 15, in the patio of the Administration Building. Mary Lou Mercer, the association's secretary writes in . . . Those serving on the dance committee are: J. H. Lyman, J. A. Bertolini, Mrs. Elsie Romero, Mrs. Mercer, Archie Edwards, Mrs. Ruby Stehr and Mrs. Gertrude Rest . . . The hours will be from 9 to midnight.

Cancer Clinic For Jefferson Shrine Asked

Proposed Center Would Be 'Living Memorial,' Rep. Hunter Says.

Nagle Backs Pope Plan, Denies Approaches Part of Expense.

Naming of the proposed National Cancer Institute for Thomas Jefferson was urged yesterday on the House floor by Representative Hunter (Democrat), of Ohio.

Meanwhile, landscaping features of the John Russell Pope plan for a Thomas Jefferson Memorial at the Tidal Basin were defended by John L. Nagle, National Park Service engineer in charge of the monument's construction.

According to Hunter, the cancer center would constitute "a living memorial" to Jefferson and would link his name with a national fight on "the most horrible disease of modern times."

Establishment of the cancer clinic was proposed recntly in the House by Representative Maury Maverick (Democrat), of Texas.

Report Nearly Completed.

Nagle's arguments, contained in a letter to Chairman Kent E. Keller, of the House Library Committee, were made public by Keller as he neared completion of a report on the entire controversy. The report is expected to be submitted to the House this week, accompanied by Representative Allen T. Treadway's bill barring use of the park site for the memorial.

The Junior Board of Commerce yesterday joined the list of civic organizations which have opposed erection of the huge marble temple at the Tidal Basin. Explaining its stand, the board cited the proposed destruction of the Japanese cherry trees, extensive alterations to the basin and the great cost of the project.

According to Nagle, the large sums of money which would be expended on the approaches to the memorial should not be considered part of the expense.

Like New Courthouse.

"If a county builds a new courthouse, then clearly the cost of the courthouse and the improvements of the courthouse yard is a proper charge against the courthouse, but invariably the county seat, having a brand-new courthouse, will desire to widen and pave Main street, or the city square, and the merchants around the town will fix up their store fronts," he informed Keller.

"All of these improvements cost a lot of money and were occasioned by the building of the courthouse, but their combined cost cannot rightfully be said to be a part of the cost of the courthouse.

Accordingly, said Nagle, the cost of land improvements "should be charged against the improvements and not against the memorial structure, which forms the nucleus of this particular improvement project."

Auditorium Considered.

A resolution urging the Thomas Jefferson Memorial be in the form of a huge municipal auditorium was considered last night by the Friendship Heights Citizens Association.

The association selected a special committee to work toward establishment of a boys club for the community. Members are Samuel J. Flickinger, James W. Broyden and Leighton Cornwell.

Better bus service on the Wisconsin avenue and American University lines was urged. It further was requested that the fare on the American University line be reduced to a token basis, as on street cars.

11 Housebreakings Charged to Man

Eleven indictments charging Orville Lee, colored, with housebreaking and larceny were returned by the District grand jury yesterday to Justice Peyton Gordon. In another series of presentations, the grand jurors charged Thomas Kauffman with five instances of housebreaking and larceny.

Others indicted were: Johnnie Jones, William Simon, William Edward Johnson and John A. Harvey, housebreaking; Max Pollicove, receiving stolen property; Thomas L. Clark, Walter P. Davis, James Lockhart, Pearly Hubbard, Willis Fairfax, Edward H. Fuller, Douglas L. Steele and Mert Passagno, joy-riding; Walter P. Davis, Mildred Mullin, Joseph W. Hill, Jack R. Bailey, Samuel L. Bush, Mervin H. Lacey, Edward T. Glaze, Dominick Malmone and Joseph Kowski, Grand larceny; Louis Franklin, robbery; Hobart Guthrie, Robert Wills, Clayton C. Jackson, Richmond Bowens, John Barber, James Cromer, Garland Smith, Clancy Rich and Morris T. Deskins, assault with dangerous weapon; Nicholas Velasquez, assault with intent to commit rape; Edward Coleman, assault with intent to commit robbery.

Those against whom the grand jury ignored charges were: John C. Yates and Hugh B. Smith, grand larceny; Thomas P. Herbert, bribery, and Joe Marvin Adams, rape.

Homeopaths Conclude Meeting With Banquet

A federation of homeopaths consisting of the Maryland, Virginia and District societies concluded their annual meeting Tuesday night with a banquet in the Mayflower Hotel.

Presidents of the three societies addressed greetings. They are Dr. R. B. Lawrence, of the Virginia Society; Dr. Henry Russel, of the Maryland Society, and Dr. Julia Green, of the District Society. Earlier in the day, scientific papers had been read.

25,000 Boy Scouts Expected Here for National Jamboree

Will Begin June 1; Tents, Administration Buildings Begin to Rise Along Potomac; When Completed Will Cover 350 Acres.

A city of tents began to appear along the Potomac yesterday to house the 25,000 Boy Scouts who will come to Washington June 30 for their first National Jamboree.

Already some of the "administration buildings" have been constructed, and others will go up in the next six and seven weeks. These will be the nucleus for perhaps 10,000 canvas-topped dwellings for the youngsters, who will come from every State.

Inspecting preliminary work here yesterday was Dr. James E. West, of New York, chief executive Scout.

"We've made arrangements to handle at least 25,000 boys and perhaps more," asserted West yesterday, as he tramped sections of the 350-acre tract the Government has donated.

"If I know human nature," he added, "there will be many more, so we are preparing to accomodate as many as come."

Each boy will have paid a blanket $25 expense fee for meals and quarters before arriving, he explained.

Details of feeding the army of boys were discussed with local leaders by West. Sight-seeing schedules, nightly pageants, a Presidential review and huge campfires also were planned.

Communication, hospital, exhibit and postoffice quarters are already constructed almost in the shadow of the Washington Monumen, which will be the center of the jamboree activities.

Routine in the big camp for the ten-day conclave includes revielle, taps and mess thrice daily. Professional cooks will prepare hot meals in section kitchens, and the boys themselves will prepare other food.

Ickes Assistant Terms Abattoir Here 'Mistake'

Special Investigator Says Plant Would Create a Hardship.

The man who is conducting Secretary Ickes' private investigation of plans by Adolf Gobel, Inc., to build a slaughterhouse and rendering plant in northeast Washington was born in Chicago near the stock-yard district and is the son of a former superintendent of Armour & Co.

He is Frederick H. Walton and has designed and built packing plants in Peru, Argentina, Australia, China and other countries, as well as the United States.

He probably will be present when the Senate sub-committee, appointed Tuesday by Chairman King of the District committee, opens public hearings at 2 p. m. tomorrow on King's bill to control "nuisance industries" in the Capital.

Seeking to protect Interior Department and PWA investments, in housing, parkway and recreational developments near the 3700 block of Benning road, proposed site of the abattoir, Ickes assigned Walton, animal expert in the Indian Bureau, to study the situation.

Although he has spent most of his life designing, erecting and operating slaughterhouses, Walton feels that construction of such a plant anywhere within the city limits of the National Capital would be a great mistake, he said yesterday.

Not only would the stench and animal noises work a hardship on people living and working in the vicinity of the abattoir but the rumbling of trucks laden with hogs, sheep and cattle would be a nuisance in sections of the city along the route to the plant, Walton said.

In 1928 Walton won the competition to design the Buenos Aires municipal abattoir, one of the largest in the world. He has built packing, soap, wool washing and rendering plants throughout the world.

TaxBillOffered To Encourage D. C.'s Building

Higher Levy Provided on Vacant Lots, Lower on Improvements.

A realty tax plan designed to encourage building and discourage vacant lots in Washington was offered in the House yesterday.

Representative Bigelow (Democrat), of Ohio, a member of the House District Committee, introduced a bill for a graduated downward tax on improvements and a graduated upward levy on land.

The bill states that land within the District shall be assessed full value, but that for the fiscal years 1938, 1939 and 1940 assessments upon improvements shall be reduced respectively to 75, 50 and 25 per cent of full value.

For 1941 and thereafter, the measure adds, the tax on improvements would be abolished.

"Losses of revenue resulting from reductions of assessments upon improvements," the bill states, "shall be made up by increasing the rate of tax on the value of land."

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, a member of the District tax sub-committee, suggested a similar scheme during hearings on Tuesday.

Board Grants Funds to Buy School Dolls

Mannequins Employed in Home Economic Training.

Children Given Lifelike Problems in Their Education.

Dolls and mannequins, central figures of every child's "let's play house" days, are no longer playthings which girls must give up when they start acquiring an education.

How the learn-by-doing principle of teaching, favored by modern educators, has used these childhood toys to triumph over routine book studies in home economic classes in Washington was told to the Board of Education yesterday.

The story ended with the board adding "lay figures" to the approved list of materials and equipment for girls' vocational schools and senior high schools.

"Lay figures," as described by Robert L. Haycock, first assistant superintendent of schools, are "mannequins used for demonstrating purposes in nursing and child care studies."

They are not ordinary mannequins, and for that reason Superintendent Haycock appeared with complete description of the specifications from Miss Emma Jacobs, the home economics director.

Wanted, according to Miss Jacobs, are two sizes of "lay figures," one representing a 5-year-old child, the other representing a 4-month-old infant.

It is important, the director pointed out, that these dolls be as lifelike as possible.

"There are many reasons why we cannot use a human infant in the classroom, Miss Jacobs said. She called attention to the danger of infection, the danger of excitement due to fear of strangers, and the danger of injury to a child.

Use of dolls, she added, is also desirable, because it removes the "personal element" from the demonstration.

Education Board Member to Visit Moscow in July

Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, of the Board of Education, is going to give up the District school system's "red rider" dictum about ignoring Soviet Russia this summer.

She notified her colleagues on the board yesterday she will be away from meetings after June 12, when she leaves for Moscow.

Mrs. Smith said she plans to accompany her husband, who is chief of the Alaskan branch of the U. S. Geologic Survey, on his trip to attend the International Geologic Conference July 20 in the Soviet capital.

After the conference the Smiths plan several side trips through the Soviet Union, and finally will travel across Siberia. After that they will visit Japan and other points in the Orient.

I'll be back in October with plenty to say about how they do things in the Soviet," she said.

She will do all her talking out of school, of course.

Woman Demands Transit Co. Raise Fares, Cut Wages

The American stockholder was called "forgotten" yesterday at the resumption of the Public Utilities Commission hearing into the value of the Capital Transit Co. Mrs. Violet Elder Orme made the statement, and followed it with the demand that the transit company increase fares and lower its employes' wages. Mrs. Orme is a company stockholder.

She also demanded a decrease in the number of taxicabs operating on Washington streets, and increases in their license fees and passenger fares.

The Public Utilities Commission is nearing the end of the valuation hearing. In a few weeks a rate hearing will be held to judge the transit company's request for higher token fares.

Baptists Assail Gaming, Drink, EndConference

Plan 'Educational' Drive on Alcohol; Change Name of Group.

Taking strong stands against proposals to legalize gambling—particularly race-track betting—cigarette, propaganda, and, "prevailing liquor conditions," District Baptists last night concluded their convention at Metropolitan Baptist Church.

Adopting a report of its committee on resolutions, the delegates renewed a pledge to "conduct in every church and Sunday school of this association an intensive educational campaign setting forth the personal and social evils of beverage alcohol."

Revising their constitution at an afternoon session, the delegates voted to change the name of the District organization to the "District of Columbia Baptist Convention." It previously was known as "The Columbia Association of Baptist Churches."

A change in the time of conducting annual meetings also was adopted. Future conventions will be conducted on the third Tuesday of November, instead of in May.

The object of the convention, the new constitution states, is "to elicit, to combine and to direct energies of the Baptist denomination within and adjacent to the District of Columbia * * * to co-operate as instructed by the convention * * * to cultivate a closer fellowship and to secure a more effective co-operation of the part of churches composing this convention and to promote harmony of feeling and concert of action on the part of all Baptists throughout the Nation."

Missionary society delegates yesterday morning heard an address by the Rev. Francis H. Rose, missionary to the Philippines, and reports by Mrs. E. B. Shaver, recording secretary, and Mrs. J. N. Rissler, financial secretary.

Dr. Joseph A. Cooper, of New York, field representative of the Northern Baptist Convention, and Dr. Walter T. Binns, of Roanoke, Va., member of the executive committee of the Southern Baptist Convention, spoke at the final session last night.

10 Gambling Violators Get Paroles Here

Group, Convicted With Sam Beard, Called 'First Offenders.'

Jobs Wait; No Leniency on Law Indicated, Board Warns.

Warning the public its action should not be construed as leniency toward gambling, the Parole Board yesterday voted to free, subject to the usual parole conditions, ten men convicted with Sam Beard on charges of conspiring to violate the District's gaming laws. Beard is now serving a two to six years sentence in Atlanta Penitentiary.

"These men," the board said, "have no past records, and it is questionable whether the sentences (one to three years) imposed were not somewhat heavy under the circumstances. These men come from good families and all of them have employment available if granted parole. Being first offenders, and having the favorable recommendation of the institution's officials, the board feels it is in the public interest to release them under parole."

The men to be released from Lorton Reformatory are William Carroll, James T. Gallagher, Fred H. Heck, George E. Hutchins, Melville G. Jacobs, Fred J. Messe, Timothy H. Noel, Joseph A. O'Callaghan, John J. Sortori and William G. Smith.

Commenting further, the board said: "This action should not be construed in any sense as leniency toward gambling. The board is fully aware of the seriousness of the gambling situation, but does not look upon these men as confirmed or habitual gamblers, but as first offenders who merely held minor positions for a well-known Washington gambler."

Pointing out also, none of the men had a criminal record, the board said: "They have nothing against them except unlawful temporary employment with a gambler at low salaries in minor positions in a period of depression when jobs were hard to get."

Two other men, sentenced with the paroled ten in May, 1935, were refused their freedom by the board because they had police records. Those men are Lewis L. Levy and Sidney Kaplan.

The men were convicted May 5, 1935, on three charges—setting up a gaming table, providing the place wherein the gaming table was set up, and conspiracy to violate the District's gambling laws.

Ten days later the men were sentenced. Nine months afterward, on February 4, 1936, the Court of Appeals, in a sweeping opinion, upheld the lower court.

On April 10, 1936, Beard, carefully guarded by United States marshals, started for Atlanta, and the 12 others for Lorton Reformatory.

At the time, officials thought, Beard would be "safer" in Atlanta. From Lorton, they feared, he might continue his czar-like power over the District's gambling houses.

On February 28, 1937, the Department of Justice announced President Roosevelt had denied a petition for executive clemency asked by the 12 men who had been remanded to Lorton.

'The Follies' Heads List of New Show Bills

Fannie Brice, Bob Clarke Lead Cast of Noted Revue Coming to National.

Beginning Monday night in the National Theater the attraction will be the Shuberts production of the Ziegfeld "Follies," in which the stellar roles are played by Fannie Brice and Bobby Clarke. A long list of other principals appear in the cast, including Marian Martin, who takes the place of Gypsy Rose Lee, the celebrated "strip-tease artiste." Stan Kavanaugh, the Australian juggler, who was a member of the original cast—and still is—will be among those who will regale the customers with their goings-on.

At the Palace Theater, beinning tomorrow, the chief feature of the bill will be "A Star Is Born," costarring Janet Gaynor and Fredric March in what are said to be the best roles they have had on the screen. In the supporting cast are such luminaries as Adolphe Menjou, May Robson, Andy Devine and Lionel Stander, not to mention Owen Moore, Peggy Wood, Elizabeth Jenns, Edgar Kennedy, J. C. Nugent and Guinn Williams, sometimes known as "big boy."

Next week at the Warner Brothers Earle Theater, beginning tomorrow, the major screen feature will be "Wings of the Morning," of which something will be found in another column. The featured roles are played by that fabulous young European, Annabella, and Henry Fonda. They do splendidly for themselves and the film. On the stage, the entertainment will be supplied by Shep Fields and His Orchestra in a rather hard row to hoe after Horace Heidt and Roger Pryor.

Miriam Hopkins and Joel McCrea will be the pictured stars of the screen bill at Loew's Capitol Theater for the week beginning tomorrow in "Woman Chases Man," a Samuel Goldwyn production for release through United Artists. This is reputedly one of the gayest of the season's light comedies. Miss Hopkins and Mr. McCrea, too, have a decided penchant for this sort of thing that should insure its success. On the stage will be those two durable comics, Mitchell and Durant, who will contribute further to the wonder of the world that they do not crack up under the stress of their "act." Anna May Wong will share headline honors with these two. In fact, she may gobble them all.

Hugh Herbert, that most delightful of celluloid idiots, will be the star of the bill at the Metropolitan Theater for the week beginning tomorrow in "That Man's Here Again." This, needless to say, is a comedy in the farcical manner that will afford its star a full and complete outlet for his humored capabilities. Hav- the usual matinee performances on Wednesday and Saturday.
be completed by the usual auxiliary short-reel subjects.

"Waikiki Wedding," that peculiarly exotic and tuneful vehicle for the barytone talents of Bing Crosby, will be brought back to the Columbia Theater for a continuation of its downtown popularity at the Columbia Theater, beginning tomorrow.

At the Belasco Theater tonight there will be the Washington premiere of "Girls Club," the French picture that Sam Cummins is bringing to the Capital for the first time. There is no need of reciting the names of the members of the cast because they would mean nothing, anyhow.

"Peter Ibbetson," the screen transcription of George Du Maurier's love story, with Gary Cooper and Ann Harding in the principal roles, will be revived at the Little Theater for the week beginning Sunday. Dickie Moore, Virginia Weidler, John Halliday, Doris Lloyd, Douglas Dumbrille and Donald Meek are among the supporting players.

Another double bill is announced for the Rialto Theater next week, beginning Sunday. Shirley Temple, Gary Cooper and Carole Lombard are the foremost members of the cast of the first item of interest, "Now and Forever," with George Raft, the star of "Every Night at Eight," the secondary feature.

At the Trans-Lux Theater, beginning tomorrow, the new bill will embrace a Mickey Mouse comedy, a novelty film in natural color, "It's a Living;" a Bill Corum sport specialty, "Saratoga Summers," and a travelogue, "Rambling Through Vienna." There will, as usual, be 40 minutes of newsreels in addition to these minor subjects.

Announcement was made yesterday by Harry L. Baker, manager of the Wilson Line of steamers in Washington, that the S. S. City of Washington will arrive at her dock next week, preparatory to taking up the routine duties of her eighth year of service on the Potomac River. The first cruise will be held on the evening of May 13.

Request numbers are becoming the vogue in the Spanish Garden Ballroom at Glen Echo Park, where David McWilliams and his orchestra play for dancing every week night. All you have to do is send in your request and then hope that it will be played—and it probably will be.

At the Gayety Theater next week, beginning with the customary matinee performance on Sunday, the attraction will be a new Independent Burlesque Association production, with Ann Corio, the "queen" of burlesque, as the featured artiste. She will be assisted by Nona ("Red Head") Martin and Maxie Furman, chief comedian.

Nelson B. Bell About The Show Shops

In "Wings of the Morning," the Warners Have Hit That Has Color as a Help to Greatest Realism

A New Natural Color Technicolor Subject Clicks Rather Well Among Its Kind as Example of Screen Realism; Animals Play an Important Part in the Current Week's Bill of Cinema Diversion—There Are Dogs in Both "Shall We Dance" and "Wings of the Morning" That Will Bear Watching; News Notes of Current Theater.

IN "Wings of the Morning," Twentieth Century-Fox seems to have another potential bid for boxoffice patronage.

The picture is executed entirely in the new three-tone technicolor process and while it does not mark the highest flight of this engaging medium, it still represents a far advance in the direction of realism on the silver sheet.

BELL.

I would not be too sure that the story is one that will enlist the sagacious interest of all classes of theatergoers, but it still possesses a sufficient number of nimble twists to make its popularity with the mass public reasonably secure.

The fable has to do with the matter of British aristocracy and the roaming Gypsy tribes that come into a permanent grant on the grounds of the young fellow who falls in love with the ostensible crown-queen of the tribe. She owns a race horse that seems to embody something of a threat against the winning of the "darby" by the blooded gentlemen of the countryside.

After that, something like four generations are encompassed in the telling of the tale, which ends with a running of the derby at Epsom Downs, with all the spectacle of that event recorded in natural colors and lent an appeal that it never has had before in plain black and white.

How the romantic ramifications of the plot finally work out will be divulged in the formal review of this subject to appear in this space on Saturday morning. In the meantime, it may not be too much to disclose that some of the outdoor "shots" in this picture are entrancingly beautiful—just as some were in "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," which, also was done entirely in Technicolor.

Furthermore, there comes back to the screen in this subject the presence and the unimpaired voice of John McCormack, the Irish tenor. This is made entirely logical by the fact that much of the action of the drama is laid in Ireland, where the principal concern, next to the gypsy camp, seems to be candidates for the derby.

I can think of nothing more beautiful to the eye or more lovely to the ear than the placid scenes of the Lakes of Killarney and McCormack singing "Killarney" and other Celtic ballads in this film.

The foremost roles are played with an ability, that will be set forth here later, by Annabella, the young European star who already has been seen on the screen at the Belasco, Henry Fonda and a long cast of celebrities whose names mean less on this side than they do on the screens of the British Isles and the Continent.

Not the least of the dramatis personae of "Wings of the Morning" is Steve Donoghue, the famous English jockey, who is about to this film what Tod Sloan would have been to a similar American production three decades or so ago. He rides the horse to victory, as goes without saying.

There also is a shaggy little dog that rambles through the action with fine effect. I do not at the moment recall his film name, but he is an actor of the first rank. So there is something here for the animal lovers as well as for those who love the lighter things of the drama.

* * * *

And speaking of animals, there also is a small pooch in "Shall We Dance," the new Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers comedy at RKO-Keith's, that commands some attention. This young fellow—and I do not know his name, either—races up and down the deck of an ocean leviathan until he gets heartily tired of the whole business and then sits down calmly on deck and watches Miss Rogers and Mr. Astaire go by. This little chap is a real actor and evidently has been trained to the last word by some one who never appears on the screen, but whose orders evidently are authoritative.

* * * *

Following yesterday afternoon's screening of "Wings of the Morning," the Warner Brothers executives, headed by John J. Payette, zone manager, and Frank LaFalce, in charge of advertising and publicity, distributed the prizes to the members of the critical fraternity who had participated in their merry little guessing game, as exemplified by a lot of questionnaires that some of us never answered.

The prizes were out of all proportion to the amount of effort that had been expended by the drama desks, but still they were welcome—and how!

As the whole thing works out, it seems that all of the questionnaires were aimed at "Wings of the Morning" and that Annabella was the outstanding beneficiary of all the ballyhoo. I guessed none of them correctly, having no brain for this sort of puzzle.

"Well," comes an offstage voice, "why don't you say merely that you have no brain?"

That might be it.

* * * *

It is interesting to note that tonight's opening bill at the new Warner Brothers' Calvert Theater, at 2324 Wisconsin avenue, will reveal the complete routine, so to speak, of the forthcoming coronation. In "the Prince and The Pauper."

* * * *

Rewinding-the-Haywire Note.

That last line, yesterday, was just a bit misleading. It gave the impression that the Linton Wells party was a "bust." what it meant to say was that "yesterday was a very lovely day except that after the Linton Wells party one had to come back to work." I'm sorry.

The Chase Seems to Be Reversed

Back to back, there seems to be very little chasing going on here, yet these are supposed to be the principals in "Woman Chases Man." The woman pictured above is Miriam Hopkins and the man is Joel McCrea, two of the cinema's most popular players. The film will open on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater, beginning Friday, which is by way of being tomorrow. A Hollywood "permeer" is said to be in the offing. We shall see what we shall see.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, May 5.—Settin' around (RKO): I thought 1936 was a banner year for new screen discoveries, but it seems the search has just begun. The present year will be marked by intense studio campaigns to find new faces. By 1940, so believes Lela Rogers (Ginger's mother), 30 per cent of today's stars will have been replaced by new people. Mrs. Rogers knows whereof she speaks, for she is director of RKO's training school for new talent.

ANN SOTHERN.

"Would-be actors shouldn't come to Hollywood," Lela warned me to warn you. "Every studio is enlarging its staff of talent scouts, and today they're combing school auditoriums and little theaters everywhere. Men and women with ambition to become actors should work in home town theatricals."

On the "There Goes My Girl" set, Ann Sothern was pacing back and forth like Felix the Cat. She wore a long taffeta evening gown, beneath which was a multitude of silk petticoats, and I noticed she continually cocked her head first to one side, then to the other, as she paced. Curiosity got the better of me, and "What on earth are you doing?" I demanded. "Listening to myself swish!" she retorted.

I ran into a convention of comedians on the "New Faces" set. Milton Berle, Joe Penner and Parkyakarkus, all comparatively new to the noisy drama. And all gunning for Jack Oakie. Joe told me about it. Seems that Jack visited the set and pulled a typical Oakie gag. First, he took Berle aside.

"Listen, stupid," he said, "Those other guys are stealing scenes from you. Protect yourself. Look, here's an idea—jiggle up and down on the balls of your feet every time you're in a scene with them. That'll focus attention on you, see?"

He left Berle practicing, and cornered Parky, with a similar warning, "... jiggle up and down on the balls of your feet every time you're in a scene with the others."

"And then," Penner concluded, "He took me to one side and gave me exactly the same advice. Told me to jiggle on the balls of my feet every time I worked with those other dopes. You should have seen us the next scene we played together. All jiggling up and down, we looked like a trio of male Gilda Grays."

Between scenes on the "All Is Confusion" set, Joe E. Brown told me about the time he almost became a producer. The head of an independent studio made Joe an offer, and assured him that there were 18 stories in the scenario department from which he might have his choice. But only three manuscripts were offered for inspection.

"I asked to see the other 15," explained Brown, "and received this answer. 'They're only titles, but if you like any of them we can have a story written to fit the title on short notice.' "And," finished Joe, "I decided that acting is safer than producing—under such conditions."

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, May 5.

DURING THE MAY DAY gathering at Union Square Saturday, Capt. Dugan, head of the Radical Squad, ordered the police photographers to take pictures of Browder, Foster and other Leftists prominent in the crowd. Two hundred such photographs were taken, and now repose in the departmental files. In retaliation, Capt. Dugan might be surprised to learn, the Daily Worker's cameraman took photographs also—of Capt. Dugan! . . . Noel Coward almost missed his boat to Europe when he couldn't find his ticket. His valet had packed it in the bottom of the trunk . . . The playful Charlie MacArthur made Ted Husing a victim of a practical joke last week. Husing took a treatment from MacArthur's hair-growing machine, and when the treatment was over Ted had a hair wave instead!

STANLEY WALKER, who resigned as city editor of the Herald Tribune to associate himself with the Mirror, American, New Yorker and New York Woman, successively, will return to the Herald Tribune shortly as assistant managing editor . . . Paul D. Cravath is leasing a home in Peking, China, for the fall season, and will hold open house for all his friends. Cravath, who is 75, will go to Asia next year . . . Herman Shumlin, the producer, is organizing a unit to combat the ban on burlesque. Shumlin insists that this ban, if continued, will be the beginning of censorship in the theater.

SYLVIA SIDNEY went to Elizabeth Arden's, in Hollywood, for a beauty treatment last week. After the customary beautifying session there, the prettiest Miss Sylvia walked out of the place, tripped—and fell on her face . . . As a result, eight stitches were taken in her forehead!

* * * *

THAT STRIP-TEASE PHOTO of the Elsa Maxwell party, in the current issue of Life, is unexplained by the editors. Elsa is shown glaring at Della Carroll, who has started to disrobe. And Miss Maxwell's mouth is open, because the cameraman snapped her just as she was ordering the electrician to douse the lights. Beatrice Lillie appears angry, and was caught stamping her foot. Miss Lillie really was angry—at Elsa— and was trying to countermand her orders to the electrician . . . Fascinating reading: Eugene Lyons' "We Cover the World" . . . Kenneth Roberts, the novelist, wrote Kenneth Roberts, the radio announcer—whom he has never met: "I hope you do nothing to disgrace our mutual name."

* * * *

HARRIET CAPERTON, who has been signed for Ross-Fenton Farms, is a blueblood offspring of the Randolphs of Virginia. Miss Caperton does a ballroom dance-routine with Charles Columbus as her partner . . . She was invited to lead the Junior Cotillion of the Junior League at Newport—at which the celebrants were her former society playmates . . . When the Cotillion was over, Miss Caperton called the director aside and informed that she would waive her usual dance fee. "All you have to pay me," she offered, "are my expenses" . . . The director drew away in horror and shrieked: "My Gawd—you're a professional."

* * * *

A GROUP OF YOUNGSTERS who were scheduled to partake in the May Day parade at 1:30 p. m. were kept waiting at their station for almost seven hours because of unavoidable circumstances . . . When they finally arrived at Union Square the children, each bearing a sign upon which a single letter appeared, marched in a formation which made the combined letters read "UGOMITLAG" . . . Bystanders were puzzled at this strange word, and thought it was a code. Here's what happened: Some of the youngsters became too tired to parade and went home . . . The full combined letters would read "YOUNG COMMUNISTS LEAGUE!"

* * * *

THE MUSIC SCHOOL SETTLEMENT, which provides free scholarships to music-loving youngsters unable to afford tuition, will give its annual concert at Town Hall tomorrow . . . A list of the jury panel in the Ellis Parker trials was delivered to Gov. Hoffman's secretary . . . A diner at Dave's, who had just arrived from Johannesburg, South Africa, asked Edward G. Robinson for an autograph. "I hope they like me down there," Robinson stated . . . "They do," the fan replied. "In fact, before I sailed, I saw a double feature—your latest movie, and Dostoyevsky's 'Crime & Punishment' " . . . "Well," Robinson sighed, "if they like Dostoyevsky—I don't think they'll like Edward G. Robinson!"

* X WASHINGTON: THURSDAY, MAY 6, 1937 21

This Morning

WITH SHIRLEY POVICH

Cleveland.

Pardon my exuberance, but nobody but a dyspeptic sour puss could fail to get a terrific thump out of those proceedings at the Cleveland Park Tuesday, where the Nats put a seven-run crusher on the Indians in the eleventh inning to win the ball game.

POVICH.

That, my friends, was a ball game, if viewed from the Washington standpoint. The Nats may finish in the cellar, they may skid right through the bottom of the league before the season is over, or they might never win another game all season—but were a gallant outfit Tuesday afternoon.

What I mean to say is that you can count on the fingers of an armless circus freak the number of times that any team has been able to overpower Mel Harder when that right-handed gentleman of the Indians' pitching staff has a four-run lead—but that's what the Nats did Tuesday afternoon.

* * * *

They were strictly up against it and with Harder out there pitching runless ball the gambling gentry were offering 10 to 1 on the Indians as early as the third inning, and only a cluck would have bet on Washington at those odds.

* * * *

And then the Nats started to break loose with a barrage of 20 hits, the biggest total the American League has seen in a single game this season. With the bit in their teeth, those Nats pounded Harder and three other pitchers out of the box Tuesday afternoon.

* * * *

They found a pitcher of their own, too—Jimmy DeShong—who could go in there when the game appeared lost and throttle the Cleveland attack that had piled up five runs in the first three innings. This was the same DeShong who hadn't been able to go more than three innings in a pair of starts this season. DeShong, pitching eight scoreless innings in a row, was a veritable Horatius at the Bridge as he checked the Indians while colleagues wiped out the Indians' lead.

* * * *

And there was Al Simmons out there striving to get into the swing of things again after being benched for poor hitting, and bashing in the tying run in the seventh with one of the old-time Simmons' doubles against the distant centerfield wall. Verily, the guys on the spot—DeShong and Simmons—came through nobly.

* * * *

And it was rather nice, too, to see Little Johnny Mihalic out there at second base in a big league uniform with his maw and paw and all the other Mihalics pulling hard for him. Johnny was in his home town today—a bona fide big leaguer, playing alongside Joe Kuhel, another former Cleveland sandlotter, alongside Kuhel whose name had always commanded something of a reverence in the households of Cleveland kids.

He made good for the home folks today, too, Johnny Mihalic did. He stepped up to the plate against Harder, the same Mel Harder whom Cleveland kids of Johnnie's age, and Johnny, too, used to besiege for autographs, and Johnny banged a solid single into right field. And he whacked out two other clean hits before the day was over and he made no less than three sensational plays on ground balls and he was having a great day here in his home town.

And if I never record another swell catch by an outfielder, I don't care—I've seen the best. I saw it in the ninth inning this afternoon when Ben Chapman saved the game for the Nats with his thievery at the expense of Roy Weatherly whose drive would have gone for a home run if Chapman hadn't actually outspeeded the ball on its course and hauled it down, with one hand. Honest, he was moving faster than the ball.

Personally, there's still a throbbing in the region of my ticker after eye-witnessing those eleventh-inning proceedings that won the ball game for the Nats. I mean when Ben Chapman stole home on the head-end of a triple steal with the bases full, two out and the score tied. That was something.

That Chapman is a slicker all right. He faked his gallop at least a half dozen times before he cut loose and Mr. Whitlow Wyatt, out there pitching, was transfixed when Chapman didn't turn back that last time but continued madly right down the base lines toward the plate on the most thrilling play that baseball can offer—a steal of home. He was across the plate when the 5,000 fans in the park, including Mr. Wyatt, were asking themselves what had happened.

And then those five solid hits that followed to drive in six more runs for the inning—five straight hits by a ball club that in its first nine games of the season hadn't been able to hit the ground with a shovel. That was something, too, I want to tell you.

In fact, I could go on and on.

Evans Washington, Armstrong pitcher, hurled a two-hit game, which was backed up by heavy hitting by practically all his teammates.

Red Ruffing Signs Today For $15,000

Hurler and Yanks' Pilot Agree to Terms After 2 Conferences.

By the United Press.

Detroit, May 5.—Charles (Red) Ruffing, holdout pitcher of the New York Yankees, has agreed to a $15,000 contract for the current year and will sign his contract tomorrow, Manager Joe McCarthy announced tonight.

The lone holdout of the American League team agreed on terms with McCarthy after he had come here from Chicago to "talk things over." Manager and pitcher met this morning for half an hour but nothing definite was settled then.

Ruffing had demanded $15,000 for his services on the mound in addition to a bonus. His pitching was a major factor in the Yankees' triumph over the National League Giants in the 1936 World Series.

It was reported that Col. Jacob Ruppert, owner of the Yankees, recently had offered Ruffing $12,000 and that this reduced offer had been a factor in bringing the pitcher from Chicago to Detroit, where the Yankees opened a three-day series with the Detroit Tigers yesterday.

"Ruffing will sign tomorrow," McCarthy announced laconically. Both had attended today's game at Navin Field. At the end of their morning meeting, both said that no contract had been signed. Then McCarthy awaited word from Ruppert at New York on terms, which were okayed late today.

From Ruffing's salary will be deducted 15 days' pay for the time he has missed this season, McCarthy said. The Yankee's pitcher also must apply immediately for reinstatement to baseball's high commissioner, Kenesaw Mountain Landis.

"Marse Joe" was all smiles as he commented about Ruffing's return to the fold.

"If Red's as good this year as he was last season, we'll all welcome him with open arms," he said.

"I think a lot of him as a pitcher. We're going to need him out there."

McCarthy intimated there were a few minor details to be ironed out before the contract signing. He declined to discuss the contract aside from the fact that Ruffing was being signed for $15,000, the original offer made by the Yankee management.

3 Y Swimmers Vie In National Meet

Three members of the local Young Men's Christian Association will represent it in the fifteenth international Y. M. C. A. swim championships to be held in Chicago tomorrow and Saturday.

The meet is being held in the Lake Shore Athletic Club, the scene of the National A. A. U. championships. Preliminaries will be held tomorrow and Saturday afternoons and the finals will take place tomorrow and Saturday nights.

BASEBALL'S BIG SIX!

By the Associated Press.

Joe Cronin, Boston Red Sox manager, returned to sole possession of third place in the American League batting race yesterday without lifting a bat. He retained a .421 average because of the rain which washed out the Red Sox game, while Dixie Walker, of the White Sox, tied for third the day before, fell six points by getting only one hit in three chances. All other places in baseball's "Big Six" in league batting remained unchanged, although all three leaders in the National League lost ground. Gil Brack, the league leader, slipped 15 points to .429 by getting only one hit in four chances.

Standings of the leaders (first three in each league):

Chicago Gets Easy Victory Over Phillies

Demaree Gets Homer With Bases Full to Help in Rout.

Philadelphia, May 5 (AP).—The Chicago Cubs pounded out an easy 17-to-4 victory over the Phillies today. Frank Demaree hit a homer with the bases full in the sixth. Joe Marty, Rip Collins and Johnny Moore also hit homers. Manager Grimm and Billy Herman, of the Cubs, and Coach Hans Lobert, of the Phillies, were banished for protesting decisions.

Dean Undergoes Operation on Arm

St. Louis, May 5 (AP).—Dr. Robert F. Hyland operated today on Paul Dean's right arm in an effort to enable the St. Louis Cardinal pitcher to hurl effectively again.

The physician would make no estimate of the time required for recovery nor would he say whether the operation would restore the younger member of the pitching Dean brothers to his former ability.

Mrs. Nell Leads Keefer Cup Golf Play With 79

Pairing nines of 49 and 45, and aided by a 15 handicap, Mrs. J. E. Nell, of Manor, paced the first round of the Mrs. Frank Royer Keefer Cup play yesterday at Chevy Chase with a net 79, a stroke ahead of Mrs. Walter Stokes, of Indian Spring, with 88-8—80.

Mrs. Stokes' 88 led the gross award, followed by Miss Ellen Kincaid, of Congressional, and Mrs. Charlotte Stern, of Army-Navy, with 89s. Mrs. Betty Meckley, of Indian Spring, and Miss Ellen Kincaid, of Congressional, shot 90 each for third place in the low gross, a pair of 7s dotting their cards.

A triple tie for the third place in the net awards existed between Miss Kincaid, Mrs. Charlotte Stearn and Mrs. Y. E. Booker, of Chevy Chase, with net 82s. Mrs. Gene Larkin, Mrs. F. D. Letts and Mrs. L. O. Cameron, of the host club, remained in the running for the Keefer Cup with net 83s.

With the field reduced to 80 players, another 18-hole round will be run off today to decide the winner. Mrs. W. S. D. Masten, of Washington, defending champion, was apparently out of the running with 101-11—90.

Macks' 6 Runs in 8th Down Sox; Reds Drub Giants, 8-5

Selkirk Drives in 4 of Team's Runs, Paces Club's Attack.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, May 5.—Twinkletoes George Selkirk took over the job as heavy artillery of the New York Yankees' Murderers Row today and almost single-handedly accounted for a 7-to-3 victory over the Tigers.

Although Monte Pearson pitched eight-hit ball and fanned eight, and Bill Dickey, Tony Lazzeri and Red Rolfe all produced some timely hits, the Yankee outfielder was the "works" as the world champions took over sole possession of the American League lead.

He whacked two homers out of the lot, contributed a double and single as well, drove in four of the seven runs and scored three himself in the 12-hit attack New York turned loose on Vic Sorrell and Elden Auker, for the second straight win over the Detroits.

The win was Pearson's second straight for the year. Although he was in trouble time and again, he usually pulled out of it by working third strike across on the batter.

Gerry Walker, the Tigers' right-field star, continued his streak, collecting a double and a single to stretch his hitting run to 11 games in a row.

In each of the first four innings, the Yanks got to Sorrell for two hits and one run. The fourth inning score was produced by Selkirk's first homer.

In the sixth, Dickey's two-bagger and Selkirk's double added another run. Two innings later, Dickey's single was followed by Selkirk's second homer, a long clout into the upper seats in right field.

Reds Belt Giants, 8-5; End 5-Game Slump

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 5.—The Cincinnati Reds belted fat Freddy Fitzsimmons and the Giants with four home runs today and downed the National League champions 8 to 5 to end their five-game losing streak.

Alex Kampouris hit two of the round-trippers and Charley Gelbert and Ival Goodman contributed one apiece in the attack which finally drove Fitzsimmons off the mound in the seventh inning.

Peaches Davis, who started the game for the Reds, was removed in the fifth, and was followed by Gene Schott and Al Hollingsworth.

Men who want better cigars—Light and Mild—are stepping up to EL PRODUCTO

for real enjoyment

El Producto is a better cigar. Light and mild in character; rich and rare in taste. That's the result of an uncopyable blend of Havana and other equally costly tobaccos. Which is to say . . . Havana has been modernized to modern tastes . . . and modern habits . . . balanced with other fine tobaccos to produce a brand you can smoke all day long; and enjoy the last cigar as much as the first.

There's a size for every taste . . . from slim panetela to full bodied perfecto and prices range from 10c to 25c.

Weston Scores 5th Victory of Year in Winning Handicap at Pimlico

$37.40 Paid By Way Out In 1st Win

Alahad, Cadeau 2d, Sun Way, Royal Rank Are Also Winners.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico Race Track, Baltimore, May 5.—A. C. Compton's Weston won his fifth race of the year in the grade "A" handicap which proved the high spot of today's Maryland Jockey Club program. The 5-year-old sprint star bounded to the finish a length and a half in advance of A. G. Vanderbilt's Airflame which, in turn, downed Mrs. Emil Denemark's Higher Cloud by a length margin.

Weston was in charge of Jockey Harry Richards and the boy who will ride Pompoon in the derby made no mistakes. He steadied the son of Nocturnal or Sun Flag along until ready for a drive at the front runner and then shook him into a dash that Airflame, one that was away flying, could not resist. Higher Cloud came into third money by occupying that position throughout the running.

Airflame was installed a slight favorite over Weston which paid a $7.40 mutuel. The winner covered the 6 furlongs in 1:12. A crowd of 10,000 participated in the day's sport.

J. B. Belk, of Charlottesville, Va., watched his Way Out, a daughter of Sir Walter, race her way out of the maiden class in the first race. Ridden by Johnny Bejshak, Way Out was in front from the break to a photo finish with H. Neuster's Micro. Third money in the field of 11 went to Mrs. Emil Denemark's Bertillon. Way Out paid a $37.40 mutuel while running the 4 furlongs in :49 2-5.

Steeplechasers, imported from Europe last winter by a syndicate of American sportsmen, received their baptism in competition on this side of the Atlantic in the day's 2-mile brush test. Despite the fact that the field had no United States form, the public installed the right favorite in Cadeau II, a Nouvel Ancrederes Victos gelding, which led most of the way and won while in hand. Cadeau II, owned by Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark, led the Raritan Stable's Lord Jenkis to the finish by eight lengths with Walter Wickes' Valpuiseaux third and 2½ lengths farther back. Razy, the property of Mrs. Grace H. Eustis, was the only horse to be in front of the winner and was eliminated when he lost his rider at the sixth obstacle.

Cadeau II bobbled when landing at the seventh fence, but otherwise jumped well. He paid a $7.40 mutuel, and the time of 3.56 was fair for the 13-jump course.

The race was the first of a series for the group of imported horses.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WAY OUT, $37.40, $11.60, $6.60; MICRO, $6.40, 14.30; BERTILLON, $4.10.
WAY OUT, quick to begin, was hard ridden throughout and was tiring at the end. MICRO broke tardily, was rushed up to the leader approaching the stretch and gained gradually to be wearing down the winner at the end. BERTILLON saved much ground entering the stretch and closed stoutly. FRANK BROOKE, in trouble at the break and blocked until reaching the stretch, came with a belated rush. MOBCAP was in tight quarters midway of the stretch. LITTLE SALLY had early speed. LOW CUTS was away slowly and could not enter contention. PRIMWICK went well for two furlongs.

SECOND RACE—Two miles; steeplechase. Purse, $3,000. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place easily. Went to post at 2:30. Off at 2:50½. Winner, Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CADEAU II, $7.40, $6.20, $3.30; LORD JENKIS, $9.90, $5.90; VALPUISEAUX, $4.90.
CADEAU II, fencing well with the exception of the seventh jump, took command when RAZY fell at the sixth fence, shook off challenge of LORD JENKIS and drew out to win handily. LORD JENKIS went to the leaders with a rush after a mile and tired gradually. VALPUISEAUX saved ground to enter contention in the final mile. BARRICADE II had speed in spots and jumped well. GUIDON II dropped back after a mile. MOTHEL and KAIROUAN could not keep up. RAZY was setting a good pace when he lost rider. CASONOVA ran out going to the third fence. ANTHONIA II refused at the break.

THIRD RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:22. Winner, J. P. Jones' b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ALAHAD, $11.60, $5.30, $4.50; TOOTHPICK, $4.20, $3.60; MELICENT, $14.20.
ALAHAD outran her field to assume command, saved ground and was tiring at the finish. TOOTHPICK forwardly placed from the start, could not gain through the stretch. MELICENT improved position with a rush leaving the backstretch and was kept to punishment. MAY MUSIC tired after being closest to the pace for a half. SHEBANG raced wide. YARDSTICK failed to rally when placed third drive.

(DAILY DOUBLE, WAY OUT AND ALAHAD, PAID $141.20.)

FOURTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good for all but Mettle. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:50. Off at 3:50½. Winner, Miss Amil Booker's b. g. (6), by Sun God II—Dancesway. Trained by J. R. Booker. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUN WAY, $8.40, $5.70, $4.40; PATIENT SAINT, $8.50, $5.90; GRAINGER, $4.00.
SUN WAY, nicely handled, was rated along in close attendance of the pacemakers, rallied when shaken up approaching the stretch and drew out at the end. PATIENT SAINT, close up for a half, disposed of GRAINGER to take command and closed stoutly under punishment, but could not realst the winner. GRAINGER tired gradually after setting the pace for a half.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. Pimlico Graded Handicap "C." For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 4:20. Off at 4:23. Bean, Rippy Tie for Woodmont Medal as Their 73's Are Unchallenged

A. Darling's 75 Is Low For 2d Day

First Day's Scores Stand, Dettweiler Shoots 73, Withdraws.

By Merrell Whittlesey.

A pair of first-day 73's by Bean and Rippy withstood the challenge of 65 golfers yesterday for medal honors in Woodmont's twelfth invitation tournament. A. B. "Babe" Darling's 75 leading the second day qualifiers.

Billy Dettweiler, Georgetown University student, turned in a medal-tying 73 but withdrew. Dettweiler needed a par 4 on the last hole for his 73, and after pushing his second shot to the right, chipped his approach within 4 feet of the pin and holed the putt. A previously scheduled collegiate match forced the Hoya star to withdraw.

A playoff among the five 78 shooters for 3 places in the first flight featured the day's play, John Brawner, George Miller and Max Taylor winning from Luther Steward and Volney Burnett. Miller and Taylor were forced four holes after Brawner clinched a place on the second.

Louis Fuchs, Indian Spring, turned the first nine in 35, the only par round of the two days' qualifying, parred the tenth hole, but took 8 on the eleventh and picked up on the fourteenth after knocking two balls out of bounds. Fuchs was the victim of a bad break on the eleventh, when his ball came to rest against a bank in a virtually unplayable lie.

Earl McAleer, Burke Edwards, R. V. Johnson, John Brawner, George Miller, Ralph Quinter, Volney Burnett, Luther Steward and Darling were the 80 breakers yesterday, in addition to Dettweiler.

John Shorey, winner of the event 12 years ago when he was titled the "boy wonder" and also winner in 1929 and runner-up in 1930, was out of the championship flight with an 81. He was out in 38 but returned in 41 that included several bad holes.

The playoff, followed by a large gallery, was between five of the top notch golfers of the city. Burnett's second shot hit a tree on the par 4 first hole and after approaching a few feet from the pin his putt hit every side of the cup but stayed on the lip. The rest got par 4s.

Brawner played a fine second shot on the next hole, on the edge of the green and putted up safely for a par 4 and a place, while Miller, Taylor and Steward required bogie 5s.

The fourth hole was decisive after the drive. Luther Steward hit a poor second shot and Miller sliced a long iron nearly in the ditch. Taylor, with the longest drive, hit a soaring six iron shot, barely a foot from the pin and easily made the putt for a spectacular birdie.

Newsom Gets Credit For Upswing of Nats

Wins in 3 of Last 4 Games With Late Rallies Has Transformed Team Into Gay, Ambitious Crew; Myer Trade Is Rumored.

By Shirley Povich,
A Staff Correspondent.

Cleveland, Ohio, May 5.—Tomorrow may bring new grief, but today Washington's baseball athletes are unrecognizable as that gang of grumpy guys who last week were as sociable as the Hatfields and McCoys.

That was when the American League standings showed Washington a ragged last with six lickings in seven starts. No Washington team in Manager Bucky Harris' memory had ever gotten off to such a sour start, and Harris himself was no model of good nature for his athletes. They were sore.

But now, ah, spring is in the air, fish leap in the streams and life, verily, is at its best. Those three victories in their last four engagements have effected a magical transformation in the Nats' outlook on mundane matters. They smile, they're gay and all, seemingly, is well with the world.

It has been a tonic—not the mere fact that they've won three of their last four ball games, but, rather, the manner in which they won 'em. They are still down near the nether regions of the league but they have the feeling that they are on the upgrade. Bucky Harris was saying that this afternoon as the Nats idled in their hotel after the scheduled game with the Indians was rained out.

"Whew. It's a relief to get squared away in this pennant race, at last," said Harris. "It was no fun dropping all those early games, but things look to be on the improve, all right.

"I'm giving Buck Newsom the credit for pulling us out of that awful slump. When he threw that five-hit game in there against the Yankees, it was the turning point. We were pretty low before that. Something like that had to happen. I knew, before we would start to click. Buck came through for the whole team.

"We weren't hitting at all, but I knew we had too much power to be such set-ups. When we finally broke loose in Philadelphia with those five runs in the ninth inning last Sunday we were just overdue, that's all.

"I always felt the club would hit, but I was getting jittery waiting for 'em to start. That big inning in Philadelphia squared us away, to my way of thinking. And then we came to Cleveland and beat Mel Harder when he's got a 4-0 lead.

How many hits did we get yesterday—20? Well that's awful nice."

It is paradoxical that the Nats have enjoyed their gre..test hitting success of the season with their leading hitter, Cecil Travis, out of the lineup. But Travis' absence has been offset by the batting surge of three fellows who have apparently snapped out of hitting slumps—Joe Kuhel, Johnny Stone and Buddy Lewis.

Those three southpaw hitters carry a huge share of the batting load for the Nats and with the exception of one game, all three have been hitting the ball vigorously since the Nats took to the road. Kuhel and Stone had been hitting in hard luck, but young Lewis, who had not been meeting the ball well, has staged a sensational comeback.

Monte Weaver, who first showed signs of his comeback as a pitcher in a relief shift here last summer, will go to the mound tomorrow in the final game against the Indians. The Nationals will be opposed by the left-handed Lloyd Brown who formerly was a Washington employe.

Manager Harris is eyeing one of Cleveland's pitchers with the hope of making a deal before the trading deadline falls on June 15. With young Johnny Mihalic proving himself an able fellow around second base, the long-shot possibility is that the Nats would not be averse to trading Buddy Myer to the Indians who are short on infield talent.

Matchmakers Placed Under Stricter Rules

District Ring Heads Adopt New Restrictions After Probe of Boxing.

The District Commissioners yesterday approved without amendment all changes in the rules and regulations governing boxing in Washington recommended by the Boxing Commission at a recent special session.

The rule changes were recommended following a sweeping investigation into the sport here by a special investigator employed by the Boxing Commission. Much of the brunt of the investigation was born by Washington's only active matchmaker, Goldie Ahearn, at whom charges of accepting "cutbacks" were fired, but who was completely absolved of any irregular practices after the thorough probe.

Certain of the changes, however, affect the status of matchmakers. A new proviso calls for all matchmakers to be bona fide residents of the District for at least one year before they can be licensed. Another new rule states specifically that no part of the amount due a contestant shall be paid by him to anyone but his own manager, no boxer shall have more than one manager and that contestants shall not "cut back" to any matchmaker, promoter or other official nor shall anyone accept a "cut back" if the same is offered by a contestant.

Other rule changes have to do with posting forfeits, reporting of contestants for examination, scoring of bouts, foul-blows and making of weight in championship contests.

700 Horses To Compete In D.C. Show

Almost Every Type of Show Horse Will Vie Here Tomorrow.

Practically every type of show horse will be seen at the Washington Horse Show, which opens tomorrow at the Meadowbrook Show Grounds on the East-West highway in Rock Creek Park.

The record-breaking entry list of more than 700 includes hunters, jumpers and there and five gaited saddle horses, among others, for the three-day show.

Chatter Chat, champion hunter of the National Horse Show, will face keen competition from such entries as the famous Whitney hunters and May Top Stables, of Greenwich, Conn. Others seeking to outshine the champion of Mrs. Ellsworth H. Augustus will be horses entered by the Greenhalghs, Guggenheims, Randles, Lees and others.

In the saddle horse division some of the finest 3 and 5 gaited horses in the country will compete in the championship class, scheduled for Sunday afternoon. Clark Herring, of Shaker Heights, Ohio, has entered his famous 5-gaited Promenade. Other exhibitors in this division include Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Rees, Hanover, Pa.; Charles W. Cook, Mill Stream Farm Stables, Spring Lake, N. J.; Maurice Weinberger, Trystall Stable, Nashville, Tenn.; Margaret Ann Warden, Cleveland; Patsy Ann Wallace, Cleveland, and Mary I. Franck, Bethesda, Md. From Washington, Patricia Kuykendall has entered Silver King, 5-gaited saddle horse, and Black Beauty, a 3-gaited mount, and Mr. and Mrs. Vernon G. Owen their 3-gaited Jack Lightnir.g.

The Whitney, Fort Myer, U. S. Randle, Greenhalgh, Guggenheim and Augustus Hunt teams will compete for the Gwinn Wheelwright Rust Memorial Trophy, won by Mrs. Whitney in 1934 and 1935 and by Mrs. Robert Guggenheim last year. This challenge trophy must be won three times to be retained and Mrs. Whitney needs a blue to carry the trophy back to Llangollen.

Navy Thumps West Virginia

Annapolis, Md., May 5.—The Navy's lucky seventh really amounted to something this afternoon, with seven runs scoring, to beat West Virginia, 14 to 3.

Eliot, Navy's diminutive pitcher, pitched a steady game and was ably supported by another little fellow, Gibson, behind the bat.

Singles by Thompson, Matheson, Cooke and Eliot were mixed with two passes, two stolen bases, a wild pitch, two errors and some general mishandling of the ball to give the Navy its seven tallies in the seventh.

The Navy had really won the game in the fifth inning, when, with the score favoring them by 3 to 2, Ingram hit for the circuit, scoring Eliot and Thompson.

West Virginia started off with two runs, scored on Symansic's single, Scalli's double and Pace's error, but its only other run came in the seventh.

Barber Is Foe Of Rudy Dusek Here Tonight

Irked, to put it mildly, because he was defeated by Hank Barber the last time they tangled here, Rudy Dusek, the Nebraska Nasty Mans, has sworn to redeem himself when he clashes with Hank in a rematch at Turner's Arena tonight.

"I cahn't have dese punks shovin' me around, s' help me," insists Rudolph between sessions of chewing up nails. "It was veddy, veddy inconsistent of dat chap to presume to toss me befoah. He won't get away wid it again, de rat."

Dusek and Barber are scheduled to brup to a one-fall finish, but if they start cutitng up the way they did the last time they came together, the finsh will be disqualification instead of a fall.

Jack Hader and Joe Cox, another couple of toughies who have no love for each other, will engage in a semifinal, which is scheduled to endure 30 minutes.

In preliminary bouts, Ed Meske, the Akron Adonis, will risk his beautiful profile against Jim Cofield and Bob Russell will tackle Bill Sledge. Abie Coleman, the squat one, will oppose Ed Cook in the curtain raiser.

W.&L.'s 8-Run Rally Beats Manassas

Manassas, Va., May 5.—An eight-run, eighth-inning rally, carried the Washington and Lee High School from behind to a decisive 10-to-6 victory over Manassas here today.

On the short end of a 6-to-1 score, the Washington and Lee batsmen broke loose with the eight runs which gave them a three-run lead, then followed through with one more run in the final inning as Manassas was being held scoreless.

C.U. Track Team Beats Jackets, American U.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

In a pre-view of Saturday's Mason-Dixon Conference championship games at Baltimore, Catholic University's scarlet-clad legmen outsprinted Randolph-Macon and American University's representatives in a three-cornered meet at Brookland. The Cardinals tallied 79 points to 52 for Randolph-Macon and 23 for American.

Competing in midsummer heat, the host team romped off with 10 firsts on the 14-event program, and bolstered its commandi.g position with innumerable place points. The Yellowjackets won the four remaining events, while American was obliged to cull its points from runner-up positions.

Ed Clements, a weight man; Bob McCulloch and Fred Mix were outstanding for the victors, accounting for 30 poi.ts between them. Clements won the shot put with a heave of 42 feet, 3½ inches, and the discus with a throw of 122 feet.

McCulloch captured the quarter-mile in 52.5 seconds, and the 220-yard dash in 23.6 seconds. Mix led the field in both half mile and mile runs, negotiating the distances in 2:06.5 and 4:43.4, respectively.

Randolph-Macon was strongest in the field events, winning the javelin and high jump. Keats, the Virginians' high hurdler, won a well-deserved victory in his event, while Shrader tourned in a beautiful run to defeat Messuri, of Catholic, in a thrilling 2-mile run.

Shot put—Won by Clements (C.U.); second, Cairo (C.U.); third, Hill (A.U.); Gajewski (R.M.). Distance, 42 feet 3½ inches.

Discus—Won by Clements (C.U.); second, Hill (A.U.); third, Cairo (C.U.); fourth, Gajewski (R.M.). Distance, 122 feet.

One-mile run—Won by Mix (C.U.); second, Applegate (A.U.); third, Shrader (R.M.); fourth, McCarthy (C.U.). Time, 4:42.4.

Two-mile run—Won by Shrader (R.M.); second, Mesuri (C.U.); third, O'Neil (C.U.); fourth, Leech (A.U.). Time, 11:15.

Broad jump—Won by O'Brien (C.U.); second, Oliborges (C.U.); third, West (R.M.); fourth, Keat (R.M.). Distance, 20 feet 7 inches.

Javelin—Won by Brooks (R.M.); second, Kirby (R.M.); third, Parker (C.U.); fourth, Slaughter (C.U.). Distance, 151 feet.

High jump—Won by Morrison (R.M.); second, Forehand (R.M.); third, Goffredi (C.U.); fourth, Snow (C.U.). Height, 5 feet 6 inches.

220-yard dash—Won by McCulloch (C.U.); second, Walker (C.U.); third, McCormick (C.U.); fourth, Stone (R.M.). Time, 23.6 seconds.

880-yard run—Won by Mix (C.U.); second, Applegate (A.U.); third, Crutchfield (R.M.); fourth, Lewis (R.M.). Time, 2:06.5.

220-yard low hurdles—Won by O'Brien (C.U.); second, Keat (R.M.); third, Oliborges (C.U.); fourth, West (R.M.). Time, 27.4 seconds.

Eastern High Nine Outslugs Episcopal, 12-7

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, Va., May 5.—Aided by two lusty home runs that bounded off the bat of Kober, hard-hitting first baseman, Eastern High School's nine today pounded out a 12-7 victory over Episcopal High on Hoxton Field. The Washingtonians were outhit, 12-11, but produced their safeties at opportune times and capitalized on Episcopal errors.

Mt. Rainier Bows To Wilson Nine, 8-5

Rallying in the last four innings to overcome a one-run deficit, Woodrow Wilson High School yesterday defeated Mount Rainier, 8-5, in a well played game on the loser's diamond. Offutt, Wilson hurler, exhibited rare form, holding his opponents to five scattered hits. Dunnington led the attack with three hits in four trips to the plate.

Bucs Help Blanton Defeat Dodgers, 5-1

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, May 5.—The league-leading Pittsburgh Pirates stretched their winning streak to four today, banging out an 11-hit, 5-to-1 victory over the Dodgers behind Cy Blanton's five-hit hurling.

Starting with the opening inning, when they blasted Freddy Frankhouse from the mound with three hits before he retired a man, the Bucs took a lead they never gave up. They scored three runs in that frame, and added one each in the second and third off Harry Eisenstat.

Arky Vaughan, the 1935 batting champion, was the big gun in the attack, rattling three singles and a triple off the elbowing of Frankhouse, Eisenstat and George Jeffcoat, and bringing in two runs.

Brooklyn's only scoring was done in the first frame, when Rookie Gil Brack, hitting safely in his eleventh straight game, tripled and came home on Tom Bucher's infield out. Thereafter Blanton, winning his second game in three starts, held the Brooklyn Beauties hitless until the sixth and never gave them a chance to become troublesome.

The first inning told the story of the game. Woody Jensen opened with a single. Paul Waner, and then Johnny Dickshot and Vaughan singled in succession to send two runs across and drive Frankhouse to the showers. Gus Suhr, greeting Eisenstat, flied to send the third run across.

Paul Waner's two bagger, scoring Jensen, produced the second inning run, and in the third, Vaughan took his base after being hit by a pitched ball, was sent to third by Suhr's single, and came home on Brubaker's infield out.

Wheat Prices Rise on Sales From Canada

Market Rises, Falls and Again Rallies at Close.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 5.—Big export buying of Canadian wheat, 2,250,000 bushels or more, together with enlarged estimates of world import needs, helped put wheat values higher today.

After rushing up 2¾ cents a bushel, the wheat market here fell back on account of profit-taking, but rallied again as the day approached an end. Surprising overnight jumps of Liverpool wheat quotations, as well as talk that Germany was negotiating for a loan to purchase foodstuffs, acted at times as a stimulus toward higher prices.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ⅝ to 1¾ cents above yesterday's finish; May, 1.29¼ to 1.29⅝; July, 1.19¼ to 1.19⅝; September, 1.17½ to 1.17⅝; corn, ¾ to 1⅞ up; May, 1.32¾ to 1.32⅞; July, 1.19¼ to 1.19⅜; September, 1.09½ to 1.09⅝; oats unchanged to ⅜ advanced; May, 49⅝ to 49¾, and rye showing 1¼ to 1¾ bulge. May, 1.12⅝ to 1.12¾. The outcome in provisions was unchanged to 7 cents lower.

Bank and Insurance Stocks Dip in April

New York City bank stocks declined with the rest of the market during April, but rallied strongly at the month-end, Hoit, Rose & Troster report. As measured by the weighted average of 17 leading issues, the decline was 12 points, from 74.92 on April 1 to the month's low of 62.81 on April 28. The latter compared with the year's low of 62.33 on January 2. The list firmed up sharply, however, and closed April 30 at 66.41, a rally of almost 4 points in two days.

Insurance stocks in the New York City market yielded to pressure on general security markets during April. A new low for 1937 of 50.51 was reached by the weighted average of 20 issues on April 29, at the culmination of a 4¼ point decline since April 1.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, May 5 (AP). (U. S. Dept. Agr.)—Mills showed little interest in domestic wools in the Boston market today.

Prices of medium grade fleeces were under pressure as a result of lower prices quoted on wools from several Middle Western States. An increased volume of the country lot was offered at declining prices for lots containing combing and clothing lengths of ⅜ and ¼ blood grades packed together. Such lots from Ohio and Michigan were quoted at 42-43 cents in the grease delivered East. The brightest wools from around Springfield, Mo., were offered at 43 cents delivered. Other medium Missouri wools and bright medium Iowa wools were offered at 40 cents delivered.

Goldman, Sachs Rule Goodrich, Holder Charges

Cleveland Man's Criticism Is Contradicted by Stock Exchange Stockholder.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 5.—William H. Hunt, of Cleveland, at the annual stockholders meeting of G. F. Goodrich Co. today attacked the management, charging it was under dominance of Sidney Weinberg, partner in the New York investment making firm of Goldman, Sachs & Co. Hunt, who said he owned 1,818 common shares of Goodrich, also criticized the management of last year's meeting.

In reply to a statement read by Hunt, David Goodrich, chairman of the board, said: "I can't agree with the statement made by Hunt. I appreciate his interest in the company."

Hunt said $55,000,000 was raised from stockholders and the public from 1928 to 1930 and charged much of it was "swept away by the inexperience of the management."

Alleging a "stranglehold" of Goldman, Sachs & Co. on the company had been strengthened, Hunt said the "brokers squeeze and the profits of insiders" had amounted to "many millions of dollars."

Common stockholders have received a dividend of but 1 per cent in seven years," he added.

A stockholder who identified himself as Victor G. Paradise, a partner of the New York Stock Exchange firm of Frazier Jelke & Co., said, "As a stockholder I would like to say I am quite content with the progress made by your management." Paradise said he represented stock "in excess of 5,000 common shares and preferred stock in excess of 1,000 shares."

Weinberg, reached at his office, said: "Those charges are too silly for words. The company's record speaks for itself."

S. B. Robertson, executive vice president and director, was today elected president of the B F. Goodrich Co.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Drift Lower in Dull Trading; Bonds Steady; Wheat Higher.

New York, May 5.—Stocks lost most of their rallying power and settled down a little from sheer boredom. Sales failed to reach 1,000,000 shares and closing prices were near the day's lowest, losses of half a point covering the majority. Government bonds were firm and most commodity markets were steady. July wheat moved up 1⅜ cents to 119¼ cents a bushel. Dollars worked a trifle lower against sterling and francs.

Prices of stocks for the most part were at their best in the first trading hour. After that interest lagged and prices here and there sagged a fraction or so. Toward the close the majority of stocks were selling slightly under previous closing prices, but the changes were so gradual that the market eased off without attracting much attention.

The price range for American Telephone, a favorite of yesterday, was half a point. Steel gave up a point at its poorest and Bethlehem softened. Stock groups to move fractionally lower were the metals, motors, oils, rubber, rails, utilities, foods, tobaccos and mail orders. Exceptions to the softening process were Southern Pacific, Continental Oil, Coca-Cola and Louisville & Nashville.

Allis Chalmers softened abruptly on the report that new stock would be offered. Western Union again was rather flat. Corn Products dropped, but American Can was firm. Investment markets were steady and resumption of large-scale bond refunding made with the Southern Bell Telephone issue, encouraged the market to believe that the worst had passed in the way of fears of hardening money rates.

Year's Advance.

Both the fiscal year 1937 and the calendar year 1936, as well as the first four months of this year, have been marked by innumerable instances of profits, dividends, production and general business activity at the "highest in many years," the period in business going back seven or eight years. The President estimates that Treasury revenues for the fiscal year to end on June 30 will be the highest total in the last 16 years. It may be difficult to understand why, under these circumstances, the country continues to run up deficits of three to four billions a year.

The size of the debt per se does not seem to trouble those in authority. What they seem to fear is the effect of the credit inflation which unavoidably accompanies the manufacture of money which the Government has been and continues to spend, for the bulk of the huge increase in public debt has been built up on bank credit made available to the Treasury. The Treasury in turn has used the credit, and the use of it has been translated into an enormous pile of bank deposits, which is merely paper money awaiting a chance to circulate and influence prices.

As pointed out so ably by Tom K. Smith, president of the American Bankers Association, the banks themselves can do little to stop inflation by refusing to lend money (something which they were accused of doing and berated accordingly up to a year or so ago), for the deposits already are there and can be drawn upon to finance a terrific boom, no matter what a bank's lending policy may be. Mr. Smith might have added that the Government cannot do much to stop a boom either, now that it has made one inevitable, but it can do a great deal to make worse the one that is coming, and they are doing so each day that Treasury expenditures exceed receipts.

Prices Spiral.

Incoming orders in the steel industry, according to the Iron Age, have fallen, and the steel scrap market has weakened, but business on hand is large enough to insure a high rate of operations for some time. Railroad freight traffic for last week, it is estimated, reached a new peak for the year, gaining more than 2 per cent over the preceding week and about 16 per cent over a year ago.

Business probably won't feel heavy pressure until the rise in living costs closes up the gap between prices and wages. Until now the wage increases in many industries have widened the effective purchasing power of the worker, but costs are beginning to mount and the rise usually is rapid once it gets a good start. When real wages begin to recede, either consumption of goods will fall, or the country will go through another spell of strikes and wage lifting, probably the latter which will be accompanied and followed by another advance in prices.

Federal Funds.

One of the big Chicago banks, loaded with cash it could not use, offered Federal funds at one-quarter of 1 per cent to most of the bank's in Wall Street, but with little success, finally asking money brokers to help place the funds. Money brokers handle Federal funds only as an accommodation for clients, charging no commission. Though excess reserves here were lower than in years this afternoon, few banks were short, indicating that for once the surplus was well distributed. The Chicago offerings, supplemented by those from local banks which were still willing to take one-quarter of 1 per cent, made the ruling rate for funds at that figure and the banks which held out for one-half of 1 per cent "slept with them," as the money brokers say.

A New Wrinkle.

Several incidents have come to the attention of the larger banks which suggest that some out-of-town money was drawn lately, not to adjust reserve positions, but merely to be relent to Wall street in the form of Federal funds. To draw out money from New York, helping to make banks here so short that they will pay a price to get the money back, is a new wrinkle and a pretty good trick if it can be done. So far the success has not been scintillating. There is no reason to believe that the Federal Reserve authorities disapprove offerings of New York Federal funds by out-of-town banks or banks in other Reserve districts, for the practice, which is hardly likely to become a racket, makes for money market elasticity.

Excess Reserves.

Yesterday about $15,000,000 more money left here for the interior, compared with $25,000,000 on Monday and $30,000,000 on Saturday. This afternoon it developed that a considerable volume of the new issue of Treasury bills paid for today were for local subscribers, while a good many of the maturing issue were held out of town. This meant a draft upon reserves here and a shift of money to other districts, and it had the effect of pulling down excess reserves in this city to under $100,000,000 for the first time in many years. Tomorrow more money will be lost to the market by a Treasury call, but this probably will be offset, or more than offset, by a flow of funds here from other districts which usually occurs after the first of the month out payments have been made.

Bill Rates.

Gossip in the bill market is that a cut in yield rates may be announced tomorrow or Friday in an effort to stimulate offerings which continue to be far below demand. The possibility of such a cut was held out last week. A good deal depends upon what the Treasury intends to do about its next bill issue. It has been rumored that the Treasury may take $100,000,000 of new money on bills next week. Rates might rise, and cause acceptance dealers to stand pat at present rates.

Brokers' Loans Rise; Stock Values Fall

New York, May 5 (AP).—Total borrowings against collateral by New York Stock Exchange members increased during April, statistics released today showed. Meanwhile the average market value of all shares listed declined to $41.80 on May 1 from $45.26 on April 1, and compared with $35.74 on May 1, 1936. Borrowings against collateral by members rose to 2.06 per cent of market value on May 1 from 1.85 per cent on April 1.

The stock exchange reported that member collateral borrowings at the close of business April 30 of $1,187,279,384, an increase of $28,595,179 over the March 31 total.

Allen Praises Civic Spirit of Local Bankers

Commissioner Addresses Association at Columbia Country Club.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Praise for the co-operation of the banking profession with all civic enterprise was offered to members of the District of Columbia Bankers Association last night by District Commissioner George E. Allen, principal speaker at the annual pre-convention dinner of the association, at Columbia Country Club.

More than 250 members of the organization and distinguished guests including Federal Government and District officials, and officers of the American Bankers Association heard Commissioner Allen congratulate the bankers of the National Capital for their faithful and intelligent assistance in promoting the best interests of Washington.

The dinner has come to be regarded as an institution by members of the local banking group. First given in 1924, during the administration of Association President Victor B. Deyber, now chairman of the board of directors of Second National Bank, the event was designed to stimulate interest in the annual convention of the organization which is held shortly afterwards.

Archibald McLachlen, secretary and treasurer McLachlen Banking Corporation, who is general chairman of this year's convention committee, reviewed plans for the meeting to be held this year at the Greenbrier Hotel, White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., May 26-31. He reported an unusually large registration to date for this year's assembly and predicted a record attendance.

Thomas J. Groom, executive vice president and cashier of the Bank of Commerce & Savings, and acting president of the association, presided at the dinner, arrangements for which were made by a committee headed by Barnum L. Colton, real estate officer, National Savings & Trust Co. In the afternoon, bankers and their guests played in a golf tournament for the cup offered by Robert V. Fleming, president of Riggs National Bank and immediate past president of the American Bankers Association.

Bar Association.

The special American Bar Association committee on Problems in Securities Law held its organization meeting last evening at the Mayflower Hotel. Col. John Hinkley, of Baltimore, is chairman and other members present included Charles R. Hardin, of Newark, N. J.; William H. Hargest, president judge of the Common Pleas Court of Dauphin County, Harrisburg, Pa., and Seymour M. Heilbron, recently resigned as a securities commissioner in Pennsylvania, and now of New York.

The committee was established by the board of governors of the bar association at its annual meeting at Columbus, Ohio, in January, upon the plea of Mr. Heilbron, who urged the necessity of giving attention to this field in the law.

The meeting last night was presided over by Col. Hinkley and the committee was in full attendance with the exception of Prof. Ralph F. Fuchs, of the Washington University School of Law, St. Louis, Mo. The meeting preceded the session of the American Law Institute and was occupied in a large part with attention to the matter of a report to be made to the annual conference in September, which will be held at Kansas City, Mo.

Maryland Bankers.

Atlantic City, May 13-14, are the place and date for the annual convention of the Maryland Bankers Association, according to announcement by M. F. Reese, association secretary. President Harold G. Moulton, of the Brookings Institute, will address the meeting on "Basic Economic Trends Today." Another local speaker will be Ben Johnson, special assistant to the board of directors of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

At the opening session, Dr. Lionel D. Edie, New York economist, will discuss "The Ever-Changing Investment Problem," and G. Fred Berger, treasurer of the Norristown-Penn Trust Co., of Norristown, Pa., will speak on "Some of our Present-Day Bank Management Problems."

Associate President Howard W. Roark will preside. The largest attendance since pre-depression days is expected and the bankers will travel to the convention city on a special train. Meeting dates are so arranged that the delegates will also have the opportunity of attending the Atlantic City Horse Show.

A. I. B. Convention.

The American Institute of Banking section of the American Bankers Association will hold its convention at St. Paul, Minn, June 7-11, and the following departmental conference leaders have been announced for it: Audits and accounting, E. G. Armstrong, comptroller of the Commerce Trust Co., Kansas City, Mo.; bank management, Raymond C. Gee, vice president of the Fort Worth National Bank, Fort Worth, Tex.; bank operations, Daniel F. O'Meara, assistant vice president of the Public National Bank & Trust Co., New York; business development and advertising, Robert J. Izant, vice president of the Central National Bank of Cleveland; credits, E. L. Blaine, jr., vice president of the Peoples Bank & Trust Co., Seattle; investments and investment banking, William A. Ten Eick, jr., assistant cashier of the Chase National Bank; savings banking, Noble R. Jones, savings executive of the First National Bank of St. Louis; trust business, Louis S. Headley, vice president of the First Trust Co. of St. Paul.

Winthrop G. Batchelder, local manager, Connecticut General Life Insurance Co., and second vice president of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association, has returned from a vacation trip in the Gulf States and Florida.

Aviation Sales Exceed Total For Entire 1936

Profits Cut by Large Sums Spent for Research and Experiment.

New York, May 5.—Aviation manufacturers had unfilled orders on January 31 of approximately $100,000,000, about one-third higher than the entire 1936 sales volume of $76,805,000, according to a report today by Poor's Industry and Investment Surveys. Moreover, during the first 3½ months of 1937 business continued to come in faster than it could be filled, so that the backlog of unfilled business was increased still further.

"The immediate profits outlook, however, is still conjectural," continues the report. "With the industry still very much in the development stage, expenditures of large sums for research and experimentation continue necessary, to the detriment of manufacturers' earnings. Nevertheless, so much of the groundwork has now been done that an era of broader profit margins may not be far away.

"In the transport division striking gains were recorded during 1936, when the 390,794 revenue passenger miles flown exceeded by 45 per cent the previous record set in 1935. Express carried last year totaled 8,350,000 pounds, also a new high, and a gain of 51 per cent over 1935.

"For the first three months of 1937 two leading transport companies showed further traffic gains, while two recorded traffic losses. Aggregate revenue passenger miles, nevertheless, were some 15 per cent over a year ago. However, operating losses in the period were about $1,000,000 greater than in the same 1936 months. One explanation is that expense of operating new models was higher. Another is that lack of adequate equipment handicapped TWA competitively and led to price cuts by that line."

ROCK CREEK PARK

In the 2500 block of Massachusetts avenue, near Riverside Drive, overlooking Rock Creek Park, we are offering a charming English basement brick Town House. Set well back from the avenue, facing wide landscaped lawn.

Entrance floor has large cloak room, furnace room with oil burner, garage with private entrance, and laundry room and toilet.

First floor embraces large living room with full length French doors, dining room, butler's pantry and kitchen, equipped with frigidaire, and a large hall, ideally suited for a library or music room. A rear staircase connects with the basement, affording privacy.

The second floor comprises 3 bedrooms and 2 baths. The front chamber has three closets and private bath, with adjacent dressing room. An abundance of good closets.

The top floor has two guest bedrooms and bath; maid's room and bath, and a number of closets. A bright skylight over the staircase affords air and light in the tier of stairs.

Solidly constructed of red brick. The entire building offers spaciousness and comfort, and is ideally designed for the family who demands extra room for entertaining. Located only a few minutes from downtown, yet in one of Washington's finest uptown sections, amid fashionable residence and adjacent to embassies.

Must be sold. Being sacrificed to a responsible purchaser for $25,000.

Chiffon Stockings

by Van Raalte

No matter whether she's twenty-five or forty-five or sixty-five, hosiery's a gift that takes first place with Mother! Particularly when your choice is stockings by Van Raalte—a tribute to her good taste. Van Raalte's Myth are special favorites—because they're as practical as they are beautiful. They're sheer and clear and flattering — and they wear beautifully because they're made of high twist silk. A Mother's Day gift that every mother will appreciate.
